THE STONER AND SHROYER TOKENS

By WALDO C. MOORE, Lewisburg, Ohio

(A paper prepared for the Cincinnati Convention, 1942)

(The author has been associated with the A. N. A. since 1904 and has Life Membership No. 7. He was elected General Secretary in 1912, holding this office for four years. In 1917 and 1918 he served as a member of the Board of Governors, and was elected President the following year, serving for two terms. His chief interests have been paper and metallic exchange mediums of Ohio, his native state, and over the nearly forty years of membership has contributed many valuable articles to The Numismatist.)

There is little doubt in the minds of the many coin collectors that much interesting local history relative to the various issues of many of the Civil War coin-tokens has been lost to the public forever, since so little attention was given them during or even since their short period of circulation. Realization of these conditions is just beginning to dawn upon both the collector and the student. Practically all our Civil War folk have passed on, and along with them those energetic merchants responsible for the token issue and its circulation; therefore who is left to tell the story of each individual copperhead issue? The answer is obvious. How pathetic as one contemplates!

At the beginning of our paper the thought presents itself that ere we proceed very far with our subject we may digress and be found a-rambling. The collecting of Civil War tokens or copperheads is a most fascinating hobby. It brings joy to the collector and makes him more blithe and gay. It keeps him active, and has a tendency to make him young in both body and mind. With all this we would also add that collecting Civil War tokens is a most engaging pursuit. One interesting angle after another reveals itself as a surprise, and so the collector is carried on and on by recurring waves of inquisitiveness and enthusiasm.

It has ever been the ambition of the collector of the Civil War store-token series to bring together a complete set of the different types and varieties of the Stoner and Shroyer copperheads of Adamsville, Ohio, but up to the present all efforts have failed. All known collections, either public or private, have more or less a sprinkling or representation of these Stoner and Shroyer tokens, but no one collection is entirely complete in itself.

Adamsville, which has much to do with our paper, is a post town, situated in Salem township, Muskingum county, about ten miles northeast from Zanesville, Ohio. Henry Howe in his sketches of Ohio history as early as 1851, makes mention of Adamsville then as being a small village of not over three hundred, and having several stores and churches. George W. Hawes, a Cincinnati publisher, in his Ohio Gazetteer for 1859 and 1860, listed five general stores in operation in Adamsville as follows: E. J. Crane, D. Richardson, H. S. Roff, J. W. Stiers and William Taylor. From a reliable source word has come to the writer that Adamsville was incorporated as a village under the laws of Ohio in 1864.

The Atmosphere of Other Days

We would upon this occasion hearken back to the days of not too long ago, the days when pantalettes, hoop skirts, horsehair petticoats and Merry Widows were the fashion, the days when courting was done in the parlor and the automobile was still a thing of the future; the days of the graceful minuet with its rhythm and spirit, the days of waxed and handle-bar mustaches and faces bewhiskered—"Hoary whiskers and forked beards," as Pope expresses it; the days when the Saturday afternoon weekly shave was the tonsorial fashion unless perhaps some special announcement or happening which might necessitate an extra shave was on the program during the week; the days when nail keg and tobacco caddy seats were furnished the callers by the accommodating merchants at the country cross-roads and small town stores. For generations the stove-pipe village loiterer has cupped a hand back of an expectant ear as some one of the regular evening callers, or maybe the general store-keeper himself with weekly newspaper spread out before him on the counter, its fresh printer's ink smell adding to the conglomerated tang of limburger, blind robin, cod fish, kerosene and allspice, reads aloud the editorials and the latest happenings of the town and countryside. Should the reading session happen to be in the winter season when loafing about the old stove is most enticing, even when the snow is piling up on the street threatening to make the trip home quite difficult, not until the reading of the weekly is finished, all discussions settled by being 100 per cent accepted, does the crowd break up to drift homeward through the storm. And just such were the ways and conditions through which lived the Adamsville folk in days ago and which were typical of all other country doings in the smaller villages and cross-road towns throughout the land. Such scenes as these crowd the Halls of Memory, and so our thoughts go a-rambling on and on.

Every community has its history. Whether the inhabitants like it to be made public or not, it lurks in the background for someone to dig up. Any town has some history that it is proud of, and some that it is not so proud of. The history of each community contributes toward that of the nation. Every little community therefore has its place in the world. The further removed we become from the time and scene of action the more difficult we find any subject. And how true is this condition relative to the Adamsville Civil War coin-tokens. The actors have long since passed away and the stage as it was is no more.

(Drawing by Shafer of the Cincinnati Times-Star)

"In the winter season when loafing about the old stove is most enticing, even when the snow is piling upon the street."

According to the local real estate transfer history of Adamsville, Ohio, the store building owned by Stoner and Shroyer during the late 'sixties was built by Dr. Jared Cone in 1834. Dr. Cone sold to G. W. Shirer about 1850, and soon afterward E. J. Crane became the owner. Later L. D. Stoner became the proprietor. Stoner was soon joined by Solomon Shroyer. Then came J. W. and H. H. Garrett who were soon to be followed by Dr. Henry Decker and Sons, who later sold to J. B. Spellman in 1868. Lewis Baker became associated with Spellman, and this firm sold to Adam C. Tomlinson in 1873. This store building since its erection seems to have had somewhat of a varied trading and transfer experience. The original structure is still in use but hardly recognizable since it has been raised and restored and enlarged, so that there is little semblance to the store building of the 1860 period. It is still occupied as a store with gas pumps decorating the front, the latest addition.

From several sources the following facts relative to the life of Lyman Daniel Stoner have been gleaned. He was born in 1831 and died in 1903. His parents came to Ohio from Pennsylvania in 1806. He taught school in his early days. About 1860 he bought a store in Adamsville and a short time thereafter took in as a partner Solomon Shroyer which partnership lasted until about 1866 when he moved to Indianapolis, where he bought a shoe store; but fate decreed that he was to return to Ohio where he opened up a general store at Norwich, and served as postmaster for a number of years. In 1890, after moving from Norwich to Cambridge, he followed the grocery and meat business for some time. In his later years he was the Secretary and Treasurer of the Cambridge Brick and Tile Company. It is related that he early predicted that some day in the then not distant future the Cumberland highway, or United States Route No. 40 as it is now designated on the road map, would be made a hard surfaced thoroughfare.

A record of the life story of Solomon Shroyer seems a somewhat difficult one to follow since so few facts are obtainable. His demise occurred in 1910, we are so informed. He is accredited as having been a very industrious, energetic young man. We are informed that for weeks during his spare time, while the Civil War was being fought, he could be found in front of the store drilling boys and men. He was commissioned first lieutenant in the army. Shroyer, after disposing of his interests in the Stoner and Shroyer store at Adamsville, moved to Cambridge, Ohio.

How It Started

Late in 1861 and early in 1862 practically all United States metallic currency was withdrawn from circulation. Everyone began hoarding gold, silver, and even the copper coins. Soon business was forced to supply some means or substitute that would care for this condition and the first of any coin tokens issued on account of the shortage of the proper Government currency made their appearance in Cincinnati in 1862. New York City and Philadelphia followed this same course in the spring of 1863. These little tokens cared for the desires, filled the wants of the citizens, and were accepted as a means of exchange for the value, which usually was one cent. This practice prevailed for a few years until Uncle Sam put a stop to their issue by the passage of an Act of Congress in 1864, forbidding private individuals to issue any form of money. Stoner and Shroyer of Adamsville entered the numismatic picture in 1863 as it doth appear by issuing and circulating their little coin tokens which added, so far as is known and may be guessed at, probably sixty varieties to the series of Civil War store tokens during 1863 and 1864. As to the redemption of any of the Stoner and Shroyer coin tokens, history is silent. The redemption of the same might be the cause for their scarcity. And here again history is silent, and so we go a-rambling on.

According to the Hetrich and Gutttag work on copperheads, it doth appear that a like reverse was used for each of the various metals and for each of the different obverse varieties in the striking of the Stoner and Shroyer tokens. The inscription on the reverse appears in four lines, with an ornament between the third and fourth: Stoner & Shroyer | Dry Goods | Adamsville | (an ornament) | Ohio. Investigation shows that the entire series of the ten known obverse varieties of these Adamsville tokens were each undoubtedly struck in six different metals or combination of metals, namely: copper, brass, nickel, copper-nickel, white metal and silver. The entire series all come with plain edges. It is very noticeable that the ad on the token reads "Dry Goods." Although the firm advertised only Dry Goods on their coin token, it was, nevertheless, a general country store and bargain place, where in those days was practiced the buying and selling all kinds of merchandise, such as ready-to-wear clothing for men and boys, and various wares, groceries, cured meats, patent medicines, whisky by measure, pelts, etc. The ready-to-wear or hand-me-down suits for men and boys were quite often made of goods known as jeans, which was very heavy and therefore intended for cool weather, while a lighter weight material called seersucker was used in summer. Mr. C. A. Stoner, an attorney-at-law, writes from Missouri that he is quite sure the store was what was called a "general store," and that if one could see the ad on the side of the building that it might read: "Stoner & Shroyer, General Merchandise, Dry Goods, Groceries, Hats and Caps, Boots and Shoes, Patent Medicines, etc." It is related that Stoner and Shroyer went about the country buying up wool and trading for hides and pelts. They also made a business of packing and shipping country-cured pork. "Yes, a pair of boots would bring two big hams. Coon and 'posum hides wur traded in. Things wur 'changed for other things."

Existing Classifications

Dr. Hetrich and Gutttag in their very extensive work on the Civil War Tokens and Tradesmen's Cards use the numbers, 6400 to 6458, in cataloguing the Stoner and Shroyer token series. Nine types are listed: the Indian head, bust of Washington, bust of Lincoln, bust of Grant, the striking eagle, cannons and flags, bust of Franklin, bust of Garfield, and bust of Greeley. The bust of Horatio Seymour in connection with the Adamsville tokens has been mentioned by several of our correspondents, but somehow we have not met with any success in locating any of this type at the time of coming to the Convention. The list by Hetrich and Gutttag fails to make mention of the bust of Seymour type which undoubtedly has come to light since 1924, the year of their publication. Should the bust of Seymour type (?) be extant and be given numbers according to this great work, they would probably at this time be given the fill-in numbers of 6458a to 4658f. Other fill-in numbers may be necessary in the future should any further finds be made. We have been informed that thick planchets are extant and some would have the numismatist believe that these constitute other varieties. If such be the case, then there would have to be more fill-in numbers to care for the same, and so mote it be. Is there any assurance, may we ask, or who is so wise to predict, that other types of the Stoner and Shroyer tokens may yet be in hiding and at some future date come to light?

The most common type of all the copperhead tokens is the Indian head. Hetrich and Gutttag in their publication of Civil War tokens place the Indian head type first in their list among the Stoner and Shroyer output of coin tokens, and so we follow their procedure in this respect. These Indian head type varieties are listed as numbers 6400 to 6405 in the above mentioned work, and catalogued as type 80. Of these numbers, number 6400, the copper token, seems far the most common of all the Stoner and Shroyer tokens, and yet this small medal in copper is considered rather scarce. The Indian head faces the left, seven stars in front and six behind. The token is dated 1864. This copper token, number 6400, is to be found in practically all Civil War Store Token collections, both public and private. The writer wishes to state that Mrs. S. M. Leeper of New Concord, Ohio, and Mrs. Charles B. McDougal of New Lexington, Ohio, grand-daughters of Lyman Daniel Stoner, each have in their possession one of the Indian head copper tokens which they prize most highly. Also Mrs. U. C. Purdum of Cambridge, Ohio, daughter of Solomon Shroyer, has one of the Indian head copper pieces among her cherished and treasured keepsakes. None of these parties when interviewed knew anything of any other varieties of the Stoner and Shroyer tokens.

On the feather band across the forehead of the Indian one can decipher plainly the inscription "KEY PHILA." The engravers' identification mark, "KEYS," appears in exergue in small capitals very near the lower edge of the bust of Grant, and likewise very near the bust of the Greeley variety. No identification marks are noticeable on any of the varieties of the Stoner and Shroyer tokens other than those above mentioned. The following may be gleaned from the Philadelphia city directories of 1857 to 1864 inclusive: "Key, Frederick C., die sinker, 329 Arch." Also from the same source the following may be found: "Key, F. C. & Son, (Frederick C. & William H.), die sinkers, 329 Arch." W. S. Baker in "Medallie Portraits of Washington" credits the Keys with having engraved a number of the various medals on which is portrayed the likeness of Washington. In the 1889 revised edition of the illustrated "History of the United States Mint," by George G. Evans, we find that William H. Key, a native of Brooklyn, was appointed an assistant in 1864 to James B. Longacre, then United States mint engraver. He also served as assistant under both William Barber and Charles E. Barber, mint engravers. David McNeely Stauffer in his "American Engravers Upon Copper and Steel," published in 1907, states that William H. Key was born in Brooklyn, New York; was living in 1892. From 1864 to 1892, and possibly later, Key was an assistant engraver at the Philadelphia mint. He engraved the dies for the Kane Arctic Expedition medal. From the foregoing one would therefore naturally conclude that the Stoner and Shroyer store coin tokens were the product of the Keys, engravers and die sinkers of Philadelphia.

In "Medallic Portraits of Washington," published by W. S. Baker in 1885, there is listed but one Stoner and Shroyer store token of the Washington variety, and that is in brass. Bust of Washington in civil dress, three-quarters face to the left. Legend: "Born Feb. 22, 1732. Died Dec. 14, 1799." This same obverse has been struck with a number of reverses of other medals. Mason and Company, coin and stamp dealers of Philadelphia, used this same obverse on their tokens of 1870. These dies were destroyed prior to 1884, so reported. All the Stoner and Shroyer tokens were unquestionably struck during the Civil War period and not subsequent to it. With the exception of perhaps the Indian head copper pieces there never could have been any large quantity of the different varieties struck at any time. Undoubtedly the mintages of the different varieties were very limited since few or none has come to light. One authority states that these tokens have the appearance of some of those rare trial pieces which were restruck from old dies of pre-war days. The Hetrich and Gutttag work lists the Washington varieties as type 95, and numbers them 6406 to 6411.

During his young manhood, President Lincoln opened a country store and was postmaster at New Salem, Illinois. The events of the Civil War during his presidential career belong to the history of the United States. The Stoner and Shroyer firm thought well to use his likeness on their store tokens. The obverse of some of their tokens pictures a clothed, bearded bust of Lincoln facing right. Legend: "Abraham Lincoln, 1864." Undoubtedly the Stoner and Shroyer varieties of store tokens picturing President Lincoln were unknown to the compiler, Robert P. King, at the time of his publications of "Lincoln in Numismatics" in 1924 and again in 1927, since no mention was made of them. The Hetrich and Gutttag catalogue numbers this series 6413 to 6419, and lists same as type 104.

President U. S. Grant was born at Point Pleasant, Ohio, which is almost within a stone's throw from Cincinnati. General Grant served through both the Mexican and the Civil War. His administration as President allayed the soreness which still survived from the great struggle between the states. The obverse of this type of Stoner and Shroyer token has the bust of Grant facing to the left. Hetrich and Gutttag give the numbers 6420 to 6428 to the bust of Grant, type 113. No date appears on this coin token. To lower right of bust, in small letters, appears the name "Keys" who were the engravers.

In The Coin Collector's Journal for April, 1883, Scott and Company lists but two of the Stoner and Shroyer tokens—one each of the striking eagle and the Indian head types. The metal is not given. The first listed is the variety showing an eagle turning to strike, thirteen stars above, and according to the date, 1863, would appear to have been the first issue circulated by Stoner and Shroyer. Hetrich and Gutttag give the numbers 6429 to 6432 to these Stoner and Shroyer token varieties and list same as type 211.

The obverse of the Stoner and Shroyer tokens showing cannons and flags is dated 1864. The varieties under the Hetrich and Gutttag listings are given the numbers 6433 to 6439, and designated as type 263.

EAGLE*FLAGS AND CANNONS*FRANKLIN*REVERSE
COMMON TO ALL

The Stoner and Shroyer store tokens picturing the bust of Benjamin Franklin with the celebrated Bale head in a fur cap are considered among the rarest of the Civil War tokens, as well as among the rarest of any and all Franklin tokens and medals. The obverse has the bust of Franklin to left, wearing a Quaker coat and his famous cap, and with long curls hanging over his shoulder. Franklin was highly talented. A great philosopher was he, and his name will endure for ages. With Washington and Lincoln, Franklin ranks as one of the three greatest and ablest men the United States has yet produced, in the opinion of many students. Hetrich and Gutttag in their publication of 1924 number the Franklin varieties 6440 to 6445, and list same as the Bust of Franklin type without numbering. No date appears on the token.

President James A. Garfield was an American general. He sat in nine congresses for the same constituency. In 1880 he was elected to the Senate, and in the same year was elected President of the United States. Hetrich and Gutttag give the Bust of Garfield type the numbers 6446 to 6451. May we here state that we are indeed quite restless and greatly disturbed and are very sorry to have to disappoint our fellow numismatists at this time because of our failure to locate any of the Stoner and Shroyer tokens of the Garfield type before coming to the convention. Since neither an example of the Garfield variety is here pictured nor any descriptive account of same was available, this missing link in our paper is somewhat distressing. It has been hinted that the Garfield card of Adamsville, Ohio, appears full face.

The Log Cabin, a weekly paper established by Horace Greeley in 1840, and the Daily Tribune, founded in 1841, gave him a reputation as an editor of marked ability. He was a strong supporter of the Union and of President Lincoln. He opposed President Grant for a second term in 1872. The Bust of Greeley type of the Stoner and Shroyer tokens is represented by the numbers 6452 to 6458 in the Hetrich and Gutttag cataloguing. No date appears on the token. It is catalogued as type 497. In small letters to lower left of bust appears the name "Keys," engravers of these coin-tokens.

Horatio Seymour was governor of New York state from 1861 to 1865. At the outbreak of the Civil War he was decidedly in favor of the supremacy of the constitution, and a governor showed conspicuous ability. In 1868 he was a candidate for the presidency opposing General Grant. As heretofore stated, the bust of Seymour type of the Stoner and Shroyer tokens missed mention in the Hetrich and Gutttag work, and therefore take the Hetrich and Gutttag fill-in numbers of 6458a to 6458f. Any description of this type at present will remain unwritten and unpublished.

Several correspondents have written mentioning a type, the bust of Seymour, belonging to the Stoner and Shroyer series. The writer is a little skeptical and is somewhat inclined to doubt the existence of a Seymour type of this series, although the same may be extant. Many strange things turn up occasionally.

The more one investigates the Stoner and Shroyer copperhead issues, the more puzzling becomes the solution of this most interesting series, and lost is the investigator as it were in a mist of uncertainties; so thinks the writer. Upon the surface of things it doth appear that since there are so few of each type extant at present, excepting perhaps the Indian head in copper, there may have been some mulings in this respective series. Our surmise is that there were struck only a few each of all the coin-tokens of Stoner and Shroyer, therefore their great scarcity. It may be just possible that mule strikings were made up in Philadelphia or elsewhere at mayhap some later date, as has been earlier hinted, but the writer holds to the opinion that such a suggestion is out of order, and idle thought, just a guess, an empty dream. The writer thinks that the Keys were wholly responsible for the entire output of the Stoner and Shroyer tokens. If it were possible that any one of the characters represented on the tokens could but speak, the mystery would soon be solved. And so still a-rambling do we go.

So far back as 1875, and then again in 1883, the Coin Collector's Journal, published by Scott & Company, accounted for but two varieties of the Adamsville, Ohio, coin tokens. We recall the auction catalogue issued by Ben G. Green in July, 1912, describing the Charles Morris collection, in which several of the Adamsville tokens were offered to the public. Edgar H. Adams, in his list of Civil War Tradesmen's Tokens of Ohio, published in the Coin & Medal Bulletin for April of 1916, accounted for seventeen types and varieties of this interesting token. Dr. Hetrich and Julius Gutttag in their very extensive volume in 1924 announced thirty-two types and varieties of said coin token. Joseph Barnett in his accounting as published in the November, 1932, Numismatist lists thirty-five. According to latest reports several finds have recently been made which increase the number. The writer, after considerable investigation and checking, is of the opinion that there were originally at least sixty types and varieties of the Adamsville Stoner and Shroyer tokens struck for circulation. Should the difference in the thickness of planchets be taken into consideration the number may be somewhat increased. And so we conclude that according to the latest published works on the Civil War Store Tokens, together with the additional information which our correspondence has recently brought to light, it is quite possible that forty some varieties and types of the Stoner and Shroyer, Adamsville, Ohio, tokens can be produced or accounted for at the present time. Let the good work continue. The writer would appreciate a letter from every collector of Civil War Store Tokens giving therein a list of the Adamsville tokens held, together with any duplicates of same. And so might we go a-rambling on.

The listings hereto attached, although somewhat limited, have been gained principally through correspondence. The numbers given are according to the Hetrich and Gutttag tabulation in so far as reported to the writer to be in public and private collections at present. Naturally there are more collections extant than those here mentioned.

Julius Gutttag:

Doubtless the Gutttag collection of Stoner and Shroyer tokens is the nearest or one of the nearest to completion of any extant, and since said collection was reported to be in storage and not easily accessible when inquiry was made, the writer was greatly disappointed and mentally distressed in so far that the said collection could not be checked. A check-up of the same will therefore have to go unwritten at this time. Doubtless all varieties and types of the Adamsville tokens are represented in the Gutttag collection, with perhaps the exception of those of Horatio Seymour should such exist.

In conclusion we wish to state that the task of gathering up the fragments for this paper has been a pleasant one. Evidences of interest have been unselfishly and variously shown, and to those who have so kindly aided we express sincere and lasting thanks.

COIN COLLECTING AS A HOBBY AND INVESTMENT

By BRAD MILLS, Dallas, Texas

Mr. Mills is a member of the Dallas Coin Club (to which this paper was read at a recent meeting) and of the A. N. A. He is Executive Secretary of the American Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors, with headquarters at Dallas.

Few hobbies offer the investment possibilities found in the collecting of coins. Mere mention of the word "hobby" usually is associated with luxury or diversions that offer poor investment features.

Select any ten coin collectors at random and you will find that each person had a different reason for starting the hobby. One became interested when a few old coins were given to him; another was intrigued by a few obsolete coins he had never before seen; another read a juicy advertisement on how to make a fortune in coins; another felt it would help occupy his mind, and still another really sensed the investment possibilities afforded. Scramble them all together and you have a composite of Mr. Average Collector.

There is no substitute for experience in the collection of coins. Every collector can remember when he paid an excessive price for an obsolete coin, simply because he wanted it and thought another would not be available. It is only by rubbing elbows with mistakes and miscalculations that we can learn to recognize values and derive the most from a hobby standpoint.

As the coin collector goes along he slowly realizes that he must exercise both common sense and caution while adding to his collection. When a beautiful, rare coin is offered to us it is very hard to pass it up, although we feel the price may be a little high. In the average run of medium rarities it might be well to realize that such coins are like street cars—another one will come along.

The eager hobbyist who builds his collection too rapidly is likely to sacrifice sound investment features. In his eagerness to complete a "run" or to obtain a maximum number of rarities in short order, he may purchase many coins above the average market.

When a coin, or a series of coins is rapidly advancing, the tendency is to jump in and purchase somewhere near the top. We do this in an effort to supply our needs before prices advance still further. Unless we are dealing with rarities, a marked reaction may take place, and we find our investment is not so good after all.

The serious hobbyist soon learns that the buying and selling of coins at correct prices are essential to the investment phase of this diversion. He will do well to look over his collection from time to time and take stock of the prices paid and of current values. In this way he can capitalize on whatever mistakes he has made, both in price and in series.

Diversification is the very heart of coin collecting, unless one particular series you happen to concentrate on becomes a best-seller. In carefully checking back over ten or twelve different series, records will show that five or six have about held their own in value, three or four have declined sharply, and three or four have advanced materially. The average for all of these lots over a ten- or twenty-year period will take care of the collector who used judgment in his original selections.

A close study of prices realized for large private coin collections at auction sales discloses many interesting trends in coin values. In a typical collection built up over a fifty-year period, many items bring four times their original cost, while others sell for considerably less than their cost of twenty or thirty years ago. This is often true, although the entire collection may bring twice as much as it cost. These contrasting fluctuations prove that it is difficult to choose consistently only those coins that will steadily enhance in value.

To be more specific, it would be well to observe that large United States cents, some of the old half dollars, and many of the early medium rarities are selling for no more than they brought 40 years ago. On the other hand, many of the more recent rarities are commanding two and three times as much as they brought even ten years ago. These contrasts indicate that the average hobbyist should use as much balance as possible in the selection of his collection.

In buying ordinary coins simply for the sake of having them in a collection, the collector should purchase them as near face value as possible. Of course, the reason for this is obvious, since any United States coin or bill certainly will bring its face value. This does not mean that uncirculated coins of even recent dates should not command a substantial premium above face, but it does mean that the purchase of large quantities of cents, nickels and dimes at excessive prices is seldom warranted where coinage of such dates was large.

From a pure investment standpoint coin collecting is one of the best of all hobbies. Any coin collection bought carefully over a twenty-year period should guarantee the collector from 80 to 150 per cent of his original investment. Many items may depreciate slightly in value, but other items will more than make up for the deficit.

The experienced collector recognizes that he may not be able to realize his full purchase price in case he is forced to sell coins recently acquired. If his coins were purchased at the right prices, however, he should expect to receive from 75 to 95 per cent of his original purchase price. Where coins are sold a few years after their purchase, the hobbyist may realize even more than his original purchase price through natural appreciation.

The Simon-pure collector who takes the hobby very seriously often makes price a secondary consideration. This is the serious minded person who usually goes in for the greater rarities and elaborate types available. In spite of his desire to obtain coins at any cost, this type of collector often comes out on top, because of his natural desire to obtain only fine or rare items. Seemingly exorbitant prices paid today for very rare coins may prove to be the modest prices of tomorrow.

The dealer plays an important part in the coin collecting experience of any hobbyist, and it is well for the collector to know and do business with responsible dealers. Any reliable dealer will be fair with the coin collector, and necessarily has a much greater knowledge of coins than the average hobbyist. Most of the dealers were at the beginning ordinary collectors, and they know both sides of the picture.

Not one collector in ten gives enough time to numismatic literature. The greatest enjoyment is derived from any hobby through a genuine knowledge and appreciation of it. The collector should not only know the values of various coins, but he should also know something of their history and significance. Many of our coins, particularly the commemorative series, are rich in historical background. It is only through an actual study of the various series that the greatest enjoyment can be derived from coin collecting as a hobby.

The enjoyment angle of coin collecting certainly should be as important as the desire to keep the collection on a self-sustaining basis. As the collector becomes older and more experienced, he also should become more critical and more appreciative.

It is much better to start collecting in a modest way than to rush headlong into the hobby, even though the beginner has a large amount of money available. By easing into this diversion it is simple for the amateur to learn as he goes along. The person who suddenly becomes interested in coins as a hobby certainly should not attempt to corner the market because he has a nice amount of ready cash on hand.

It is well to study the action of the coin market during the last depression. Prices did slump sharply between 1930 and 1935, but they held up much better than real estate, diamond and miscellaneous art values.

Tastes differ so much among coin collectors that it is impossible to offer any set plan for a collection of coins. One person will become greatly attached to coins of a certain series, while another person will follow along an entirely different line of thought.

For some mysterious reason, the tastes and desires of every collector change from time to time. In the beginning he will enthuse over gold dollars, old half dollars and three dollar gold pieces. He simply cannot get enough of them. In a few years he gets more finicky and the old half dollars lose their charm. He wants finer and rarer materials, and starts talking of Stellas and uncirculated rarities. He jumps from one series to another, all the while becoming more critical with his increased knowledge of coins. Perhaps he tires of the same old faces.

The collector who tries to get as many types as possible seems to derive more enjoyment from the hobby than the collector who has a mania for obtaining every date in any one series. The United States $3.00 gold series is a notable example of one lacking variety. All three dollar gold pieces were minted from similar dies, and this fact probably accounts for the low selling prices of several medium rare dates.

One collector I know who seems to derive greatest enjoyment from this hobby has type sets in almost every United States series, plus every odd or unusual coin he can get from all over the world. He has fractional currency and the large United States currency of almost every type. For the past twenty years he has been obtaining directly from the mints or from Federal Reserve banks every new silver, nickel and bronze coin for each year. Many of these small coins are now worth several times their face value, particularly in the case of uncirculated cents, nickels and dimes.

The collector who observes the rules of fair play, attempts to balance his interests between hobby and investment instincts, and tries to learn more each year about coins is the true lamp-bearer who will do much to perpetuate the hobby.

SEVERAL RECENT ADDITIONS TO THE LIBRARY

By TED R. HAMMER, A. N. A. Librarian and Curator

(This will be a monthly feature by Mr. Hammer, and the attention of collectors who study their coins is especially directed thereto.)

Several recent additions were made to the American Numismatic Association library, and some of the new works will be in demand at once. These additions include (the letter and number preceding each work is the number of the book and should be used in ordering):

- A-67—"A Short History of Coins and Currency," by Lord Avebury.
- B-64—"Historical Sketch of Continental Paper Money," by Samuel Breck.
- B-65—"The Bishop Bonaventure F. Broderick Collection of Ancient Coins," (catalogued by Frederick S. Knobloch).
- H-45—"Price Catalogue of Andrews Varieties of U. S. Large Cents, by Lee Hewitt.
- H-46—"Common Greek Coins" (Vol. I), by Rev. A. W. Hands.
- U-18—"Guide to the Numismatic Collection in U. S. Mint."
- V-6—"U. S. $3 Gold, Large U. S. Cents, U. S. Half Cents, Bronze 2-cent Pieces," by Theodore J. Venn.
- Y-4—"Handbook of United States Coins, With Premium List," R. S. Yeoman et al.

Published in 1902, the Lord Avebury book, although containing less than 140 small pages of reading matter, is an excellent work for the beginner, and also for the advanced collector wanting information on the origin of money, with particular reference to English and Scotch coins. This small book contains 125 illustrations. There is a section devoted to weights of coins and to bank notes and banking.

B-64 is a 33-page booklet published in 1863, but containing valuable history on continental currency, a much needed work. We are looking for a similar work on colonial notes to bind with this one, with a price list of the notes.

You can read the Bishop Broderick collection catalogue during your noon hour—and stay up several evenings past the late short wave programs digesting it. Bishop Broderick, vicar of religion in the archdiocese of New York, gave his collection of ancients to Manhattan College just a year ago. William Clarke, assistant curator of the American Numismatic Society, persuaded Frederick S. Knobloch, Fellow of the Society, to catalogue the collection. Before the cataloguing started the coins were cleaned. This process is described briefly in a preface by Brother Albert Paul, F. S. C., curator.

Clarence Griffin, of Spindale, North Carolina, has compressed a lot of invaluable information into 14 pages for his interesting work on Bechtlers and Bechtler coinage. Mr. Griffin was Rutherford County historian. A short similar article by the author appeared in THE NUMISMATIST in September, 1929, and in some North Carolina newspapers the same year—but this sketch includes material which he uncovered later. Griffin, once at his task, wasted no time on preliminaries: “At one time, Rutherford County and Rutherford were the center of the gold producing area of the United States,” he says in the first sentence. And in the same breath you get the beginning of the Bechtler history. Bechtler coins are illustrated in this work.

The booklet H-45 gives up-to-date prices on Andrews large cent varieties. Many borrowers probably will want the Andrews work (A-19) at the same time.

“Common Greek Coins” was written, we have an idea, with the thought in mind that some non-collectors of ancients were going to read it. Here is no mere statistical-factual book, but an authoritative volume of 170 pages, with two additional pages devoted to an index. In the preface by Dr. Barclay V. Head, the latter states that Mr. Hands’ manuscript was prepared to awaken an intelligent interest among collectors of modern means in the commoner series of coins. It should more than accomplish this. The illustrations, we are glad to say, are scattered through the book rather than appearing in plates all in one section. Probably it’s a work every collector interested in these coins should have in his own library, and we predict it will be a popular library number. Every few days we get a letter from a member who, on returning a book, tells us he was so pleased with it he wants to buy a copy for himself. And when we are able to give him an idea as to how much it should cost and where to look for it, we’re glad to do so.

The Philadelphia mint collection guide was not added to the library for readers wanting to know what is in the collection, but for the information about those coins to be found therein. It covers a wide field from ancient to modern pieces, including many American colonials, patterns, medals, and others.

Mr. Venn’s book really is a single volume containing four previously published monographs on three-dollar gold pieces, large cents, half-cents and two-cent pieces, respectively. The first three are preceded by “facts for collectors,” information which everyone should read and remember. Mr. Venn, in addition to taking up the history and background of the coins, describes them year by year. Three of the 71 pages are devoted to an interesting description of terms ranging from proof to “poor and very poor.”

Richard S. Yeoman, Lee F. Hewitt and Charles E. Green have published, through the Whitman Publishing Company of Racine, Wisconsin, the second edition of their handbook, which contains much information of value to collectors—especially beginners—together with a premium list. Among its numerous valuable features is a millimetre scale and photographs of coins showing where to look for mintmarks, explaining different types, varieties, etc. This feature alone should make the book worth the price. For instance, there’s a greatly enlarged Indian cent of 1864, showing the location of the L on the ribbon of the headdress. The 1943 book has more cuts than the first edition, and, incidentally, there has been a definite improvement in the quality of these, as photographs were used throughout, rather than drawings. Several changes were made in the coin premium section. We wish every public library, bank teller, coin club, Y. M. C. A. and Boy Scout room had a copy of this book.

THE MOST FAMOUS LINCOLN CENT

By R. S. YEOMAN, Racine, Wisconsin

The year 1909 was unusual in the history of our cents in that there were six different mint varieties for the year. We have the Indian head type for Philadelphia and San Francisco; the Lincoln head type with VDB from each; and the same without the initials from both mints.

The most popular mint variety of the year, as all coin collectors know, is the 1909-S VDB cent. However, not every collector is familiar with the story behind this issue.

The Lincoln cent was the first regular issue coin to bear a recognized portrait. Likewise in this issue we see the motto "In God We Trust" for the first time on a one-cent piece.

Lincoln's portrait was at first proposed as a commemorative coin, 1909 being the centennial of the great emancipator's birth. A commemorative postage stamp honoring Lincoln was issued in 1909, and coin collectors favored a similar expression on a coin which would see general circulation rather than a limited coinage at a premium.

President Theodore Roosevelt became friendly with Victor D. Brenner while he was sitting for his portrait for use on the Roosevelt-Panama Medal.

Roosevelt at this time was shown and greatly admired the design Brenner had made for the Lincoln plaque.

The Lincoln head design so impressed the President that he recommended to Secretary of the Treasury McVeagh that the design be used on a popular coin.

President Taft who succeeded Roosevelt was responsible for the inclusion of the motto "In God We Trust." Roosevelt had a strong dislike for religious mottoes on coins.

Brenner was soon commissioned to model a cent with the head of Lincoln. In his own words, speaking of the new Lincoln head design for the cent, Mr. Brenner stated, "... this one is more intimate, deeper, more kind and personal."

In response to a query as to why he modeled for a cent, Mr. Brenner said:

"You see, the life of a coin is twenty-five years, according to law, and the time for the cent and the five-cent piece has expired. It seemed to me that the nickel had already had a very practical design and so I turned my attention to what would be most fitting for the one-cent coin. Naturally, the portrait of Lincoln suggested itself, this being his centennial, and besides, I was going to make an anniversary medal for my friends, and my mind was full of Lincoln."

Victor D. Brenner was born in Shaveli, Russia, in 1871. Lithuania has also been claimed as his native country. At 13 he began work with his father, a stone-cutter and engraver of seals. He left home three years later to take up his trade, the engraving of jewelry. Later he became interested in sculpture, an endeavor which took him to a number of Russian cities. He left Russia at the age of 19 and sailed for America, where he attended various art schools, studying mostly at night. He went to Paris in 1898 to further his studies under several famous sculptors.

He came back to New York after a year of travel on the continent and opened a studio. He returned to France in 1904 to study under Roty, later exhibiting in Paris, London, Berlin and other cities, and was awarded many medals. He returned to New York in 1906.

Among the medals which brought him fame in numismatic fields were the Lincoln medal, the Roosevelt-Panama medal, the Wright Brothers; and there were others. He was considered one of the foremost sculptor-medalists of his time.

The model of the Lincoln cent bore the designer's name, BRENNER, on the reverse. The dies were cut by Henry Weil of New York, and the initials were substituted for the name.

Over 25,000,000 cents were produced at the Philadelphia Mint before any were released to the general public. The anxiously awaited issue was finally sent out from the mint on August 2, 1909. The advance demand at the mint was greater than for any previous coin issue. The calls for the coin were so great in Philadelphia that only a limited number were offered to each individual; at the mint two only to a customer and at the sub-treasury one hundred was the limit. Newsboys and others sold them at two for five cents during those first days of circulation.

No new coin type ever engaged the attention of the public, through editorial references and news articles in the press, as did the Lincoln cent. Favorable comment on the coin appeared in the first days' papers, but only a few days went by before criticism developed. About everything possible was said to denounce the coin. There was one objection that received prominent attention—to the presence of the designer's initials. It was claimed these were a little too prominent to be in good taste. This was brought to the attention of the Secretary of the Treasury, who ordered coinage stopped.

Coinage at the San Francisco Mint, meanwhile, had just commenced when the order was received to stop the VDB issue. Only 484,000 pieces with the S and VDB designation were struck. This circumstance served to establish one of the most popular issues of modern cents—the scarce, widely publicized 1909-S VDB about which we have all heard a great deal.

Because the demand for the new Lincoln cents was very great, no time was allowed for compromise on the change in size of the initials. They were simply removed, and coinage was resumed within a few days.

Now new protests were heard concerning the removal of the initials. An identifying mark was considered by many to be an artist's just reward.

Designers' marks on coin types, it was pointed out, is as old as art in metal. Many examples were brought forth in discussions to prove the point such as J.B.L. for J. B. Longacre on the $20 gold piece; the M on the 1878 dollar for Morgan; and B for Barber on the silver coins.

Numismatists and prominent citizens generally considered the removal of the designer's initials a great injustice. BRENNER not V.D.B. was to have appeared on the coin but the artist was too modest to protest when the change was made.

When Mr. Brenner wrote in response to a letter from Farran Zerbe, a well known numismatist, he said in part:

"Much fume has been made about my initials as a means of advertisement; such is not the case. The very talk the initials has brought out has done more good for Numismatics than it could do me personally . . . The original design had BRENNER on it, and that was changed to the initials. Of course the issue rests with the Numismatic bodies. . . ."

The injustice of the omission was finally recognized in 1918 and the initials were restored inconspicuously at the truncation of Lincoln's shoulder. Many collectors are unaware that the VDB is on our present issues of cents but the letters are so tiny that a magnifying glass must be used to see them properly.

Victor D. Brenner died in his 53rd year, April 25, 1924.

DEATHS

JOHN EDWIN MORSE

From General Secretary Sheldon comes the following: "It is with much sorrow this office finds it necessary to report the death of John Edwin Morse, Charter Member No. 20, Revised Regular No. 10, and Life No. 64, of Hadley, Massachusetts, on November 23. There is little this office can report concerning the activities of Mr. Morse from the records, since very little is shown; but he was very well known by the former Secretary, Mr. Harry T. Wilson.

"Mr. Morse had been in failing health for a number of years, and had reached the ripe age of eighty. The funeral was held at the Newell Funeral Home, Northampton, Massachusetts. News of his death reached this office much too late to permit sending flowers or any other form of condolence to the family. With the passing of Mr. Morse there are now living only four of the original sixty-nine Charter Members."

RUDOLPH KARL

On November 2 occurred the death of Rudolph Karl, 74, of Litchfield, Conn., following a brief heart attack.

Mr. Karl was born in New York City, coming to Litchfield with his parents in 1880. After finishing high school he became a clerk in the post office, later serving as assistant to five postmasters; for nine years he was engaged in the railway mail service, and from 1910 to 1915 was postmaster at Litchfield, subsequently being associated with his brothers in a photographic studio.

In 1925 Mr. Karl was elected town clerk, holding this position for 16 years. More recently he became a member of the board of burgesses of Litchfield, serving for four years.

He was admitted as a member of the Association on April 1, 1941, his number being 8438. The notification came from Will W. Clarke, A. N. A. No. 6234, an old friend.

A CORRECTION

The name of M. A. Powills of Chicago was omitted from the list of those in attendance at the Cincinnati convention of the A. N. A. Mr. Powills was present and signed with the local committee, but overlooked signing the official register—hence the omission in the convention report.

LOOKING BACKWARD

Our official magazine of today bears little resemblance to the first number issued in the autumn of 1888—a four page leaflet bearing the title of “The American Numismatist” (“American” was omitted thereafter); but the old saying about tall oaks being the direct descendants of little acorns was never more true, metaphorically, than in our own case.

The history of the magazine and of the A. N. A. has been presented at various times; but of necessity many details relating to the contents of THE NUMISMATIST over this long stretch of years—many of them of extreme interest—could not be given a place in the history of the organization. Nor do many members possess any considerable file of the magazine to which they could refer.

It is proposed to give a page or two each month to brief glimpses of numismatic incidents and comments which were recorded therein from twenty-five years to a half-century ago, in the belief that at least the older portion of our membership will relish these reminders of things forgotten or, perhaps, missed entirely; and we commend these paragraphs to our newer members also, for they may be drawn closer to the Association through a greater familiarity with its early days.

This Month—

FIFTY YEARS AGO

The magazine had by this time—January, 1893—grown to a 16-page dignity, and Dr. Heath is cheerful and resolute: “THE NUMISMATIST once again greets its readers with a ‘Happy New Year,’ and proposes to do its part better than ever to make it pleasant for you. Keep your eyes on THE NUMISMATIST.” Among other items, the number contains an interesting sketch of P. N. Breton, a well known authority on Canadian coins. The A. N. A. Treasurer’s report showed a balance on hand December 31st of $70.59. A New Hampshire collector offered to exchange “a forty dollar banjo, nearly new, a collection of stamps catalogued $38.91 in a new five-dollar album” for cash or coins. And an unidentified critic (Dr. Heath?) pays his respects to a collection of Swedish plate money, as follows:

“Gustavus Steinberg, a Swedish coin dealer, recently received through the Custom House, a collection of exceedingly unique [!] coins, which it is proposed to exhibit at the World’s Fair. The coins came from Sweden, where they circulated in the sixteenth century. They bear more resemblance to pieces of boiler iron after an explosion than to money.

“The coins are great flat pieces of copper, cut into very poor squares. The smallest coin is four inches square, and worth thirty cents, and the largest over a foot square, and with a face value of over four dollars. Each slab of copper is stamped in several places with an inscription giving its date of issue and its denomination. The largest weighed over four pounds.

"These enormous and cumbersome coins were the result of an absurd craze which prevailed several hundred years ago regarding the exclusive use of copper for money. It carried the coinage of copper to absurd lengths, and the people discarded its use. In those days of copper coinage wealthy ladies were compelled to hire an attendant to accompany them to carry a basket full of the coppers while shopping."

(He could not know that no less than a dozen items and articles of various lengths dealing with Swedish plate money would appear in THE NUMISMATIST in after years.)

Many caustic comments were quoted, aimed at the then new Columbian half dollar. The Boston Globe observed that "The first view of the new Columbian souvenir coin inevitably leads to an expression of regret that Columbus wasn't a better looking man." The New York Press grows facetious in its appraisal: "The new Columbian souvenir half dollar doesn't strike the eye of all the critics as being an artistic success. Our own idea, however, is that it will pass." The Philadelphia Ledger is not pleased: "If it were not known in advance whose vignette adorns the Columbian souvenir half dollar, the average observer would be undecided as to whether it is intended to represent Daniel Webster or Henry Ward Beecher." And so on. Well, these critics were spared the sight of some of our present day commemoratives.

FORTY YEARS AGO

A list of the contributors throughout the year of 1903 (Vol. XVI) contains many names of nationally known numismatists, some of whom had been or were to become Presidents of the Association: besides that of Dr. Heath, we find the names of A. G. Heaton, Dr. B. P. Wright, A. R. Frey and Farran Zerbe.

In the January number Dr. Wright continues his extensive series of articles on "Unusual Numismatic Specimens," this time dealing with "Some English Jacobins."

The report of President Wright contains certain statements, especially interesting in their contrast with present conditions in the A. N. A.:

"The year that has just passed has been one of substantial gain. 111 new members have joined our ranks. Seven have resigned and two have been suspended during the year. At the beginning of the year we had nominally 348 members, which with those we have added, give us 450 to date . . . From reports received concerning this [the Library] department, it appears evident that but little use is made of it by our members. Mr. Stevens, our Librarian, has performed the duties of his office in a most creditable manner, and he has obtained quite a number of books relating to our science."

H. E. Morey, the Boston dealer, was reported to have held his latest monthly sale on Christmas night—but no results were given, nor was any clue to the reason for selecting—of all things!—this date for a sale.

An 1804 dollar is offered on the Exchange page by an individual in Delaware, Ohio; price $1,000, coin declared genuine!

Speaking of dealers, among the advertisers in this issue appear several whom many of us knew, but who have been gone long since: Ben Green, Elmer Sears, George Arnold, and both the Chapmans. Two others—Dr. Jacob Hirsch (then in Munich), and Joseph Barnet are still among our advertisers.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

Waldo C. Moore (then General Secretary) of Lewisburg, Ohio, whose most recent contribution appears in this present issue of THE NUMISMATIST, is given first place in the January issue of 1913, the subject of his paper being "Ohio's Private Shinplasters." This well illustrated article fills thirteen pages—another chapter in his long and authentic study of Ohio numismatics.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

H. D. Allen continues his illustrated article on "The Paper Money of the Confederate States."

The death of P. N. Breton, the widely known Canadian numismatist, is noted as having occurred a few weeks before. Breton's "Illustrated History of Coins and Tokens Relating to Canada" has long been recognized as immensely valuable in any study of the coinage of Canada.

Farran Zerbe, who was Chief of the Panama-Pacific Exposition's Department of Coins and Medals, contributes a final report, with comments, on the notable commemorative set of four values: the silver half dollar, the $1, $2½ and $50 gold—the last named of two varieties, octagonal and round. It would appear that 646 of the former and 483 of the latter $50 gold were distributed, the remainder afterwards being melted at the mint.

Allowing for the practical requirements in modern coinage which debar high relief, Mr. Zerbe makes a justifiable criticism of these high values, as follows:

"But in these fifty-dollar gold pieces a golden opportunity, one greater than ever before, one that may never come again, was offered art in the coin. A planchet of extraordinary size, a special coinage and of the smallest quantity of any regularly authorized, to be sold at a premium that warranted their preservation, no requirements of utility to be considered, struck by a high-power medal press, each piece fed by hand and allowing for as many strikings as might be necessary for high relief and best effect, all exceptions of the Mint and commerce removed, full sway to the artist fortunate enough to be considered, to bring glory to himself and deserved recognition to the medallic art of America in the largest value coin of the modern world. And what of the opportunity? Look at the coin! With everything so favorable there were great expectations, hence the greater the disappointment. Robert Aitken, deservedly noted sculptor that he is, had and lost his opportunity.

"Had Mr. Aitken essayed to place the class of art and relief on the fifty-dollar gold pieces that he gave the souvenir medal, and had given the medal some of the simplicity of the coin designs, it would have been more fitting. There would have been a medal for the prude as well as all others; and in the coins, the art world delighted and far greater profit to the Exposition. The same designs appeared on both shapes, round and octagonal. The Exposition and the numismatic world had every reason to expect the greatest example of art ever given to a coin in modern days and that each shape would be of different design. Originality was lacking; coin emblems of ancient days and the graver's work of the medieval period were depicted."

THE ELUSIVE CENT

Agitation continues for restoring to circulation the hundreds of millions of cents (why will the press—and nearly everybody else—continue to call them “pennies”?) that have been issued in recent years. The shortage of copper is critical, and no doubt some more or less drastic change will need to be made in the metallic content of the smallest of our coins.

Word comes from Washington that the Treasury is urging 30 million school children to enlist in a pre-Christmas drive to put these idle coins to work. The Senate banking and currency committee is reported to have approved proposed legislation to permit the coinage of cents, three-cent pieces and half-dimes from metals other than those heretofore used, though with the combination in the new five-cent piece—silver, copper and manganese—it would seem that a “half-dime” would be unnecessary.

Senator Wagner of New York has introduced a bill authorizing the coinage of cents from a number of different materials, including plastics and zinc-plated steel. If this fantastic idea is adopted such “coins” would find appropriate listing with the Hard Times Tokens of a century ago.

RARE BOOKS AND THE WAR

(The following interesting quotation is taken from a recent book catalogue; a second reading is suggested, substituting “coins” for “books,” probably a logical revision, in the opinion of most numismatists.)

Is it unpatriotic to buy rare books during these times? Probably this question has bothered some collectors with doubts concerning the patriotism or wisdom of such pleasures now.

Our considered opinion is that it is not unpatriotic. The principal objection to luxury-buying now is that it encourages the consumption of materials and labor that should be devoted to war. But rare books are not articles of current manufacture. Most of them have long been in existence. Nor is the buying and selling of them likely to contribute in the slightest degree to that inflation we wish to avoid!

We do not believe that spending money for rare books will impede the war effort in any way. Buy bonds, of course—that is everyone's duty—but if you have left a few morale dollars, we suggest that no indulgence at this time is more harmless than the discriminating collection of rare books, objects which will eventually be handed on to our children as a part of the life we hope they may enjoy through our coming victory.

MORE ABOUT THE NETHERLANDS 25 CENT PIECE OF 1941

New York, November 18, 1942.

To the Editor:

In the October issue of The Numismatist, Mr. Hans Holzer of Elmhurst, N. Y., has described the 25 cent pieces of The Netherlands which were struck at the Philadelphia Mint during 1941. He has further called the coin referred to in the article "Defiance at the Source" published in the February issue, a hoax without, however, apparent examination of the coin in question.

This coin has been loaned to us by the Netherlands Information Bureau with the assurance that the story which was published about it is correct.

From photograph (enlarged) of the coin struck in The Netherlands

The enclosed photographs, which are enlarged, show very clearly that there is no letter P on this coin and that there are many differences in the dies of the two coins.

Very truly yours,

BLANCHE E. CLOUGH, Assistant to the CuratorChase National Bank Collection of Moneys of the World.

A PERSONAL WORD

"Like a bolt from the blue" came the suggestion from official sources early in September that I consider the position of Editor and Business Manager of THE NUMISMATIST—a responsibility so long held with distinction by Frank G. Duffield, whose resignation was submitted to the Executive Committee at the time of the Cincinnati convention.

I could not plead unfamiliarity with the nature and purpose of this journal, for month by month for thirty-five years I had been reading it with sustained interest, watching its gradual but steady growth in merit and influence, and noting with appreciation its appeal to all classes of collectors.

But it was in large part because of this awareness of the high standard already set, and likewise because of a sense of what the Association has a right to expect in the future, that hesitation was inevitable. The final decision was not lightly made—and whether or not wisely will be for others later to determine.

I enter upon this newly assumed responsibility with an open mind, inviting suggestions and constructive criticism, claiming at the outset a sincere ambition to maintain the traditional quality of THE NUMISMATIST and, wherever it may be found possible, to increase its usefulness—not only to collectors of long experience, but to those who are still upon unfamiliar ground and who need—and deserve—encouragement and guidance. This last is even the more vital, for without such reinforcements (as an extreme example) there would be none to turn the hour glass when our own sands have run through. The informed collector is the interested collector, and interest leads to development and persistency, both of the individual and of the larger group we designate as the A. N. A. Certain plans are under consideration, but we shall let them speak for themselves as they appear.

Since the field of numismatics is one of infinite variety, it follows that many different avenues of collecting have long been recognized, all possessing attraction in their own right. Among the three thousand five hundred members of the American Numismatic Association there is naturally—and fortunately—a wide diversity of interests. This is not mentioned as a new discovery, but as an important fact which will (as in the past) influence the selection of articles for publication. A balanced diet here, as elsewhere, has its merits.

The Association as a whole is deeply in the debt of its contributors through its half-century of existence. Without them there could have been no NUMISMATIST. Their only compensation has been the intangible one of satisfaction in the knowledge that they have shared with others the values of their own observation and experience in a fascinating hobby—after all, a kindly and generous impulse translated into action. I am hopeful that the same spirit will continue to actuate those who have something authentic to say definitely related to numismatics, and that from time to time new members may be added to the more or less mythical “Contributors Club.”

It need hardly be recorded here that the interest maintained in our collections in these present days is any indication of indifference to the overshadowing tragedy of the war. Many of our members are with the armed forces; many others have sons who are likewise in active service; still others who are directly engaged in war effort at home, and none, in all probability, who are not buying bonds as they can afford them.

But if mental relaxation and enjoyment can be had from our collections in times of peace, certainly these values are emphasized when the tension of world events becomes increasingly severe. Elsewhere in this issue I have taken the liberty of quoting an extract from a recent book catalogue, entitled “Rare Books and the War.” When you have read it perhaps you will agree with me that the same philosophy may with equal fitness apply to our own particular interests.

For the New Year, may we, as befits a great nation, endure with courage the inevitable losses of war, and in the coming months may the mighty power of the United Nations so wear down the enemy that his inevitable and crushing defeat will not long be delayed.

—BURTON H. SAXTON.

OUR APPRECIATION TO LEE F. HEWITT

On behalf of the Association I express our appreciation to Lee F. Hewitt, who has so satisfactorily temporarily served as Editor and Business Manager of our NUMISMATIST.

When your Executive Committee were faced with the problem of finding someone to satisfactorily carry on our NUMISMATIST in the traditionally high degree of efficiency which has been ever evident under the long years of administration of Frank Duffield, the size of the task was immediately realized.

It was appreciated that if the best man possible were to be found, time was needed to survey the field with great care. Mr. Duffield unfortunately found that he was not in a position to carry on for even this extended period. In the midst of this serious problem, your Board turned to Lee F. Hewitt, who had with his brothers, so successfully introduced the Numismatic Scrapbook Magazine, and asked him if for a few months he would be willing to serve as our Editor and Business Manager, until a permanent appointee was available.

Mr. Hewitt at once appreciated the necessity of divorcing his connection entirely from his own numismatic publication while serving our Association. This he did willingly, and all recognize how efficiently and faithfully he has served the Association.

We are very proud that once again a member of our Association, when the need became apparent, has stepped into a breach and served his Association so unselfishly and efficiently.

With the appointment of Burton H. Saxton as our Editor and Business Manager effective with this issue, I express on behalf of every member of our Association our heartfelt appreciation to Lee F. Hewitt for his outstanding services.

I am glad to be able to add that Mr. Hewitt will assist Mr. Saxton for the first two months of the latter's service in order to assure the members as effective a transference of responsibility as possible.

—J. D. FERGUSON, President A. N. A.

OFFICIAL GREETINGS

From most of the official family of the A. N. A. come these words of encouragement and good wishes to all our members as the curtain rises on 1943.

Another year has passed. A year of momentous decisions, of precedent breaking developments filled with ever increasing energy and vitality in the great effort of the United Nations to bring the world's holocaust to a satisfactory conclusion, and to make the world a better one than ever before.

Just as our nations are striving with ever increasing energy and efficiency to bring this issue to a successful conclusion at the earliest possible moment, may I wish for every member of our Association the opportunity of serving as best he can as his contribution toward this great achievement. At the same time, may I wish for you and your families a year of abundant good health and as much personal satisfaction and happiness as is possible.

—J. DOUGLAS FERGUSON, President.

Greetings and best wishes for the year 1943 to the members of the American Numismatic Association. From the military viewpoint it promises to be a year of hard work, ending in ultimate victory for the United Nations. It will be a year when many of us will have to forego some of the pleasures of numismatics in order to give our services to the government, or to buy bonds to achieve the defeat of the Axis. It will be a year of marked changes numismatically, and it is the duty of those of us not in the armed services to provide and keep numismatic specimens for those of our friends who are giving their service for us. Let us all devote our best 1943 efforts to the resumption of peace-time numismatics during the year 1944.

—MARTIN F. KORTJOHN, 1st Vice President.

To the members of the A. N. A. and especially to those serving our Country in the Armed Forces, I extend greetings and best wishes for happiness and prosperity during 1943.

—G. M. TODD, 2nd Vice President.

Thanks for this opportunity of expressing my sincere desire for a Happy and Prosperous New Year to all members of the American Numismatic Association.

We are facing a period of progress and reconstruction unparalleled in our history; we have no definite guide to direct our efforts; the future is uncertain, but, thank God, we have a common cause that will bind us as one for the best interests of our worthwhile hobby.

May 1943 bring each of us a renewed and continuing interest for the preservation and upbuilding of our Association and numismatics in general.

—V. LEON BELT, Member Board of Governors.

Cordial greetings for the New Year to all members of the American Numismatic Association!

These are very trying times to many of us who have sons, relatives and friends in the combat forces of the Nation, but it is no time to slacken our interest in numismatics. A methodical and persistent study of our coins, paper money and medals will relieve our minds from worry and strengthen us to bear more easily the burdens of life which all of us have.

—GEORGE H. BLAKE, Treasurer.

I am grateful for the opportunity to wish my fellow collectors a victorious and numismatically happy New Year. And to remind all that the A. N. A. Library is YOURS, and at your service every day. If you want a work on some subject you do not find listed, drop us a note and we'll try to get something to you.

With sincere best wishes of the season and a prayer for our men on the far flung sectors who serve us today.

—TED R. HAMMER, Librarian-Curator.

May I take the occasion of your becoming editor of The Numismatist to extend through you a New Year's greeting to the members of the American Numismatic Association.

In these trying times through which we are passing, I believe collectors are coming to appreciate more and more the value of our hobby and realize the relaxation and benefit that can be gained through the study and collecting of coins and medals. To those of our armed forces overseas comes the opportunity to see strange currencies in circulation and to pick up pieces which may be unobtainable in this country; while to those at home comes the satisfaction of a pastime to occupy profitably time which under normal conditions might be dissipated in many ways.

I feel confident that when the war is over numismatics will occupy a position of more importance in our minds. I base this on the experience of our Boston Numismatic Society which, founded before the Civil War, enjoyed a notable increase in members and activity after the termination of that struggle, a phenomenon which was repeated after the close of the World War when a large increase in membership developed.

Let us, therefore, look to the future with full confidence that whatever our sacrifices must be in the national effort, numismatics will hold its place in the hearts and minds of our American collectors.

—SHEPARD POND, Member Board of Governors.

I want to extend to the Officers and Members of the American Numismatic Association a Greeting for a New Year that will bring forth a world of renewed peace and happiness, a peace that will endure eternally; it is not a "Peace on earth, good will to men," but a peace on earth to men of good will. May all selfishness and hate disappear and be replaced by a world of love, as love is the highest of virtues.

—J. HENRI RIPSTRA, Member Board of Governors.

Greeting—to those of our members who remain on the home front, fighting with stamps, bonds, taxes, and inconveniences, that our Republic may survive.

Condolence—to the families, relatives and friends of those of our members lost, injured, and subject to the hardships of this disastrous war.

We hope our members will pursue our hobby as well as possible under these trying conditions until early success is ours and peace and permanency is again restored to the world.

—NELSON T. THORSON, Member Board of Governors.

NUMISMATIC ADVERTISING

By DUDLEY BUTLER, New York City

Any one who has looked at the huge electric signs which up to the War illuminated Broadway, or who sees the two page display advertisements in our magazines is apt to think that advertising is a sort of new idea.

He may even have seen the crude woodcuts published in the newspapers around 1800 proclaiming the virtues of some pain killer or cough medicine, and considered how advertising has improved since those days.

Many of us are apt to think that the era of 1800 saw the beginning of the advertising business, but such is not the case.

The Phoenicians insured ships long before the Christian era, and is it not possible that the pictures of ships and fishes on coins of that period might have been a hint that they were in the marine insurance business? To be sure, they insured hulls only, no cargoes, but with the kind of ships they had in those days they took an awful chance.

In the 13th century King Geisa of Hungary was anxious to induce the Saxons to settle in Transylvania. He considered that these sturdy, hard working people would make excellent additions to the rather mixed population. He offered all kinds of inducements to them, and even went so far as to place seven castles on the Arms of Transylvania especially to represent them. In fact he acted very much like the manager of a suburban real estate development.

Pretzelheim in Germany is said to be the birth place of the humble pretzel; be that as it may, the fact remains that the coat of arms of that city contains three pretzels.

Any student of the coins of Saxony knows that one of the chief characteristics of its issues is that most of the reverse is taken up by a huge coat of arms containing from eight to sixteen or more quarterings, and in the majority of cases you will find a quartering with the three pretzels. They seem to say pretty plainly "If you want any pretzels with your beer, come round and see our factory." This advertisement has been doing business for hundreds of years and the idea seems to be still popular.

From about 400 A. D. the coinage of Europe went from bad to worse. The currency was debased as to content and the die work was extremely crude.

Almost all the precious metals that could be procured were used in the Arts and it was not until the silver mines in the Hartz Mountains were discovered in the latter part of the 15th Century that any decent looking coins were produced at all.

About 1521 Saltzburg began striking coins on which were depicted St. Rupert with the famous salt box. From that time on most of their coins show either St. Rupert or the then Bishop of the place with his crozier in one hand and the salt box in the other.

Now the salt box has no connection whatever with religion and it seems merely a way of saying "We have the best salt mines in Europe and are open for business." In fact it almost suggests "Diamond Salt Co. of Saltzburg, Inc."

Brunswick and Luneberg struck great quantities of coins during the 17th century and a high percentage of them depict mining scenes. Some of the two and three thaler pieces are most elaborate, showing mines and mine machinery. Surely this is to advertise the fact that they would be glad to talk to anyone who was in the market for silver.

During the 15th, 16th and 17th centuries, Augsburg was a great manufacturing town. It was famous for its steel work. The best swords, guns, and armour were made there. Among its other activities it had about the best equipped mint in Europe. Many of the other Bishoprics and Principalities had their coins struck there as they were sure of getting satisfactory work. The mint master saw an opportunity of securing some free advertising, so when the dies were cut to fill an order from some other place he had two little horse shoes tucked away in some inconspicuous place. It might not be a coin of Augsburg at all but for some entirely different place or government but if you saw the little horse shoes you would know at once who made it. It was just another way of saying "This is the sort of work we do and if you think well of it and want some equally good for the coins of your realm, we will gladly take your order."

The Papal States went in for advertising in a big way on some of their issues. Those struck between (approximately) 1675-1710 bore on the reverse outlines of the harbour with its shipping, St. Peter's Cathedral, and churches of various dates. Even the tiny round church of St. Theodore gets a full page illustration. Religious festivals like the opening of the Holy Door received due attention. All these attracted pilgrims and perhaps tourists. At least it showed strangers some of the glories of the Eternal City.

Coming down to our own day one of the greatest pieces of advertising was done by our own Government. I refer to the Trade Dollar issued between 1873-1878. They were struck to stimulate trade with the far East, an attempt to break the hold of the Maria Teresa dollar. Our dollar not only told you how much it weighed but also the fineness of the silver used in it. In fact it had a lot to say about itself. So you see there is nothing very new about advertising, and some of the best coins in our collections are outstanding examples.

SOME OBSERVATIONS ON SUITABLE METALS FOR COINAGE

Citizens of any country have very little knowledge of the composition of their own money. Among educated people who visit the mint to witness its operations, many learn for the first time the difference between "fine" and "standard," and the reason for mixing the base with the precious metal.

Although gold is often found in its natural state combined with other metals, it can very easily be separated; whereas it is a costly process to recover silver from an alloyed mixture.

Gold is remarkable for its weight, being 19.3 times as heavy as water. Only three other known metals are heavier: platinum, iridium and osmium.

Silver possesses many of the same valuable properties, though in less degree, its specific weight being 10.5.

Gold and silver in their purity are soft, easily bent or injured, and subject to rapid wear; it is therefore necessary that they be hardened when used for coinage by the use of alloys.

The seven known metals of antiquity were: gold, silver, copper, mercury, tin, iron and lead. Between the 15th and 18th centuries, fourteen other metals were discovered, among them being nickel, zinc, platinum, antimony, bismuth, etc.; and from the 18th century to the present day many more metals have been discovered: paladium, iridium, rhodium and ten others, all of which are too brittle for coinage purposes.

The Philadelphia mint, having experimented with electrolic manganese, a hard, brittle metal used in making glass and paints, found that it will respond to magnetic attraction, and therefore may be substituted for the nickel in our five cent piece, functioning as before in slot machines, subway turnstiles, etc.

Since copper has become extremely scarce, the ratio of zinc to copper, in making brass, is increased. The effect is to make zinc also scarce.

Since more than thirty tons of metal for coinage normally pass through the presses each day at the Philadelphia mint, and the demand for one-cent pieces is greater than ever, it may become necessary to substitute for copper a metalliferous substance, or resort to plastic, tin or glass, the latter also containing manganese.

Floral plastic bracelets being manufactured give forth a luminous effect distinguishable in a blackout. What an idea for coinage!

War creates emergencies that must be met, and the necessity for inventive genius to discover ways and means to meet them.

Likewise war creates bitterness, an increase in crime—especially among the youth—suicides by the vanquished, and often among the victors.

To ward off inflation, to unite for VICTORY, let us BUY UNITED STATES WAR BONDS—NOW.

—C. LOU SNYDER, Chicago.

SORRY

In the advertisement of Geo. Rogers, Los Angeles, Calif., page 857, November issue, the price of 1942 cents in lots of 1,000 should have read $12.50, instead of $12.00 as printed.

BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular monthly meeting was held in room "V," Boston City Club, on Monday evening, November 30, 1942, with President Pond in the chair and 11 members and three guests present: Messrs. Doyle, Stiff, Klein, Chell-Frost, Grant, Welti, Schuhmacher, Lowenstam, Evanson, Heide and Shackford. The guests were Major Kuhn, U. S. Air Corps, Dr. Leslie A. Russell of Newton, Frank J. Katen, Milford, Conn., and Mr. James Neeley of Boston.

Mr. Albert Leo Hanley of Boston was elected to membership.

The President appointed Mr. Schuhmacher to look into the matter of banks and other public buildings allowing space for the display of coins.

Mr. Schuhmacher brought to the attention of the members the coming thirtieth anniversary of the Suburban Stamp and Curio Club and their Christmas party, which is to be on December 17th next. He also asked that the Secretary be instructed to send the Suburban a letter of congratulation on their 30th anniversary.

The President spoke briefly on the book "Numismatics of Massachusetts" written by our late officer and member, Dr. Malcolm E. Storer. The President stated that a few of these books remained in the hands of the Massachusetts Historical Society (of which Dr. Storer was Curator at the time of his death), and that they could be obtained at the price of $4.00 each. Several members immediately placed orders for copies.

Mr. Grant urged that more work should be done by the members towards securing new members for the American Numismatic Association.

The balance of the evening was given over to our member, Mr. Malcolm Chell-Frost, as speaker. Mr. Chell-Frost introduced something entirely new in the shape of a coin quiz. This novel deviation from the usual talks on different coin subjects was greatly appreciated by those members present. The President then asked Mr. Chell-Frost to draft something along these lines as a topic to be sent to the "Numismatist." Mr. Chell-Frost replied that he would have something drawn up and that it would be sent to the magazine editor for a later publication.

The next meeting was announced for Monday evening, December 28, 1942.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—The 177th meeting of the club, held Tuesday evening, December 1, 1942, was attended by about twenty numismatologists, who, despite gas rationing and other perils of navigation, gathered from points far and near. The main item of business was the annual election of officers and the following named persons were elected by unanimous vote:

President, Adolph Larson, Jr.; Vice President, Wallace Todd; Secretary, Earle K. Stanton; Treasurer, C. L. Hawley. Board of Governors, S. M. Koepfel, Joe Steel, Harry Golding, Frederick C. Dockweiler, Harry L. Canaan.

Inauguration ceremonies, which are usually held as a joint event with the Orange County Coin Club, were indefinitely postponed. Resolutions of appreciation were tendered to the retiring officers for their efforts during the past year, and ordered spread upon the minutes. President-elect Larson spoke briefly in respect to the special need of cooperation during the present adverse conditions, in order to make the club a success.

President S. M. Koepfel presented a paper entitled "The Romance of American Coinage." "Money," Mr. Koepfel said, "gives an idea of the civilization of a country," and traced the rapid development of our present monetary system from the very humble beginnings of colonial times. The idea of our silver dollar was derived from the old Spanish milled dollars or "Pieces of Eight," featured by Robert Louis Stevenson and other writers. The Pine Tree Shilling was our first silver coin, and the Rosa Americana Penny, the first copper coin. Mr. Koepfel's exhibit included fine examples of these coins together with specimens of wampum, made legal tender in the colonies, continental currency, greenbacks from the Bank of the United States, etc. Mr. Frank M. Schmidt spoke briefly regarding necessity money issued during World War I, made from zinc, iron, and porcelain, exhibiting several specimens of porcelain money.

These coins all in mint condition. Mr. Oblisk also discussed each of the coins he had on display, which numbered approximately 100 pieces.

—L. A. Salasek, Secretary.

CHICAGO COIN CLUB—The 286th regular meeting of the Chicago Coin Club was held on December 2nd at the La Salle Hotel. Due to the near zero weather only thirty-seven members and two guests were present, with President Lamb presiding.

Mr. Barger gave the nominating committee's report, and President Lamb asked if there were any other nominations from the floor. As there were none, Mr. Kopicki then moved and Mr. Green seconded that the slate as presented by the nominating committee be accepted and that the Secretary be ordered to cast unanimous ballot for the nominations made.

Mr. Hewitt spoke on the proposed change in laws that pertain to minting minor coins, and the prospects of another coinage series.

President Lamb asked that we have more exhibits at the January meeting, and also announced the installation of the 1943 officers and the reports of all officers and committees.

Mr. Cabeen exhibited three gold dollars of 1849 Philadelphia mint; the closed wreath; an open wreath with regular obverse, and another open wreath with small head, last not mentioned in standard catalog.

DALLAS COIN CLUB—Monthly meeting held at Baker Hotel November 19, with twenty-four members and two visitors present. After a sumptuous banquet, with W. A. Philpott, Jr., as host, a quiz was conducted on United States commemorative half dollars. The first prize, a complete set of the currency of the Republic of Texas, went to Lieut. Vernon L. Brown of New York. The Rev. E. M. Whitwell, president of the club, and Murray C. Brooks of Greenville tied for second place.

LEHIGH VALLEY COIN CLUB—The 5th annual banquet and 51st regular meeting of the Club on October 22, 1942, was attended by 42 persons: 22 members and their wives, and friends.

The program started with the singing of "America." Then everybody enjoyed a fine dinner of fried chicken with all the trimmings.

This concluded, President Hicks welcomed the guests and opened the business meeting. A letter from the Club's former Secretary, Mr. Gallagher, was read. Mr. Shepherd reported that Mr. Dougherty, still quite ill, was improving. The door prize of $2.00 was drawn by Mr. Kremer.

This short business meeting disposed of, the President turned to the business of the evening's entertainment. First was a drawing by the ladies. The prize of a basket of fruit, donated by Mr. and Mrs. Barnhart, was won by Mrs. F. Strohl. In the men's drawing, Mr. Lobb was the winner of a 1942 proof set.

High point of the evening was an address by Prof. James W. Richardson of the Allentown High School. It was entitled "Beginnings."

Following this talk everybody made a study of the various exhibits. The general collection of U. S. coins, all proof or uncirculated, and belonging to Mr. Lewis, easily won the prize—a 1942 proof set.

While the auction material was being set up, Mr. Shepherd conducted a quiz for the ladies. The questions dealt with ordinary numismatic knowledge. Many answers were extraordinary, and provided much of the evening's humor. However, Miss Clapp knew all the answers and won the prize of $1.00.

The final event was an auction. Many interesting coins changed hands, and netted the Club $7.72.

—E. H. Kremer, Secretary.

BREVITIES

The Austrian Archduke Sigismund struck the first dollar-size coins in Europe. The coins were dated 1486.

Recent reports indicate that the Government of China has taken steps to insure the acceptance of the Central Reserve Bank Currency. Persons refusing the currency will be subject to prison terms and fines.

Belgian Congo bank notes were formerly issued of a single design with the names of the issuing centers printed in red, such as Matadi, or Stanleyville. The obverse is printed in Flemish, and the reverse in French.

The denomination of the Slovakian Republic is halierov, and not halerov, as erroneously stated in a previous issue describing the recently received coinage. There are coins in silver, nickel and copper. The pure nickel coins, have been withdrawn, it is stated.

The famous Chinese Ming bank notes are printed on a fibre manufactured from mulberry bark. As result, the notes are deep blue. The printing of the inscriptions, from hand-carved wood blocks, is usually in red or black ink. The notes are very large, measuring about 9 by 13 inches.

The half-farthing was a denomination in the British series specially struck for Ceylon.

This popular invaluable new coin book shows Selling Prices Realized, which often vary considerably from other catalog prices, for all single coins in every condition at more than 30 outstanding mail auctions in 1942. ## COINS WANTED

If you have a collection of U. S. coins for sale, mostly Uncirculated or Proof, it will be to your benefit and mine, if you will let me make an offer on it before you sell.

You are assured of a fair price for your coins, because I pay from 80 to 85% of my Selling Prices, and the same offer is made to everybody, regardless of whether you have only one coin to sell, or five hundred.

At this time, am especially interested in buying collections complete or nearly complete, of the following: Uncirculated Indian and Lincoln Cents; Uncirculated or Proof Shield, Liberty, and Buffalo Nickels; Uncirculated and Proof Three Cent Nickels, Dimes, Quarters, Half Dollars, Twenty Cent Pieces, Two Cent Pieces. Also, I pay highest prices for Uncirculated Commemorative Half Dollars, and can use complete collections, sets, quantities up to one hundred or more of a kind, and single coins. I can use a few sets of Commemorative Gold Coins, Uncirculated, and will pay $68.25 per set of 11 coins. Equally fair prices for single coins.

My customers who have coins to sell, appreciate the fact that I do not ask them to "quote their lowest price." Why should I? I know what I can sell the coins for, what my expenses are, and therefore should know what I can pay.

Dear John:

Well, our December sale went over with a bang! Almost 500 mail bidders, 75 in attendance, and well over $8,000 realized for the 1110 lots. A list price realized, is ready at 50c, should you want one.

At the moment, we're preparing another sale. If you have any material, send it on. You've been satisfied with the results up to now, and there's every reason for continued optimism. Remember that we are still looking for rarities in all series.

Sincerely yours,

THE BANK OF THE UNITED STATES

By DAMON G. DOUGLAS, New York City

(This paper was presented at the meeting of the New York Numismatic Club, January 8, 1943.)

The great fascination that our hobby holds for me is in the incentive it supplies to study the intimate history of the periods of the various series: the reason for them, and the interesting side lights that the minutiae of the various specimens throw on the story of man and his earlier thoughts and beliefs.

Our topic tonight, the Hard Times tokens of the Jacksonian era, brings down to us physical mementoes of one of the most colorful periods of American history which resulted in the rounding of another lap in the advancing course of liberal ideals. Many of these coppers serve to make alive and real for us much of the bitterness and acrimony of the fierce clash between two antipodal social concepts of the proper purposes of the government of a democracy, personified in two stubborn, strong-willed, self-confident men. The one, Nicholas Biddle, privileged son of a well-to-do Philadelphia banker, was by birth and background convinced of the superior abilities and rights of his class to lead, govern, and if need be, exploit the masses. At thirteen Biddle had successfully completed the college course at Pennsylvania. Then at fifteen he graduated from New Jersey College at Princeton as class valedictorian. Called into the Treasury Department at 27 to aid in the financing of the War of 1812, he was appointed by President Monroe at 33 to be one of the five government directors on the board of the Bank of the United States. Quickly rising to the Presidency of the Bank, he had become dominant in its management and through it practically controlled as has no man before or since the entire financial structure of the nation. It is easy for such a man to become persuaded of his divine right to rule and to bitterly resent and exert all his efforts to destroy any challenger of that right.

A Great Fighter Battles Again

Such a challenger was Andrew Jackson, seventh president of the United States, born to make his own way, self-educated, frontier lawyer and able military tactician and commander. Jackson had a strong, deep faith in the people and their sober second judgment and a basic antipathy for privilege and vested interest. Such a man, on general principles, would instinctively oppose autocratic private monopolistic control of the money system of the nation and its concomitant unlimited influence on the entire American economic fabric. Particularly would he oppose it in the hands of such an antithetical personality as Nick Biddle.

In 1832 the Bank's charter had four more years to run and Jackson had in his annual messages to congress, since 1829, expressed his doubts of the wisdom of renewing it. Biddle had quietly recruited congressional strength favorable to renewal. Easy loans to congressmen and government officials, substantial annual retainers to such senators as Henry Clay and Daniel Webster, and influence of all sorts, backed by the prestige and patronage of the Bank's system, made powerful arguments. Convinced from a private poll of congress that he now controlled enough votes to ensure a re-chartering of the bank, Biddle gave the go-ahead signal to his congressional cohorts, who promptly introduced his bill for the continuance of the monopoly.

On July 3rd, seven days before the scheduled adjournment of the session, the bill was passed and went to the president for signature. To avoid giving the president the possibility of the easy out of a pocket veto, Henry Clay obtained an extension of the session and on July 10th Jackson returned the bill with his ringing veto message, one passage of which I read you verbatim as it seems to sum up the essence of the Jacksonian ideal of government "For the People" and to form the fountain head from which has flowed liberal democratic policy down to the present day. He said: "Distinctions in society will always exist under every just government. Equality of talents, of education, or of wealth can not be produced by human institutions. In the full enjoyment of the gifts of heaven and the fruits of superior industry, economy, and virtue, every man is equally entitled to protection by law. But when the laws undertake to add to these natural and just advantages, artificial distinctions . . . to make the rich richer and the potent more powerful, the humble members of society . . . have a right to complain of the injustice of their government."

The re-charter bill died when the vote for passage over the veto failed of a necessary two-thirds and the fight began to intensify. Henry Clay campaigned for the presidency backed by the Bank and its controlled press, and mud was used freely on both sides. Jackson's overwhelming victory at the polls in November he construed as a mandate to kill the Bank. Early in 1833, he moved to discontinue the deposits of government funds in the Bank as a means of lessening the power of Biddle, whom he feared might yet buy or otherwise muster sufficient strength to force through a re-charter measure. The private correspondence of Biddle and his associates indicates clearly that he was at this time still confident of victory and willing to go to almost any extremes to attain it. Feeling that the public, if sufficiently hurt by a depression through curtailment of credit, would pressure the President into yielding, he put the screws on. Discounts were drastically curtailed, state banks stressed, and trade seriously deranged. It was during this period that the first satirical propaganda pieces among the Hard Times tokens were issued and circulated in quantity.

A Bitterly Satirical Piece

As these have been most intimately described in the Coin Collectors Journal in a series of articles appearing in 1938 and 1939, let me use just one as an example. To me Low No. 12 is one of the most interesting because of its extremes in personal vituperation. It bears the legend ROMAN FIRMNESS over the likeness of a balky jackass which bears blazoned on his side the large letters LLD. In Cambridge in '33, Harvard College, at the insistence of Josiah Quincy, its president, conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws upon Jackson. Back Bay society and the Jackson haters in general were horrified. Old John Quincy Adams, as a Harvard man, asked Quincy if there was no way to prevent such an outrage. "None," said Quincy, "as the people have twice decided that this man knows law enough to be their ruler, it is not for Harvard College to maintain that they are mistaken." Adams refused to attend the ceremony, writing in his diary "An affectionate child of my Alma Mater, I could not bear to witness her disgrace in conferring her highest literary honor upon a barbarian who could hardly spell his own name."

The Bank-subsidized press and other Jackson haters editorialized in the same general tenor so effectively that Jackson has gone into our school histories and into the general American saga incorrectly pictured as almost illiterate. Actually a perusal of his manuscript correspondence still extant gives quite a different impression. The remainder of the legend "The Constitution as I understand it," jeers at one of Jackson's points against the Bank's charter, the constitutionality of which had been previously upheld by the Supreme Court, in spite of which Jackson maintained his obligation to uphold "the Constitution as I understand it." The obverse bears a caricature likeness of Jackson holding a sword in his right hand and a long purse grasped in the center of his left hand. The sword purposes to emphasize Jackson's proclivity for direct action, and the purse, a likeness of the long green purses in which Jackson's campaigners in the presidential election had jingled gold pieces which they called "Jackson's yellow boys," the two together reminding of Henry Clay's warnings about the danger of "the sword controlling the purse." The legend "A plain system, void of pomp" refers to a much criticized defense by Amos Kendall, a member of Jackson's kitchen cabinet.

Biddle's Mistake

However, Tsar Nick Biddle had guessed wrong. Like the economic royalists of a hundred years later, he had underestimated the strength and intelligence of the masses. The people were on Jackson's side and for the first time in the history of the young republic were making their will felt. The bank poured out tens of thousands of dollars in propaganda pamphlets, newspapers were purchased with loans, propaganda pilgrimages to the White House were organized, all to no avail. The tide was running against monopoly and privilege. Congress resolved that the bank should not be re-chartered, and the expiration of the charter period drew nearer.

Late in 1835, Biddle, although still hopeful of ultimately again gaining control of the government's finances, realized he must get the bank's charter from other than the United States. The state of Pennsylvania was chosen, and enough bribes were distributed among the Harrisburg legislators to insure the granting of a 50-year charter to The Bank of the United States, Pennsylvania. Later in 1840 an investigating committee of the legislature reported that the sum of $130,000 was spent by the bank in this way.

Biddle became president of the newly chartered bank, which continued the business of the old Second Bank of the United States without even opening a new set of books, a rather un-orthodox procedure which has rendered it impossible to this day to get any clear picture of the true condition of the old bank at the expiration of its charter period. The new bank kept up an undercover agitation for its selection as the depository for the governments funds, and its running fire of propaganda against Van Buren and his independent sub-treasury program.

The Final Chapter

However, without the resources of the government to trade on, Mr. Nick Biddle was a rather dismal failure and the bank's fortunes rapidly dwindled. Attempting to get out from under, he resigned the presidency in 1839. In April, 1841, a stockholder's committee appointed to investigate the administration of the bank reported $618,640.15 unaccounted for except as "Paid out on receipts of Mr. N. Biddle and on receipts of Mr. N. Biddle and Mr. J. Cowperthwaite"; regarding which both gentlemen had "failed to answer the committee's inquiries." Early in the same year the bank was forced to close with the loss of its entire capital. Civil suits were filed against Biddle for restitution, and he was indicted by a grand jury on criminal charges. The criminal charges were avoided on a technicality; and before the civil suit came to trial, the honorable Mr. Nicholas Biddle was dead.

For its collateral interest, I have brought signatures of the defeated Nicholas Biddle, signed in 1837 and 1838, on notes of the Pennsylvania Bank which undeniably attempts to couple the prestige of the United States to bolster the new bank, and to avoid calling attention to the fact that it was now only another of the myriad state banks. The notes are payable at the bank's agencies in London and in Paris, and quite possibly may have been given in connection with Biddle's disastrous speculation in cotton, which he started in 1837.

I owe to these hard times tokens all the fun that has been mine in checking sources, reading protagonists of both sides of the bank fight, and in forming my own opinion of this eventful period of American History; and this is only one of the many interesting fields for study and learning opened up by the complete series. I'm confident that any coin or token can equally serve as a spur to a search for the stories beyond it, and the personalities of its time and place. May I never be satisfied merely with the coin, but always want the story behind it.

NUMISMATIC FACTS AND FANCY

By CARL WURTZBACH, Lee, Massachusetts

This paper by Mr. Wurtzbach, read at a meeting of the Springfield Coin Club, was published in The Numismatist in February, 1918. The Editor believes it to be of continuing interest and worthy of republication, especially since hundreds of our members have never seen it, having joined the Association subsequent to its appearance. There is no valid excuse for permanently burying an article of outstanding merit in the files of former years, and it is probable others will reappear in like manner from time to time.

Mr. Wurtzbach is Life Member No. 24; he was a member of the Board of Governors in 1912, 1914-15-16, and was elected President in 1917, serving for two years. A review of earlier issues will reveal a number of contributions from the author of the following paper.

In the realm of knowledge we find the genius of human endeavor at work principally in two directions; it is ever seeking to find out what happened in the past, while still more eagerly it is seeking to discover the future prospect. This is pre-eminently true in the domain of historical research and adventure. By gaining inspiration from what is best in one and enthusiasm as we venture into the other are we enabled to make the best use of the present. The science of numismatics, strictly speaking, embraces the study of the coins of all nations which have at any period impressed upon pieces of metal any device or inscription indicating that such pieces of metal were issued by authority, for public use, as money. So closely allied, however, is the study of medals and coins issued without authority, but to supply some great need or to commemorate some important event, that nowadays both may properly be and usually are classed under this head. In order to bring out more clearly and the better to substantiate the specific object we have in mind it will be necessary to state a few general facts. Coins bearing inscriptions have been found as of 1200 B. C. It is supposed that the shekels of Abraham's time were proportionate weights of metal chipped from bars and without inscriptions. No human head was stamped upon coins until the time of Alexander the Great, the effigy of gods being represented. Alexander was considered a divinity, so the likeness of his features was impressed upon enduring metal.

Imperishable Portraits

Portraiture is greatly indebted to numismatics; to metal alone can the historic artist go for portraits of Alexander, Ptolemy, Cleopatra, Mark Antony, Caesar, and many other celebrities. Incidents of history are not alone recorded. Coins and medals mark the introduction of laws, as shown by an old Pœreian coin, which gives the date of the law of appeal, under which two and a half centuries later Paul appealed to Caesar. The date of the introduction of the ballot-box is shown on metal, also many facts interesting to agriculturists, as a silver piece of Ptolemy showing a man cutting millet with a scythe. Religions have been promulgated by this means in all ages by all peoples, the style of costumes has been preserved, humor has been depicted, while heraldic emblems are faithfully perpetuated. In truth, says one writer, "Medallic honors may be claimed as the very foundation of heraldic art," and poets turn with confidence to old coins for symbol as well as fact. Architecture and language could never have reached the perfection of the present day were it not for the help this medium has been to those sciences. Says Evans in his "History of the United States Mint," "The knowledge of coins and medals, through the inscriptions and devices thereon, is, to an extent, a history of the world from that date in which metals were applied to such uses. Events engraven upon these remain hidden in tombs or buried in the bosom of the earth, deposited there long ages past by careful and miserly hands, only awaiting the research of the patient investigator to tell the story of their origin. Numismatic treasures are scanned as evidence of facts to substantiate statements upon papyrus or stone, and dates are often supplied to define the border line between asserted tradition and positive history." Frederick H. Betts, the author of "American Colonial History Illustrated by Contemporary Medals," says: "The value of coins and medals as enduring records of events has often been adverted to. All original documents and contemporary accounts of occurrences are of peculiar importance to the conscientious historian. Medals are original documents in metal. In studying them we study history at its source. As contributions to the knowledge of the history of portraiture, dress and habits; as indices of then existing information in architecture, geography and the natural sciences; and as a means of restoring the knowledge of structures long destroyed, the aid of medals is not over-estimated. It has often been stated that it is safer to quote a medal than a historian."

Historical Evidence

A prominent collector remarks: "The study of numismatics is the handmaid of history, leading to much that is unrecorded in printed books and manuscripts and furnishing traits of nations, men and times to be found in historical domain." Captain John Smith, who, whether saved by Pocahontas or not, was spared to become the great historian of English colonization in America, in his "General History of Virginia, New England and the Summer Isles, 1624," says: "For as Geography, without History seemeth a carcasse without motion, so History without Geography, wandereth as a vagrant without a certain habitation," to which Crosby has added: "So also has numismatology a relation to history hardly less intimate or important," thus paying a high tribute to the science we are discussing. I remember to have read that were the written words of Thucydides, Herodotus and Julius Caesar destroyed, ancient history would still be an open book by reason of the records inscribed on coins and medals covering the period of these, the world's greatest historians. Gibbon, the great historian of Rome, remarks: "If there were no other record of Hadrian, his career would be found written upon the coins of his reign."

I quote thus at length to show the great value coins and medals have in perpetuating the record of contemporaneous events, and if this be true of ancient times it is much more true of modern, especially of those issues that have to do with the founding and preserving of our Government and which are the immediate subject considered tonight. In one respect this coinage is unique; it not only tells of what was done, but often in legend and device it expressed the hope of what was to be. There is one rather remarkable feature of this early coinage which has been freely commented on; while nearly all the men prominent in our early history were God-fearing, no reference to Almighty God is found on any of these pieces. Whether it was due to the influence of Voltaire, whose brilliant intellect held all the great minds of Europe in dominion, causing that wave of agnosticism which swept over the continent, and who completely infatuated Franklin and Jefferson, is, I think, a fair deduction, and can certainly be given as one reason for the omission. However, it was not until after the Civil War, the exact date was early in 1866, that "In God We Trust" appeared on any U. S. coins, while it is the rare exception to find European coins of any period without some such legend.

One thing is characteristic and prominent regarding these early issues. The spirit of the times is unmistakably indicated, as shown by the defiant legends on many pieces. The issues I wish particularly to call to your attention were uttered by Great Britain for the Colonies, by the different States, and by individuals. They are entirely distinct from those struck by the U. S. Mint, which was established in 1792, first struck coppers of half and one cent denominations in 1793, silver in 1794, and gold in 1795. These series may properly be divided into four groups—Colonial, 1650 to 1775; State issues, including the Washington pieces, 1775 to 1792; the Hard Times Tokens, 1833 to 1844, and those issued during the Civil War period. Obviously a description of the thousands of varieties is out of the question; scores of volumes have been written on the subject without exhausting it; an illustration or two will suffice for our purpose, and the limits of this paper will allow but brief mention of the salient features covering the different periods.

Our Colonial Coins

It must be remembered that nearly all of the Colonial pieces were struck in Great Britain for the use of the Colonies, and we shall find that this was one of the early causes of friction between the Colonies and the mother country. As Columbus, when seeking the new world he was confident existed, first landed on an island, it is interesting to note that the first coin struck for America was for the Island of Bermuda and called the Sommer Islands shilling. Captain Smith in describing these also gives a detailed account of the colonization of those islands which forms most interesting reading. The Island of Bermuda is so named because a Spanish ship bearing that name, loaded with hogs, was wrecked in one of the fearful storms for which this region is noted. Some of the hogs reached these islands, multiplied rapidly, became wild and very ferocious. This fact, together with the storms already mentioned, gave the name to these islands "The Isles of Hell and Perdition." They are sometimes called The Summer Isles, after Sir George Summers, who died at what is now the city of St. George in 1611. His body is buried there, but his heart was taken to England for interment. The epitaphs from each of his graves are as follows:

"In the year 1611,

Noble Sir George Summers went hence to heauen;
Whose well tried worth that held him still imploid,
Gauē him the knowledge of the world so wide.
Hence, twas by heauens decree, that to this place
He brought new guests, and name to mutuall grace.

At last his soule and body being to part,
He here bequeath'd his entrails and his heart."

"Alas Virginia's Summer so soone past,
Autumn succeeds and storm Winters blast,
Yet Englands joyful Spring with joyful showers,
O Florida, shall bring thy sweetest flowers."

In 1650, Massachusetts, always in the van, engaged in issuing in silver, Shillings, Sixpences, etc., known as New England money, followed soon after by the Pine Tree money, and placed them in circulation to be used in lieu of the Spanish coin, the then legal tender for the Colonies. The arrangements for such coinage were being made by the colonists several years previous to the actual coinage. This activity greatly incensed Charles, the king, who frowned upon the idea of the colonists coining their own money, as did Cromwell upon their actually doing it. However, they were not greatly interfered with by either, but Charles II was greatly incensed. It is related that a copy of the proposed Pine Tree Shilling was shown the king by Thomas Temple, a friend of the colonists, who, in order to appease the king's wrath, said to him that the tree was a representation of the royal oak which had saved the king's life. This greatly pleased His Majesty, who, laughing, pronounced his subjects across the sea "honest dogs" and let the good work go on. The colonists felt justified in arranging for their own coinage because of the great scarcity of money of intrinsic worth. England was very negligent in supplying the need, and therefore the country was flooded with foreign coin that was base, spurious and counterfeit, resulting in depreciated values and working great hardship on the people. In 1640, ten years before the establishment of the Colonial Mint, conditions were so severe that it is related of one Rowley that in order to pay his servant he had to give him a pair of oxen, and told him he couldn't keep him longer as he didn't know how to pay him at the end of the next year. The servant replied, "I will stay for more oxen." "But what shall I do when my oxen are gone?" exclaimed Rowley. "Oh, well," said the servant, "then you can serve me, and so get your oxen back again."

Early Mediums of Exchange

At the time of the establishment of the Massachusetts silver mint the people were in great straits for want of a convenient medium of exchange. The use of furs, grain and fish for purposes of exchange, and the payment of private debts as well as taxes, had existed from the first settlement of the country. In Marblehead, while Signor Blitz was giving a performance, a large number of people paid for their admission in fish, the receipts of this currency amounting on one occasion to over $20. This currency at least was preferable to the eggs many present-day actors receive. In some parts of Mexico pieces of soap passed in exchange for merchandise. In the back settlements of Oregon the only money consisted of livestock currency. A hog was one dollar; a sheep fifty cents; turkeys twenty-five cents each; and a pup twelve and one-half cents. So if A owed B $4 and ninepence, he sent him five hogs and received in change one sheep, one turkey and one pup. Our forebears certainly had the proper idea of values.

Oldmixon says in his history that in Virginia "the common way of traffick is by barter or exchange of one commodity for another, or of any for tobacco." To better appreciate the value of a stable and common currency I need but remind you that as late as 1840 in Iowa the marriage fee was three goat skins, or four bushels of sweet potatoes. Just why "the goat" was chosen I will leave to your surmise. It must always be remembered that the efforts of the colonists to provide their own coinage were all in violation of the laws under which they were then living. Measures to repress such coinage became more and more burdensome. In 1684 the charter of the Massachusetts Bay Company was revoked and the Governor recalled, the grievance by the Crown being the Colonial law concerning the Mint. Other Colonies had similar experiences, notably Maryland, and New York. Lord Baltimore was arrested for issuing Maryland shillings, while repressive measures were instituted against several of the Colonies. The Plantation of New England was never forgiven for this overt act. So we find long before the Navigation or Stamp Acts the matter of coinage was a potent factor in leading up to the final rupture.

An Impressive Defence

In a certain tract written in 1688, entitled "New England Vindicated," we find this defence of the colonists: "As to what is objected about Coyning many Goldsmiths in London can testifie that the money Coynd in New-England is as good as that of England and not of a baser Alloy (as is suggested). It was formerly customary for private persons in England to Coyn Farthing for their own use, and the Coyning in Massachusetts Colony was little more than that, and with design to prevent the great Injuries Merchants and others sustained by base Spanish Money. And the mint was set up in 1652 when there was no King in England, but the Government out of course [Charles was beheaded Jan. 30th, 1649; some authorities say '48, the confusion no doubt arising from the fact that the civil year at that time began March 21st. Cromwell assumed his title December 16th, 1663]; and when the ancient Government of England was resettled, and the King's mind to the contrary signified to them, they resolved to comply therewith, though many ways disadvantageous to themselves. Was not the value of Coyn altered in Pensilvania? Did not the Lord Baltimore in Maryland Coyn Money with his own Image on one side, and his Coat of Arms on the other? Did not the East India Company? But when they understood their Error, they petitioned the King for liberty of Coynage, and pardon what was past. And it was granted them. Why, then, should New-England be esteemed more criminal than other Plantations?"

It is not surprising that the Pilgrims and Puritans sympathized with the reformers. As the struggle for liberty took definite form, more especially after the Declaration of Independence, several States struck pieces in copper and silver for use within their borders, the Carolinas alone not joining in this (although in 1694). The designs by Franklin all bore the characteristic motto "Mind your business." Many others had patriotic sentiments, while those of New York were more outspoken and defiant, bearing legends as follows: Inimica Tyrannis Americana (America, the enemy of Tyranny); Non vi Virtute vici (Not by might but by virtue I conquer); Libernatur Libertatum Defendo (Born free I defend my liberty), etc., etc. Most of the other States showed their teeth in a similar way. A complete description of two pieces of the period will prove of interest as being representative of them all.

Was There Anything Franklin Couldn't Do?

The beautiful Libertas Americana medal was designed by Franklin and executed by Dupre. On the obverse is a head of Liberty with cap and pole, date, Jul 4, 1776, to commemorate the Declaration of Independence. On the reverse "Non sine diis animosus infans" (The infant strength was dependent upon the gods). Infant Hercules in cradle strangling a serpent with each hand. Minerva or Pallas standing over him, repelling the attack of a lion, protecting him with her shield, which is surcharged with the lilies of France, and against which the lion has placed his front paws. The dates, 17 Oct., 1777, and 19 Oct., 1781, on the reverse, are those of the surrender of Burgoyne at Saratoga and Cornwallis at Yorktown. Hercules represents the Colonies, the serpents the two armies, the dates the two surrenders. Minerva shows the friendly attitude of France, which she represents, and the Lion of course represents Great Britain. It is interesting to note that the Liberty head and Hercules are taken from a coin of Crotona 300 B. C. The inscription is from Horace.

The piece I am about to describe is of great interest, as it is made of silver given by Washington from his own private plate, so deep was his concern that the country have a coinage of its own, and so take its place among the nations. Obverse shows bust of Martha Washington, date 1792. Inscription, abbreviated, "Liberty Parent of Science and Industry." Reverse, flying eagle, "Uni. States of America Half-Disme." It can easily be seen that this also was the work of a French artist.

It is hardly too much to say that the history of the colonies, especially after the English settlement at Jamestown in 1607, and particularly in the events leading to the Revolution and the founding of our Government, can be accurately read on the coins and medals of the period. The same may be said of all our national crises and the career of our great men.

In the 'Sixties

The issues of the Civil War period may be dismissed with brief mention, although there were over 5000 varieties, many bearing patriotic mottoes, etc. In the main they were so linked with commercialism as to lose favor and failed to secure a permanent place. Still they were called into being because of a great need. Currency was again unobtainable, and something must be provided to serve as a circulating medium. These supplied the need, and because of this are more or less interesting. During this period encased postage stamps in denominations of one to ninety cents served as necessity money, circulating freely at face value. There is also another interesting series, called the Private or Pioneer Gold, but hardly coming within the scope of this paper.

Hard Times Tokens

The series that of late years has increased most in interest is the so-called Hard Times Tokens, 1833 to 1844. They form a group by themselves as distinct as the others mentioned, but unlike the others they had no semblance of authority behind them. They were issued during one of the darkest periods of our national existence—at a time when one of the phrases of the day was "Money is a cash article and hard to get for daily needs." With their sarcastic allusions, their catch-words of party cries, such as "The Union Must and Shall Be Preserved," "Down With the U. S. Bank," "I Follow in the Footsteps of My Illustrious Predecessor," "Millions for Defence, But Not One Cent For Tribute," "My Policy," "The Constitution As I Understand It," etc., etc., they picture to us most vividly the troublous times and the giants of intellect and achievement these times produced, for these were the days of Webster, Jackson and Clay, of Benton, Calhoun and Seward, beside many other of our greatest men. Mr. Low, the eminent authority, says regarding this series: "Certainly there never was a time when the old maxim that 'Cheap money drives out the good' was more clearly exemplified than in the days when these tokens were passing from hand to hand. But worthless as these were, because of their lack of responsible backing, they were infinitely preferable to the wild-cat currency and the filthy shinplasters which for a few months previous to the panic of 1837 deluged the whole country."

These seem to be worthy of record as marking a period which has no parallel in our history, if, indeed, a parallel can be found in the numismatic history of any people. We must bear in mind the absolute necessity of issuing these pieces, for specie payment had been suspended, and nothing of small denomination was in circulation. We did not reach quite the extremity of our Canadian neighbors, where buttons were freely used as a circulating medium. These tokens had the same intrinsic value as the Government coinage, so met with favor among the people and did not incur the displeasure of Government. For sake of convenience these are usually divided into groups as follows:

- 1.—Those having reference to the controversy about the U. S. Bank.
- 2.—Those bearing popular satirical and political maxims of the period.
- 3.—Those with devices and inscriptions and imitating more or less closely the legal coinage.
- 4.—Shop cards of the period dated.

It is interesting to note that in the study of these tokens it was discovered that the popular phrase "Millions for Defence, But Not One Cent for Tribute" did not originate, as supposed for nearly a century, with Charles Cotesworth Pinckney of South Carolina, our Minister to France in 1796, but was first used by Robert Goodloe Harper, also of South Carolina, at a banquet given in honor of John Marshall, the great jurist. Pinckney did use the phrase at the time France was trying to force us into helping her in her war with England. Tallyrand, Napoleon's great Minister, secretly sent word to Pinckney that war could be averted by the payment of large bribes to certain officials. Pinckney with indignation resented the insult, giving utterance to the remark quoted. This act immediately raised him to the highest point in popular esteem throughout America.

In Honor of Washington

Although not in order of issue, I have purposely left the Washington pieces until the last, as these form one of the most interesting chapters in the history of numismatics, and this is the month of his birth.

No persons save only Julius Caesar and Napoleon Bonaparte have had struck in their honor and to perpetuate their memory so many coins and medals as has Washington. There was this distinction, however; Caesar and Napoleon, we may be sure, not only approved, but in many instances ordered the "honors," while most of the Washington contemporary pieces were struck in direct opposition to his wishes. What person does history show, excepting Marcus Aurelius, who was so great in being a master of men, but greater still in always being master of himself? Many of the tributes to Washington's greatness seem to me like indexes pointing to facts and like beacon lights pointing milleniumward.

Baron Steuben, with the knowledge of war taught him by the greatest tactician since Caesar, offers his purse and person to Washington, and by changing the raw recruits into the disciplined soldiers during that dreadful winter at Valley Forge undoubtedly saved a nation. The Baron's master, the great Frederick, modestly sends to Washington a sword inscribed "From the Oldest living General to the Greatest." To an Englishman must we give credit for the execution of the finest medal struck in Washington's honor bearing this glorious tribute, "He laid the foundation of American Liberty in the 18th Century. Innumerable millions yet unborn will venerate the memory of the man who obtained their country's freedom," while the highest encomiums sounded in his praise, when still living, came from across the sea. Another Englishman more than a century ago left a large sum to erect and maintain an institution in the city that Washington founded that should preserve for all time the ethnology of this continent, and while the passions engendered by fratricidal strife were still raging an Englishman reverently suggests that every ship when passing Mt. Vernon should toll its bell, a custom that is still observed. These incidents, to my mind, show conclusively that down deep in the hearts of these people of one blood there is a great longing for the time when war, strife and discord shall be no more.

Another Great American

Notwithstanding this almost universal esteem, to his own countrymen must be laid the charge that Washington was a Dictator and ambitious to found a dynasty. Much of this can be found in printed works of the period, but it is pleasant to relate that of all the hundreds of Washington pieces there is but one that is satirical, and so coldly was this received that only two are known, and not one pays any attention to these. We may be surprised that in face of the stupendous achievement wrought by Washington there could be found those among his own people who would deride and belittle him. But it is ever thus. Soon we will celebrate the birthday of the second greatest American, the gentle Lincoln, who bore upon his heart the burdens and sorrows of a nation, but these were light compared with the jibes and jeers heaped upon him by many of his countrymen, as shown by the numerous pamphlets, caricatures and medals of his day. Let us be thankful that we have lived to see as has been well said of one less great,

"And fate that then denied him,
And envy that decried him,
And malice that belied him
Have cenotaphed his name."

The vast importance of preserving the records inscribed on metal has been recognized by many of our public-spirited and philanthropic citizens, and the results of years of effort and the expenditure of enormous sums of money on the part of private individuals are to be found in the great museums and libraries of the world.

I have tried in a very simple way to show that the student or historian of epoch-making events, if he would do justice to his subject and crown his endeavor with success, must, in addition to making use of document and tradition, supplement these by critical and exhaustive study of contemporaneous coins and medals. In closing, I again use the words of another. "I cannot commend too highly the value attaching to a fine collection of medals. As a 'thing of beauty' and of historical interest nothing can equal such a cabinet. They are a library in themselves to which the possessor can refer as to a biography or an encyclopedia. In brief I would say, that the collecting of medals merits from all students of history the same esteem which they pay to a well-filled library of historical books; which, indeed, hath no testimony more solid than that of medals to justify its facts."

A CORRECTION

In Mr. Moore's very able and painstaking paper in the January issue of THE NUMISMATIST I would like to call attention to one error, namely, on page 7 where he states that the Stoner and Shroyer Lincoln token was unknown to me at the time of the publication of the original Lincoln list in 1924. Such is not the case as I had one in copper in my collection at that time and have added a silver specimen to my cabinet since then, a metal not mentioned in any of the collections listed by Mr. Moore and which I consider rare.

At the time of the compilation of the Lincoln list in 1924 I asked the assistance of Mr. Howland Wood of the A. N. S. in the classification of the Civil War Tokens; this he very graciously consented to give me, and the list of all 18 and 19 M. Lincoln pieces was sent him; he designated all he considered strictly war tokens, saying that while undoubtedly others of the same period were classed by some as war tokens he did not so regard them. The list was published according to his classification, the Stoner and Shroyer token being included among the Store Cards, being numbered 637.

The 18 M. Key Lincolns are also listed as first Campaign issues (Nos. 114 to 124 inclusive), while the same obverse with the Mason & Company reverse is listed among the Store Cards as No. 638.

It seems eminently fitting that in this present month of February—the birth month of Washington and of Lincoln—we should give some attention to two medals of great distinction, each worthy to commemorate the man whose portrait it bears; and no higher praise than this could be given.

The artists responsible for these two medals were Augustus Saint-Gaudens and J. Edouard Roiné.

AUGUSTUS SAINT-GAUDENS

While acknowledging the greatness of certain other sculptors, it seems entirely just that Saint-Gaudens has been rated as the greatest of any in modern times. Among his best known sculptures are the Sherman (equestrian) and the Farragut, in New York City; the Shaw Memorial, in Boston; the standing Lincoln, in Chicago; the Pilgrim, in Philadelphia; and the Adams monument, in Rock Creek Cemetery, Washington.

His medallic work consists of only three examples: the Washington medal, here described; the obverse of the Columbian Exposition medal, and one of the painter, John S. Sargent—this last apparently a cast piece, the existing number unknown to the writer: certainly very few, if, indeed, more than one. One is tempted to include the ten-dollar and twenty-dollar gold pieces of 1907—for his final models were medallic in character—but our modern coinage must “stack,” and we are all familiar with the final outcome: distinctive, it is true, not what Saint-Gaudens intended.

An interesting story is connected with the production of the Washington medal here illustrated. In 1899 Mr. William A. Coffin was manager of “The Loan Exhibition of Historical Portraits and Relics” and a member of the Committee on Art for the celebration of the centennial anniversary of the inauguration of Washington as our first President. This commemorative medal was issued under its supervision. It was proposed to Saint-Gaudens that he undertake the commission, but he declined accepting full responsibility on account of pressure of other work. He did, however, offer to design and supervise the modeling without remuneration, if one of his able pupils, Philip Martiny, would collaborate.

But the task went forward with extreme slowness for months, owing to the tendency of Saint-Gaudens to change and revise again and again if he thought his work was bettered thereby. Martiny finally despaired of its completion, and only through the intercession of Mr. Coffin did Saint-Gaudens finally approve, and the medal was cast and ready for the celebration.

Augustus Saint-Gaudens was born in Dublin, Ireland, on March 1st, 1848. He died at Cornish, New Hampshire, on August 3rd, 1907. Between these dates is recorded a life filled with absolute devotion to his ideal of perfection expressed in sculpture. To survey all his work is to marvel that one genius in one short lifetime could accomplish so much—incredible industry, superb skill.

MEDALLIC PORTRAIT OF LINCOLN BY ROINÉ

The Reminiscences of Augustus Saint-Gaudens, edited and amplified by his son, Homer Saint-Gaudens, published in 1913 by The Century Company, should prove intensely interesting.

J. EDOUARD ROINÉ

J. Edouard Roiné, American sculptor and medalist, was born in Nantes, France, in 1858. He came to America in 1881, returned to France in 1898, exhibiting in the Paris Salon, where he received honorable mention; two years later he was awarded the first medal at the Paris Exposition. Some of his works were acquired by the Luxembourg Museum in Paris; he is also represented in Venice, and at the Metropolitan in New York City. At the International Exhibition of Contemporary Medals held at the building of the American Numismatic Society in New York in 1910 he exhibited twenty-seven pieces.

His skill as an artist and his rare ability to translate character through his medallic portraiture are richly evident in this medal of the Great Emancipator. It is undoubtedly the most satisfying of any which have been struck since Lincoln's death—and their number is legion. Possibly the one nearest in excellence is Victor D. Brenner's, with the "Preserve, Protect, Defend" reverse.

This medal of Roiné's made its appearance in an unusual setting: it was mounted in a circular, close fitting opening cut in a heavy, built up section of the same thickness as the medal, in which it was inserted, the obverse and reverse thus showing, the section occupying the center of a book, which bore the title of The Lincoln Centennial Medal. This was published in 1908 by G. P. Putnam's Sons, and contained a sketch on the origin and symbolism of the medal by George N. Olcott; an account of the Lincoln Centenary—1809-1909—by Richard Lloyd Jones; and certain characteristic utterances by Lincoln—altogether a novel and very beautiful combination.

By the way, one of the Lincoln "quotations" is of the famous "Letter to Mrs. Bixby on the Death of Her Five Sons in Battle"—a notable utterance; but, according to Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, long the President of Columbia University, who tells a heretofore untold story in his recent "Across the Busy Years" (a fascinating and important autobiography), Lincoln did not write the letter, its real author being John Hay. The circumstances of the whole affair, with reasons for the long concealed authorship, are told convincingly and in detail.

Roiné must be given credit for the bronze portrait of another great American—that of Grover Cleveland. This is a plaquette 3 x 3½ inches, produced in 1908. It is a seated portrait of Cleveland in his later years, and is an extremely fine piece of medallic art, its low relief contrasting sharply with the boldness of the Lincoln.

NEWS AND COMMENTS FROM THE LIBRARY

By TED R. HAMMER, Librarian-Curator

(ANA LIBRARY NUMBERS TO BE USED IN ORDERING)

December, as usual, showed a decline in the number of books loaned, although there were more letters from members for information and the usual amount of queries from non-collectors, most of whom want to sell their old coins in order to buy war bonds and war stamps. We have not as yet found any real rarities among such offerings.

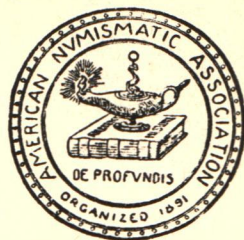

Library additions included: (D-38) "Check List of Wooden Money," by Emil DiBella (August, 1942, issue, Numismatic Scrapbook) bound separately and placed in the library. This contains a list of virtually all wooden nickels and represents extensive research by Mr. DiBella, whose work in the necessity money and similar fields is well known. This book fills a long felt need in the ANA library, as we have had frequent requests for such a list. The work will be bound along with the complete set of 1942 Numismatic Scrapbook magazines, in addition to this separate volume.

"The Medals of the United States Army Medical Department and Medals Honoring Medical Officers," (H-49) by Edgar E. Hume, a colonel in the army medical corps. The work is a comprehensive study of this specialized field and contains in addition to the 146 pages of reading matter nearly 50 illustrations of high quality. The detail with which the author prepared various parts of the book is great enough to frighten any embryo numismatist-author who might hazard an attempt in a less painstaking manner. Of particular interest is the biographical matter obtained on the different persons covered in this work. The author explains in his introduction that the work considered "only medals that have been awarded in recognition of scientific or academic attainment. . . . The difficulty experienced by the author in obtaining data about the medals described herewith, and the even greater task of securing photographs of each medal, convince him that this is a neglected subject, though surely of considerable numismatic interest." The book is another of the Notes and Monographs of the American Numismatic Society.

Another welcome addition which will prove valuable in years to come as well as in the present is a copy of "The Coins of the West Indies" (silver and copper) including the cut and counterstamped pieces (R-54). Wayne Raymond, Inc., compiled and published this book, which is No. 10 in The Coin Collector series, containing over 200 illustrations, and is of the same high quality as to paper, etc., as the rest of their publications. Here is a brief but interesting work which the advanced as well as the new collector of coins of the West Indies will find interesting and authoritative. More than 300 coins of Antigua, Bahamas, Barbados, Bermuda, Jamaica, Trinidad, Windward Islands, Guadeloupe, Martinique, San Domingo, Curacao, St. Eustatius, Danish West Indies, Dominican Republic, Cuba, Porto Rico, and Haiti, are described, plus those of the various Indies' coins which are counterstamped. Serving as librarian has made us prejudiced in favor of books to which one can turn to find a description in short order, and the present book, like others in this series, fills that requirement. The library is indebted very much to Mr. Raymond for his many donations.

MORE ABOUT THE RE-ENGRAVED JEFFERSON NICKEL

I was very pleased to hear from quite a few fellow collectors following my communication appearing in the November issue of THE NUMISMATIST on the re-engraved nickel of 1939. I am happy to report that much interest was shown in this coin. Most of the writers did not understand what the coin looked like, and therefore did not know whether or not they possessed one, so I have prepared a rough sketch to give an idea what to look for. Remember only to look at 1939 Jefferson's, as this is the only Jefferson nickel that has been re-engraved up to the present time.

MONTICELLO FIVE CENTS

Notice that the E PLURIBUS UNUM and the words UNITED STATES are solid letters, while the words MONTICELLO and FIVE CENTS are made up of double lines. The easiest method I have found is to look at the two L's in MONTICELLO as they seem to be thick to the naked eye. I can honestly say I am thrilled when I find one of these nickels after going through several hundred; they are seemingly quite scarce, and up to the present time only twenty have been found.

Again I thank all of you for your very interesting letters and for your interest.

JUST A THOUGHT

"Every man takes care that his neighbor shall not cheat him. But a day comes when he begins to care that he does not cheat his neighbor. Then, all goes well. He has changed his market cart into a chariot of the sun."

AN INTERESTING QUIZ PROGRAM

At the meeting of the Boston Numismatic Society held on November 30 the following questions were submitted to those in attendance as a part of the evening's program. They have thoughtfully sent them to the Editor of The Numismatist, believing other clubs or individual collectors would find them equally interesting. The answers will be found elsewhere in this issue.

1. What is the earliest known form of currency?
2. In Lapland and portions of Sweden and Norway the amount of wealth possessed is denominated in reindeer. Among the Eskimos it is customary to speak of one another as worth so-many (???).

THE INNER GIFT

By DUDLEY BUTLER, New York City

It was very cold in Paris on Christmas Eve, 1740, and Jacques Lalour, a student at the Sorbonne, was trying to keep his hands warm over a miserable little fire of twigs. He would much rather have been with a crowd of roistering companions in some wine shop but there were two very good reasons why he was not. In the first place he did not have the money, and the second was that he was waiting in his room in the hope that he would receive a message from his father, who lived in Senlis. He had decided not to go to Senlis for Christmas, for in those days they did not have the long vacations now enjoyed in every public school. The Christmas vacation consisted in Christmas day, that and nothing more.

Now to walk to Senlis would have taken about four hours. He did not have the money to pay his fare on the stage coach, and to spend eight hours of Christmas day on foot seemed foolish.

In northern France the winter days are very short; the hours of daylight are only from about 8 A. M. to 4 P. M. And so, even if he did make the effort to go to Senlis and spend Christmas with his father it would mean that a good part of this journey would have to be made after dark, and no one but an idiot would be alone then on the Senlis road; there were too many bandits. It was bad enough in the day time, but after dark . . . !

His father was not well enough to come to Paris even by the stage coach, and even if he had been, it is doubtful if he would have wanted to spend the money for he was in reduced circumstances and it was about all he could do to put his son through the Sorbonne at all.

But here was the situation which confronted Jacques at that moment. In another week his tuition fee would be due, also his room rent, to say nothing of the cost of his food. To be sure he was making a little money here and there by tutoring, but not nearly enough to carry him through.

He had not heard from his father in some weeks and he was anxious that Christmas would bring a message of some sort. If it did not arrive he did not know exactly what he would do—and he was in his room hoping against hope that something would happen. He put the last remaining twig on the fire and drew his chair close to the blaze.

At that moment there came a knock on the door, and on opening it he was amazed to see his father's old man-of-all-work, Raoul.

"Why, Raoul," he exclaimed, "how did you get here? Did you come by stage coach?"

"No, Monsieur Jacques," replied Raoul. "I walked. You see I had intended to come to Paris anyway to visit my sister for a day or two, and then to return to Senlis. I walked here and I shall walk back for I cannot afford the stage coach. Your father knew I was coming and asked me to give you this."

He handed Jacques a letter and continued his narrative. "As you know the road between here and Senlis is infested by robbers, and even the coach is no longer safe. In fact I was stopped and searched by one party. I suppose these four copper coins which I had were beneath their

NATIONAL COIN WEEK

By LEWIS M. REAGAN, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Director of Publicity, A. N. A.

The week of April 11-17 has been designated this year as National Coin Week. As in previous years, the purpose of this observance is to render a public service in calling attention to the educational and recreational advantages of numismatics, in assisting the public to become better acquainted with the history of our national coinage and of the coinages of other countries, past and present, to celebrate important milestones in the history of these coinages, and to promote interest and growth in the local organizations of coin collectors and in the American Numismatic Association.

The observance of National Coin Week is marked by special publicity in newspapers, radio talks, extensive exhibits in public places placed by collectors, banks, and local clubs, and by giving it special prominence in the programs of meetings of local clubs. This kind of annual observance has been highly successful in previous years as a result of the splendid cooperation of collectors, dealers, clubs and the newspapers. We have a greater opportunity this year than ever before to make National Coin Week the outstanding numismatic event of the year.

The change in coinages as a result of the war has created a greater interest in coins among non-collectors than usual; the existence of numerous coins and medals showing portraits of famous military and naval leaders and of coins and medals struck to commemorate important victories or for distinguished service furnishes a rich field for exhibits that would be of special interest and value. Also, we have a most important sesquicentennial to celebrate—the 150th anniversary of the United States One Cent piece, first struck in 1793 and in every year since that time except 1815. It is the same anniversary of the Half Cent's first appearance, and as these two coins were the first to be struck by the mint for general circulation, we pay honor to 150 years of a most important service rendered by the Philadelphia Mint.

In order to realize the aims of National Coin Week to the fullest extent it will be necessary for every member of the Association to have a part. Plan now to exhibit a part of your collection. Officers of local coin clubs should appoint a committee at once to arrange exhibits and publicity. Coin dealers are invited to cooperate, as they have so generously in the past, with offers of prizes, publicity, and their own special exhibits. The Committee will send material to assist in the preparation of newspaper articles or radio talks, printed exhibit cards, stickers, and all other assistance possible. The March and April issues of THE NUMISMATIST will include further announcements and articles, and the list of prizes to be offered will be announced. The Committee will prepare publicity for general newspaper release but Clubs and members should arrange for publicity in their own local newspapers. It is not too soon to begin to prepare this now.

The A. N. A. Committee is not yet complete but the following have accepted appointment to it: Lewis M. Reagan, Chairman; Ted R. Hammer, Martin F. Kortjohn, Louis S. Werner.

LOOKING BACKWARD

THROUGH THE EARLY FILES OF THE NUMISMATIST

FIFTY YEARS AGO

Mention is made for the first time of the request of Mrs. Potter Palmer, Chairman of the Board of Lady Managers, Columbian Exposition, that a souvenir 25 cent piece be issued, the obverse to show the head of Queen Isabella of Spain. The head of a foreign monarch—even if no longer among the living—on a U. S. coin was regarded as a decided “novelty.” We must admit it has appreciated in market value far beyond that of its companion piece, the Columbian half dollar.

Among the miscellaneous items, and without hint of the reason for giving such blunt prominence, we find the following six word statement: “No. 118 has paid his dues.” Was this a reticent tribute to the collecting ability of the Secretary, which might carry with it a hint to certain laggards, or was it intended as a shining example of promptness?

“We read in the newspapers,” says another item, “that ex-Senator Tabor of Denver makes use of a $20,000 gold nugget as a paper weight. As a nugget of this value should weigh about 65 pounds, it is probable that when he places it upon a paper he knows ‘where it is at.’” At the present price of gold, how much would a $20,000 “nugget” weigh, f.o.b. Fort Knox?

An excerpt from the report of the President (Dr. Heath) reads as follows: “That there is need for such an organization as ours, national in character, there can no longer be doubt. That this Association, of which we are pioneer members, will be permanent we as firmly believe. Changes may come, the clay will be remodeled until the potter will scarcely recognize the original model, but the bowl will be finished. The American Numismatic Association has come to stay.” Faith, wearing the garment of prophecy.

FORTY YEARS AGO

“Several hundred subscriptions expired with our December issue, and if prompt renewals and words of encouragement count for anything, the editor of THE NUMISMATIST should be supremely happy, and we are; at the same time we appreciate the measure of our responsibility to our readers and the fulfillment of their expectations for the year ahead. The history of this magazine has ever been one of progress, and we wish each one of our readers could see a copy of our little four-page bi-monthly issue of our first year 1888, and go along with us the years between of trials and disappointments, through clouds and storms into sunshine.”

On the “Exchange” page we find our late friend W. F. Dunham of Chicago advertising for certain rare coins, among them the Half Eagle of 1822! Well, he got it three years later from the Harlan P. Smith sale and paid $2,165. In the sale of the famous Dunham collection in 1941, by Mehl, this same piece brought $11,575.

Another "Want" from the same department: C. W. Cowell of Denver (who loved his U. S. gold) advertises for a "$50.00 California gold piece, either octagonal or round or both." If such a piece "both" octagonal and round were discovered, its price might even top that of the Dunham Half Eagle. The press notice of such a discovery might be headed "Reprehensible Carelessness at the Mint."

And A. W. Crans of Davenport advertises for "1794 and 1738 silver dollars." Maybe he got the first named; the proofreader might have solved the mystery of the "1738" issue.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

The issue of February, 1913, is one of real distinction. The first article is entitled "The Decadrachms of Syracuse," by Dr. T. L. Comparette. A notable collection containing over twenty specimens of this, the most famous of all coins, had recently been sold in Europe, and Dr. Comparette discusses their history, with special attention to the two artists, Cimon and Euainetos, whose superb skill has never been equalled in the coinage of succeeding ages. The article is finely illustrated.

Howard R. Newcomb lists and illustrates nineteen reverse die and mint mark varieties of the U. S. standard dollar of the 1878-1879-1880 issues. And there is an extensive article by Waldo C. Moore on "A. Loomis and His Store Cards," entailing a considerable amount of research work, dealing with his favorite subject of Ohio numismatics.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

H. D. Allen continues his important story of "The Paper Money of the Confederate States," the series extending beyond the year of 1918, and developing collateral history throughout. It is far more than an illustrated catalogue of these issues, and is the product of an immense amount of study, with the true historian's insistence on evidence, and then more evidence.

Then there is a long but interesting paper by Carl Wurtzbach on "Numismatic Facts and Fancy." This is worthy of republication and will be found elsewhere in this issue. Incidentally, we may, from time to time, publish articles of outstanding value which, while appearing in THE NUMISMATIST many years ago, have as great value in the immediate present.

Twenty-two pages are given to the proceedings of the 60th annual meeting of the American Numismatic Society, including reports of officers and committees—and not a dull page in the lot. Many of us will no doubt live to see this "ancient and honorable" Society celebrate its first 100 years—and by that time the A. N. A. will have passed its three-quarters of a century milestone.

ON ANOTHER PAGE—

You will find an important story of the plans for National Coin Week by Lewis M. Reagan, Director of Publicity. This annual observance has been set by President Ferguson for the week beginning April 11th. Mr. Reagan has some things to say that should keenly interest every member of the Association, and you are urged to give this article a thoughtful reading.

BOOK REVIEW

THE CASTINE DEPOSIT: AN AMERICAN HOARD. By Sidney P. Noe. New York: The American Numismatic Society. 1942.

This is No. 100 of the series "Numismatic Notes and Monographs" begun after the termination of the annual publication of The American Journal of Numismatics in 1920. For those who may be unfamiliar with the history of this notable journal, we may briefly state that it first appeared in May, 1866, continuing as a monthly until April, 1870; it was then issued as a quarterly from July, 1870, to October, 1912; thereafter it was published annually from 1913 to 1920, when its place was taken by the Monographs as above noted.

For over half a century this official journal of the Society served American numismatics with great distinction, and a complete file of its issues constitutes a rich mine of information, valuable not only in specific subjects treated, but to the careful reader in gradually revealing the development of the science in our own country, giving him in some degree a feeling of relationship with the past which deepens his interest and appreciation concerning the whole subject as it exists today.

These Monographs, which have just reached the significant total of 100, have maintained the high standard set by the Journal, both in quality and in diversification of subject.

The present one under review has to do with the discovery of a remarkable hoard of coins found at Castine, Maine, in 1840, an account of which was published by the Maine Historical Society in 1859, and into whose possession had come the seventeen pieces which finally remained out of the original lot of, according to one authority, about five hundred, and to another "nearly if not quite two thousand."

These and six others, possibly from the same hoard, were lent the Society for its spring exhibition (1942) of early coinages which circulated in America, and permission was granted to retain them for further study. The results are ably set forth by Mr. Noe (Secretary of the Society and Editor of the series of Monographs) in thirty-seven pages of text, and seven plates.

The original find was made up wholly of silver coins of France, Spain, Spanish America, Portugal, Holland, England and Massachusetts. The latest date discernible was 1690, a French demi-ecu from the Bordeaux mint. The Massachusetts pieces illustrated are shillings and six pences, of the willow tree variety, and in remarkably fine condition.

The finding of the hoard was related by Dr. Joseph Williamson in the Maine Historical Society's publication of 1859, and is interesting enough to quote:

"It was not on the peninsula that these coins were found, nor within the limits of the town of Castine, but on the banks or shores of the Bagaduce river, about six miles from the site of Castin's fort, in the town of Penobscot. This river, at its mouth, forms the harbor of Castine, and is navigable for small vessels for several miles above the village. At about six miles above, is a point called 'Johnson's Narrows,' or 'Second Narrows,' where the water is of great depth, and at certain periods of the tide forms a rapid current. . . . Near the narrows the coins were discovered.

"The first indication of the hidden coins was perceived at the close of one of the last days in November, 1840, by Captain Stephen Grindle, on the farm he owned and occupied at the Second Narrows, before described. While engaged with his son, Samuel Grindle, in hauling wood down the bank to the shore, the latter picked up a piece of money near a rock which was partially buried in the ground. The rock was on a side hill, and when uncovered, presented an irregular surface of about four square feet. Its situation was some twenty-five yards from the shore, and in the direct line of a beaten track through the bushes, which has been used as a path across the point for a time beyond the remembrance of the oldest inhabitants.

"At the termination of this path on the shore, is an indentation or landing place, well adapted for canoes, and the natural features and facilities of the spot are confirmatory of a tradition that one of the Indian routes from the peninsula to Mount Desert and Frenchman's Bay was up the Bagaduce river, and from thence across to Bluehill Bay. The land was very rocky, and covered with a second growth of trees; the original growth having been cut about seventy-five years. At the time the coins were found, Capt. Grindle, together with his father-in-law, Mr. Johnson, had resided on the farm for over sixty years. Portions of the top of the rock were embedded in the soil to the depth of a foot, and a clump of alders grew around. The appearance of the place is not now the same as when the discovery was made. Repeated digging has laid the rock bare to the depth of several feet, and the side hill has washed away.

"Upon finding the first coin, which proved to be a French crown, Capt. Grindle and his son commenced digging away the earth around the rock, and by the time it was dark, had possessed themselves of eighteen or twenty additional pieces. They then abandoned the search, intending to renew it on the following day. That night a severe snow storm occurred, which covered the ground, and rendered further investigations during the winter impracticable. Early in the spring they resumed the examination. On the top of the rock, embedded in the mass, one or two coins were found, and upon striking a crowbar in the declivity, and grubbing up the alders, they came upon a large deposit, numbering some four or five hundred pieces of the currency of France, Spain, Spanish America, Portugal, Holland, England, and Massachusetts. . . . The greater part of the money was found contiguous to the rock, but many pieces were afterwards exhumed ten or twelve feet distant. As several of the smaller coins appeared to be scattered down the declivity, it was probable that they were washed away by the action of the elements. No vessel or covering, or remains of any, were found in connection with the coins. Appearances indicated that the deposit was originally made at the side of, or perhaps on the rock, without any protection except a perishable one. Many of the coins retained their original brilliancy, but some were blackened and discolored by exposure to the weather."

"Most of the coins were paid to a creditor of Capt. Grindle, and ultimately found their way into the crucible of a silversmith. The exact amount which their fortunate discoverer realized probably exceeded five hundred dollars. No other money has ever since been discovered at Johnson's Point, but the extent of numerous excavations in its vicinity indicates that the neighboring inhabitants believe that additional treasures are yet concealed."

Mr. Noe discusses various theories as to the circumstances of depositing the coins, including the possibility of their having been hidden there by pirates (of whom there were many) and whose subsequent death might have prevented their return. He inclines to the belief, however, that they were hurriedly concealed there in flight from some attack on the fort or the town, but why the person or persons never were able to reclaim them must remain a mystery.

The origin of the various coins emphasizes the importance of Spanish American coinage in colonial days, and likewise the presence of Portuguese and Brazilian pieces indicates our young but growing commerce with South America.

Mr. Noe concludes with the wish that the discoverers of future hoards could understand their greater value lies in keeping the find wholly intact until thorough study is made possible.

CHRONOLOGY OF THE "ROMANO-CAMPANIAN" SILVER COINAGE

By PAUL PENNINGTON, Evanston, Ill.

The beginning of the "Romano-Campanian" coinage has been placed by early students late in the third century B. C., by Milne<sup>1</sup> between 300 and 269 B. C., by Mattingly<sup>2</sup> in 279 B. C., but by Mattingly and Robinson in 269 B. C.<sup>3</sup> This latter date is consistent with Pliny<sup>4</sup> if we assume, with Milne,<sup>5</sup> that the denarius refers to what we now call a didrachm, not the later coin marked "X" which today is commonly referred to as the denarius.

In 1924 Mattingly<sup>6</sup> advocated the dating of the "Romano-Campanian" coinage from the alliance of Rome with Carthage against Pyrrhus in 279 B. C.,<sup>7</sup> based on the use of the types "horse's head" and "free horse" on some of this coinage as distinctly Carthaginian in origin. Although the use of horse types on the coinage of Eastern Greek states was common, in the West it was only usual in Africa or in states coming under Carthaginian influence. This argument still seems valid; Mattingly gives no reason for the abandonment of this idea in 1933<sup>8</sup> other than accepting Pliny's date for the first Roman silver.

These types, horse's head and free horse, were never given any prominence on Roman coinage after their appearance on the "Romano-Campanian" series, a very potent argument for their not being essentially Roman.

It is suggested here that the date of 279 B. C. is more nearly correct than 269 B. C. because it was determined independently of Pliny, because Milne believes in an earlier origin, and because the Rev. E. A. Sydenham, as quoted by Mattingly,<sup>9</sup> also attributes it earlier even than 279 B. C. based on the resemblance of the head of Mars on the "Romano-Campanian" didrachm to a head on a coin of Metapontum of about 300 B. C. (See Fig. 1 and RC, Plate XXIII, No. 1.)

The "Romano-Campanian" silver falls into four groups:

I. Those inscribed "ROMANO" with types: bearded head of Mars, (Fig. 1.) horse's head, (Fig. 1.) free horse, wolf and twins, head of Apollo, Victory and head of Hercules. Weight about 7.29 grams for the didrachm, except those with Victory reverses which are about 6.64 grams, and consequently assumed to be later than the others of this group.

II. Those inscribed "ROMA" with types: head of Apollo (Fig. 2), head of Mars, horse's head and free horse. (Fig. 2.) Weight for the didrachm about 6.64 grams.

Silver Drachm 3.30 Grams
The "Victoriatus"

III. Those inscribed "ROMA" with beardless head of Janus on the obverse and Victory and Jupiter in quadriga on the reverse. The "Quadrigratus" when a didrachm; weight of the didrachm 6.64 to 5.50 grams or even less. (Fig. 3.)

IV. Those inscribed "ROMA" with bearded head of Jupiter on the obverse and Victory crowning a trophy on the reverse. The "Victoriatus" when a drachm, to which the issue is largely confined, and weighing about 3.4 to 3.0 grams. (Fig. 4.)

If 279 B. C. is the correct starting date for Group I and the horse's head and free horse types were used as complementary to Rome's ally,<sup>10</sup> or merely because the coins were to be used to pay campaign expenses in southern Italy where the people or the mercenary soldiers were accustomed to Carthaginian silver,<sup>11</sup> then we would not expect their use after 264 B. C., when Rome made war upon her former ally, Carthage. Therefore it is suggested that Group II was replaced by Group III about 264 B. C. The types of Group III are consistent with this view, for the Roman army went to war through the Janus gate of the Forum, and the god of beginnings and endings is a very fitting subject for a coin introduced at the start of this major war. The hope of a successful outcome of the war is nicely expressed by the victorious quadriga on the reverse. This use of the coin type is somewhat analogous to the "V" slogan of today.

If Group I was started in 279 B. C. and Group II ended in 264 B. C., then perhaps Group II was introduced in 269 B. C., Pliny's date for the first silver, which, since it was the earliest silver inscribed "ROMA," might have been considered by Pliny, or the sources upon which he based his statements, as the first Roman silver. Group I, inscribed "ROMANO," if known at all to Pliny, might have been looked upon as an issue of army commanders and not as a part of the coinage of the Roman state. This view is still held today to some extent.<sup>12</sup>

Since the coins of Group I are thus attributed to 279-269 B. C., and those with Victory type reverses, because of their light weight, were likely struck late within this period, it is here suggested that the Victory type was introduced in 275 B. C., when Pyrrhus withdrew from Italy. This victory for Rome was certainly important enough to be thus commemorated on the coinage.

The higher prices of specimens of Groups I and II compared with those of Group III, are consistent with the short period over which these coins were struck, based on the dating here advanced: 10 years (279-269 B. C.) and 5 years (269-264 B. C.) compared with 59 years (264-205 B. C.).

Group IV is dated by Mattingly and Robinson<sup>13</sup> from about 205 B. C. and by the Rev. Sydenham<sup>14</sup> from very close to the period 213-211 B. C. to about 168 B. C.

Group III was probably discontinued with the introduction of the victoriatas (Group IV), about 205 B. C., as may be inferred from Mattingly and Robinson's<sup>15</sup> statement: "The victoriate has a place intermediate between the quadrigatus and the 'X' denarius." The need for didrachms to compete with the Greek coins of the same order of weight, struck in Italy, would not be present after the fall of Syracuse to Rome in 212 B. C., when Greek coinage was almost entirely discontinued in the Italian peninsula.

The "Romano-Campanian" silver, according to the closing date of about 168 B. C. advocated by the Rev. Sydenham, survived the introduction of the denarius by about twenty years.

BRAZIL'S MONETARY SYSTEM CHANGES

(By permission the following article is reprinted from Time in its issue of November 9, 1942.)

In Brazil this week an event took place which to students of finance had the same rare value as an eclipse of the sun has to astronomers. By decree the country changed its monetary system from the complicated, 1,000-unit milreis to the streamlined, decimal-pointed cruzeiro (cross)—worth the same amount. Idea was to straighten out a currency system grown so complicated as to baffle even Brazilians. Examples:

Coins ranging from a hundred reis (smallest unit recently made, worth half a U. S. cent) to five milreis (25 cents) come in 25 different sizes. At times some have been worth more as metal than as money; always they have caused innumerable difficulties with such things as pay telephones, slot machines, etc.

Paper money, ranging from the one milreis "rag" to the 500-milreis sheet comes in 64 types, of all sizes, sorts and color schemes.

There was no doubt that Brazil needed new money. In recent weeks a currency shortage has been general, as well as a distortion of the ratio of money minted to money in circulation. The result of hoarding, inflation, illegal withdrawing of "frozen" Axis funds and the sinking recently of an American vessel loaded with new currency made up in the U. S., these conditions had already forced an eight-day bank holiday (TIME, Oct. 12). The time was ripe for a complete overhaul. The Government grabbed the opportunity.

That the new cruzeiro system would bring immediate relief seemed dubious. In effect, Brazil would get not only new money, but more money. Only gradually will the new 10, 20 and 50 centavo pieces, the new, uniform-size cruzeiro bills supplant the timeworn milreis. The new coins, copper, aluminum and zinc, minted since Oct. 12 are being released immediately, but surcharged milreis bills will for a time serve as cruzeiro bills.

Brazilians looking forward to a period of years before full substitution is completed, foresaw some head-scratching in that time. But in the end everyone is expected to be happier.

PRESENT DAY MERCHANTS TOKENS DECLARED ILLEGAL

Mr. Fred Greenclay of Denver has sent in a circular letter entitled "Why We Printed Paper Pennies," issued by the Boise (Idaho) Retail Merchants Bureau on November 30. The scarcity of copper cents having become acute, with little promise of early relief, the enterprising Boise merchants issued cardboard tokens, one inch square, printed in blue on both sides, the stated value being "One Cent," redeemable before June 1st, 1943. They were issued and will be redeemed at the Bureau.

However, in spite of the assurance of their legality by the local U. S. District Attorney, the Secretary of the Treasury has ruled otherwise—with warning—and presumably no more will be issued. Mr. Morgenthau urged that the Merchants Association cooperate to persuade people to turn in their savings of small coins or use them to purchase war savings stamps and bonds.

BREVITIES

Mr. John Garber of Cleveland announces the discovery of a 1918 five cent piece, D mint, the date clearly showing the 8 over a 7. Has anyone seen another specimen of this variety?

---

Mr. Fred Greenclay of Denver reports, on the authority of the local Federal Reserve Bank, that the Denver mint has struck none of the new five cent pieces with the silver content; that the manganese content requires an electric furnace; and that the Denver mint received sixty-five tons of copper during 1942, hence no scarcity of cents from that source.

---

Mr. William H. Owen, Associate Curator of Coins in the Yale University Library, writes that during the month of February there will be on exhibition there a complete set of issues of the Society of Medalists.

---

In Waldo C. Moore's article in the January issue, "The Stoner and Shroyer Tokens," the name under the third specimen in the half tone plate on page 8 should be that of Greeley instead of Franklin. Our apologies to Mr. Moore.

---

H. J. Erlanger, author of the article in our December issue, entitled "Medals on the City Government of Nuremburg," asks for certain corrections of typographical errors, as follows: the last word in line 3 should be Populusque; the fourth word in the last line but one should be hands; the figure in the fifth line of the last paragraph on page 883 should be 1349; the first word in the seventh line of the third paragraph, page 884, should be Septemviri; the name of the famous goldsmith mentioned near the bottom of page 884 is Jamnitzer; and the last medal described should read: A medal of 1723 on the 100th anniversary of the University of Altdorf, showing the four coats of arms of the members of the same committee. Mr. Erlanger ascribes the errors to the difficulty in having the MSS. typed after entering the Army.

WITH THE DEALERS

The Numismatic Gallery (A. Kosoff), New York, reports the prices realized in their Auction Sale No. 19, 1110 lots, on December 12, from which a few selections are made: Lots 45-68, a series of American Journal of Numismatics volumes brought $75.00; 180-187, the eight volumes of the Woodward sales (1862-1866), $30.00; the Chapman catalogues, mostly priced, Lots 17-44, brought good prices—the famous John Story Jenks sale of 1921, $10.00, and the Stickney sale of 1907, $5.00, to mention two examples. Many older volumes of THE NUMISMATIST went at prices that indicated some competition.

The modern gold found ready buyers at substantial figures: Lot 255, George IV of England, 5 pounds, proof, $165.00; Lot 262, a 5 pound piece, Victoria, proof, $170.00; Lot 273, Jubilee Medal of Victoria, 1887, proof, by Leighton and Wyon, $150.00; Lot 278, coronation medal of Edward VII and Alexandria, 1902, $155.00; Lot 379, Russia, 37½ roubles, 1902 proof, $315.00. An extremely fine U. S. half dime, 1792, brought $47.00. The sensational Grant commemorative half dollar, with star, realized $30.50. U. S. patterns sold well.

A fixed price catalogue of 34 pages issued by Numismatic Fine Arts (Edward Gans) is recently off the press, listing Ancient Greek and Roman—a comprehensive selection—including both gold and silver. There are indications of an increasing attention to these fields among collectors, and such catalogues as this with its careful classifications should be reviewed with interest.

---

M. H. Bolender announces his 150th sale for February 15th, consisting of over 1800 lots, in which will be found ancient, medieval and modern coins, U. S. and foreign gold, silver and coppers. One notes an uncirculated dollar of 1795, the rare half dollars of 1795 and 1796, the 1861 gold dollar, D mint, the 1793 and 1804 cents, and an 1843 half cent in proof condition. There is also a showing of paper money, including some C. S. A. 1861 Montgomery notes of $500 and $1000; and in autographs are listed, among others, some Lincoln, Napoleon, and Dickens items.

The results of the 10th sale (1000 lots) of the New Netherlands Coin Company, New York, on December 15, indicate much competitive bidding. The U. S. and foreign were about equal in volume. A proof silver 3 cent piece of 1864 (489) brought $19.50; a half dime of 1855, O mint, unc. (531), $5.00; the same of 1871, S mint, ex. fine, (542) $5.50; a brilliant proof two cents of 1872 (553), $8.50; a dime of 1796, gem, (584), $37.50. The 2 leaf variety of the 1795 half dollar, ex. fine (696), $20.25, and the scarce 1815, v. fine, $14.75. A complete set of commemorative gold—two quarter eagles and nine dollars, unc. (841) realized $82.50, and $335.00 was paid for a complete set of commemorative half dollars, selected specimens.

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The 67th meeting of the Society was held on January 11 in the Tyrolean Room of the Benson Hotel, Portland, with 20 members and two guests in attendance.

One exhibit was a $10 bill used by our Armed Forces in Africa, shown by Leonard Trythall. At first glance it might seem to be a gold certificate, but on closer inspection it turns out to be a silver certificate with alterations. Other fine displays were as follows:

Dr. Paul Firth: Counterstamped Cleveland half dollar, Leshar dollar, 1794 dollar and other coins.

Steven Bibler: The rare Oregon Beaver $5.00 gold in fine condition.

Geo. McLarty: A collection of large Canadian cents and tokens. One of the best displays of this type that has been shown at our meetings.

Henry Perry: An 1815 quarter, a complete set of Oregon Trail comm. half dollars, a nearly complete set of all comm. half dollars, and other U. S. coins in unc. condition.

Howard Hughes: Washington County (Ore.) Script, a real emergency money of not so long ago.

Ben F. Cook: U. S. currency (large), one of which was History Instructing Youth, all in crisp condition.

John Slusher: 1918 over 1917 S Quarter, and Small Motto 1864 two cent piece.

This meeting was highlighted by a very fine article, read by Howard Hughes, on what part we may expect gold to play in the future monetary system of our country as well of those of our Allies. The meeting closed with an auction, Leonard Trythall conducting.

At our next meeting coins from the Philippine Islands will be featured.

—John R. Slusher, Secretary.

There were eleven members and visitors present.

SPRINGFIELD COIN CLUB—

309th meeting, December 9th, 1942, held at the Museum of Fine Arts, President Wheeler presiding, with seven members and one visitor present.

Mr. Oliver suggested that testimonial letters be sent to the families of our two deceased members, Mr. Morse and Mr. Prevost. Mr. Morse, a charter member of the A. N. A., has been an active and ardent collector until very recently, and he will be missed greatly by the S. C. C.

After considerable discussion, it was decided to continue the monthly meetings as usual. Mr. Oliver suggested that we hold an auction for the benefit of the Club at the January meeting.

The exhibit by Mr. Oliver consisted of a complete showing of all issues of fractional currency including some very rare notes.

Since some of the newer members were not familiar with the "Henry S. Lee" collection belonging to the Museum, it was decided to exhibit at least a part of it at the January meeting.

—W. W. Willard, Secretary.

WESTERN MARYLAND COIN CLUB

—The regular monthly meeting of the Club was held Wednesday, December 16, in the Williams Room of the Central Y. M. C. A., President Morris presiding.

Member Wilson of the Program Committee reported that he had made an effort to contact several out of town dealers to visit us in the near future, but has no definite arrangements at this time. Member Cessna, District Secretary of the A. N. A., reported that he had obtained several membership applications for the A. N. A. He also reported that he would endeavor to make up a party of club members and visit the Frederick and Baltimore coin clubs some time after the first of the year. A discussion was held on the advisability of holding a coin show for the benefit of some worthy charity. No definite arrangements were made and each member of this society is regarded as a committeeman.

Member Bruce Fable rendered a very enlightening talk on tokens, displaying a number of them as illustrations. He reviewed the use of tokens during the Jacksonian era, the Civil War, and their present day use. Some of these tokens were originally put out as political campaign pocket pieces, and others as merchants' advertisements. But all of these at one time or another were used as money during money panics or scarcity of small coins, such as is being experienced today. Vice-President Fuller spoke on counterfeit money, in which he pointed out the fact that not only coins were counterfeited and passed as genuine, but that antique furniture, glassware and practically all choice collectors' items have been fraudulently imitated. He also stated that possibly five, ten and twenty dollar bills have been more frequently counterfeited than have coins in general, and that the penalty for these crimes is less severe today than in colonial times when the punishment for such fraud was death. Mr. Fuller displayed a group of counterfeit coins to illustrate his talk.

Member Cessna donated several numismatic publications to the Club library. The coin raffle was won by President Morris—an uncirculated 1934-D Mint set comprising the half dollar, quarter, dime, nickel and cent. A sale was then held, each member auctioning his own material.

—Charles H. Hyde, Secretary.

Gentlemen:

I wish to express my thanks and appreciation for your $370.00 check in payment of my coins.

It pleased me to receive your check in payment so promptly and I can assure you that your policy of "Highest Prices Paid" and "Prompt Payment on all Transactions" has been fulfilled exactly as represented.

Cordially yours,

HARRY B. JONES.

Ludlow, Mass.

Gentlemen:

Thank you for your check for $295.50 in payment of my deceased husband's collection. When I liquidated my husband's estate it was necessary for me to sell his collection.

You were highly recommended by a local bank executive who has been collecting stamps and coins for many years, and I concur in his opinion that you pay highest cash prices for such material.

It is indeed a pleasure to do business with an organization that handles their business transactions in such a prompt and efficient manner.

Very truly yours,

SYBIL WRIGHT.

Fort Collins, Colo.

Gentlemen:

I wish to acknowledge receipt of your remittance of $1120.00 in payment of my collection of United States coins recently submitted.

Permit me to express my thanks and appreciation for your prompt and satisfactory settlement.

Yours very truly,

RALPH F. TIDRICK.

St. Johnsbury, Vt.

Gentlemen:

Thank you for your remittance of $1696.00 in payment of my coin collection.

You may be interested in knowing that when I decided to sell my collection, I thoroughly investigated the auction method of disposal, and felt that your appraisal and cash offer gave me the best advantages. Incidentally, your offer was substantially more than I was offered elsewhere, and within 5 per cent. of what I actually expected to receive.

In the past, I have purchased many of my coins from the Tatham Stamp & Coin Company, and find that whether the collector wishes to buy or sell, you offer the same fair and courteous treatment.

Very truly yours,

E. R. ROSSELET.

Our reputation for fair dealing is world-wide. The testimonials we list above are only a few of many on file. Note: Peter the Great decided to modernize the Russians and started it by ordering that everybody had to be shaved. Protests were vehement and Peter the Great, like any modern Government had to compromise. The method was undemocratic but profitable to the Russian Treasury. It consisted of a heavy tax against payment of which beards could be conserved. The Beard Kopek was the tax receipt.

THE SESQUI-CENTENNIAL OF THE ONE CENT PIECE

By LEWIS M. REAGAN, Brooklyn, New York
Director of Publicity, A. N. A.

The year 1943 marks an important milestone in the history of our national coinage, namely, the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of our one cent piece. In our observance of National Coin Week, and other numismatic activities this year, it is appropriate that we pay honor to this most familiar and useful item in our commercial transactions and everyday life.

The Philadelphia Mint, established in 1792 under an act of Congress of that year, began operations with the striking of a few patterns, but no coins were struck for general circulation until the following year, when the cent and half cent made their first appearance.

The bill, authorizing the establishment of the Mint, was first presented in January of 1792 and included a provision that the portrait of the President of the United States should appear on all coins. This was passed by the Senate but struck out by the House. Even then, the measure was passed by a vote of only 33 to 22. The Senate held out for the President's portrait but finally yielded, and the measure was passed and signed by President Washington on April 2, 1792.

Early Days of the Mint

The early operation of the mint, then located on Seventh Street in Philadelphia on property upon which was formerly a distillery (The Frank H. Stewart Electric Co. building stands there now), was severely handicapped by inadequate machinery, mostly hand operated, insufficient funds, and inexperienced employees. The use of horses and oxen was of some assistance in the rolling mills, but the striking of coins was done by man-power. A steam engine was installed in 1816 but was not used for striking coins. Steam coinage presses were first used in 1836 after the mint had been moved to its second location at Juniper and Chestnut Streets. Helpful and efficient assistance was rendered the night watchman in the first years of the mint by a savage dog, named Nero, purchased by the mint for $3.00.

The dies were cut by Robert Scot, who entered the employ of the Mint in November, 1793, and the design was in accordance with the act of authorization (see Supplement). It is believed that the obverse was an imitation of the bust on the medal made by the French artist Dupre, struck to commemorate the victories of Saratoga and Yorktown. At first, the pole and cap were omitted, but later, in the same year, these, too, were added.

The design was not received with approval by the people, many of them objecting to the chain on the reverse as symbolic of slavery, and some thought that the head which was supposed to be emblematic of Liberty looked more like that of an idiot. The features of the head were changed, and cap and pole added, and the chain was changed to a wreath, but the coin still remained unpopular. In fact, it never became popular as a medium of exchange, although acceptable specimens are now highly prized by collectors.

The coinage in the early years was small, due to limited mint facilities, lack of copper, and lack of demand. It had been expected and intended that the national coinage would eliminate foreign coins, mostly Spanish, Mexican, and British, from circulation, but such was not the case. These foreign coins continued to circulate almost to the time of the civil war.

The mint suspended operations frequently because of breakdowns, lack of bullion, and plagues of yellow fever, and these factors account, in part, for many of our rarities. Copper bullion was purchased in the form of planchets (although some planchets were made in the mint), a practice that has continued to present times for minor coins, and many of these planchets were imported from England. Some were of very inferior quality. Those used for the 1799 cents are said to have been quite soft which may account for the rarity of this date in the preferred conditions.

The original law specified that the cent was to be of weight 264 grains but was reduced to 208 grains before any were struck. Further reductions were made from time to time, as indicated in the Table. The large cent, and half cent, were usually near their value as metal, sometimes exceeded it, so that they furnished a convenient means for the purchase of copper for commercial use, and many were melted down and used in this way.

Cents were not redeemable by the Government until after the law of 1871, although provision had been made for their exchange for other cents of later issue.

Prior to 1864 there was no specified amount for which cents were a legal tender, but from 1864 to 1865 they had a legal tender value up to 10 cents. This was reduced in 1865 to four cents, and increased in 1873 to 25 cents.

Cents did not circulate to any great extent prior to 1830 except in large cities and the Eastern States. Many of the uses which we find for cents were virtually non-existent in those days. Cheap newspapers, post cards, slot machines, sales taxes, and so on were almost unknown, so that the half dime was the smallest denomination needed for most transactions. The half cent was never popular or necessary. It had a small coinage and a small circulation. It was discontinued in 1857 with practically the entire issue of that year returned for melting.

After 1830 there was an increased demand for cents and a corresponding increase in their coinage, although the large size was always objectionable. This led eventually to the change in composition and size in 1857 and again in 1864, when the composition was changed to bronze and the thickness reduced. This size and composition were popular and satisfactory and no further change was made except in design until the present year, when the scarcity of copper has made desirable a restriction of its use for coinage purposes.

Substitutes Appear

In 1862 most coins disappeared from circulation. Some were hoarded, some melted, but they were mostly exported to Canada, the West Indies, Central and South America. They made a dramatic reappearance in 1877 so that in that year there were more minor coins than were needed. This resulted in a suspension of minor coinage during the year (so that minor coins of 1877 are among our greatest rarities). In order to carry on business in 1863 and 1864 various means were used. These are familiar to all numismatists, and included the private striking of civil war tokens and cards, the encased postage stamps, and the fractional currency. Postage stamps, not encased, were used in tremendous quantities, seriously interfering with the conduct of the Post Office department. As most people in those days did not have billfolds, the stamps were carried in the pocket, often along with a plug of chewing tobacco, so that they became dirty, torn, sticky, and beyond use as postage or for redemption. The authorizing of fractional currency and the law of 1864 which prohibited further private coinage partly solved the problem, but the scope of this discussion does not permit further details on this subject. The Mint struck large quantities of the copper-nickel cents in 1863 and 1864 but could not keep up with the demand. Incidentally, at that time these coins were called nickels, but when the composition was changed to bronze and the three and five cent coins in nickel and copper authorized, the term was no longer applied to cents.

In 1906 the law was changed to permit the striking of cents and five cent pieces at the branch mints. Previous to that time the Philadelphia Mint was the only one permitted to strike coins in other than silver or gold. The first cent struck at a branch mint was struck at San Francisco on November 24, 1908. Since then, for the cent, and beginning in 1912 for the five-cent piece, the branch mints have substantially aided the Philadelphia Mint in the manufacture of minor coins.

After the change in size of the cent in 1857, the next most significant change in its coinage came in 1909, when the design was changed to include a portrait of an actual person. The Lincoln cent was the first United States coin issued for general circulation to bear a recognized and intended portrait. In certain Colonial coins and patterns, the head of Washington is found, and it is believed by some that the dismes and half dismes of 1792 may bear an intended portrait of Martha Washington, but these were not coins of regular Government issue intended for general circulation. Among the early large cents is a variety known as the "Jefferson head" but it was probably not so intended. Sarah Longacre, young daughter of the designer of the Indian head cent, is known to have worn an Indian head-dress and posed as a model for her father, but the result was not her portrait. Annie Williams of Philadelphia was the model for the silver dollar of 1878-1921 for George T. Morgan. The result was not a recognizable portrait of the model. Mary Cunningham posed for the Saint-Gaudens type $20 gold, but portraiture was neither attempted nor desired. We have numerous and familiar commemorative pieces, some before 1909 which do bear intended portraits but the Lincoln cent still deserves the distinction of being the first coin for general circulation, issued by the mint, to bear a portrait. Since that time, of course, we have added others, the Washington quarter and Jefferson nickel, and we may expect to have still others later.

The Lincoln cent has another distinction. It is the first type of cent to bear the mottoes "E Pluribus Unum" and "In God we trust."

The design of the "Indian" head used on the Saint-Gaudens eagle, the type first coined in 1907, was originally intended to be used for the cent, but there was so much sentiment in favor of having the portrait of Abraham Lincoln that the change was made.

Signatures of Artists

The inclusion of the initials V. D. B. for the designer, Victor David Brenner, on the reverse of the Lincoln cent caused great protest at the time they first appeared in 1909 and they were removed after a considerable number of coins had been struck. They were restored in 1918 in a less conspicuous position under the shoulder at the bottom of the obverse, where they have continued. It is hard to understand just why there should have been so much protest over the fact that an artist had signed his work. It has long been the custom for artists to do this. Most foreign coins before and after 1909 bear an identification of the artist, as do most medals, and even in our own coinage prior to 1909 there were some instances of it. Mr. James B. Longacre placed his initials on the truncation of the bust of the double eagle of 1849 (and on the three-dollar gold of 1854 which used the same bust of Liberty), and his initial L on the ribbon of the Indian Head Cent first coined in 1859. It was omitted from most of the issue of the bronze cent of 1864. The initial M for Morgan appears on both the obverse and reverse of the silver dollar of 1878, and B for Barber on the half dollar, quarter and dime of 1892. Mr. Saint-Gaudens placed his initials ASG in monogram on the double eagle but left the eagle unsigned. The half eagle bears the initials B. L. P., for Bela L. Pratt, quite prominently. On most commemorative coins, and most other coins struck since 1916, the designer has signed his work. There appears now to be no objection to it.

The one cent piece is probably the most widely collected of any United States series, and more has been written about it than any other coin. There are various books and works on classification of varieties, including changes in design, and slight changes made by accident of die cutting or manufacture. Its history is the history of the Philadelphia mint, and the many factors contributing to its coinage can hardly be studied without including other coins, and the political and economic history of the United States. Such a study is impossible in an outline of this kind and only the highlights of its career and evolution to its present status could be attempted. Numismatic and other literature contains a wealth of additional information, in which the student and collector may find many hours of pleasure and enlightenment.

We should not leave our subject without mention of the fact that the coinage of the cent has been the most nearly continuous of any long series. In the 150 years since the day it was first coined, only one date is missing, that of 1815. The failure of the coin to appear in that year is probably due to the fact that because of the war with England, no copper planchets were received, and with copper not available here and no demand anyway for the coin, its coinage was suspended.

Some Interesting Statistics

The various acts to change the weight and composition are given for convenience in the Table below, and following this is a Supplement in which the principal legislation with respect to the coinage of the cent is given. All irrelevant clauses and sections have been deleted, and explanations in parentheses are those of the writer, inserted to permit greater brevity. So long as the half cent was coined, all legislation referring to the cent included similar provision for the half cent, in proportion. While we celebrate the sesquicentennial of the cent, we should recognize that this is also the sesquicentennial of the first coinage of the half cent. While the half cent is an important series from the collector's standpoint, it is of little significance otherwise, and it has been ignored for the most part in preparing this tribute to the cent.

SUPPLEMENT

The following are the principal resolutions and regulations that have been enacted by the Congress with respect to the coinage of one cent and half cent pieces. Only the sections and parts of sections referring specifically to cents are given here.

Sec. 9. That there shall be from time to time struck and coined at the said mint, coins of . . . copper . . . Cents, each to be of the value of the one hundredth part of a dollar, and to contain eleven pennyweights of copper. Half cents . . . each to be of the value of a half a cent, and to contain five pennyweights of copper.

Sec. 10. That upon the said coins respectively there shall be the following devices and legends, namely, Upon one side of each . . . there shall be an impression emblematic of liberty, with an inscription of the word Liberty, and the year of the coinage . . . and upon the reverse of each of the copper coins there shall be an inscription which shall express the denomination of the piece.

Sec. 17. . . . That the copper whereof the cents and half cents may be composed shall be of good quality.

MAY 8, 1792

Sec. 1. Be it enacted . . . That the Director of the Mint . . . be authorized to . . . purchase a quantity of copper, not exceeding one hundred and fifty tons, and that the said Director . . . shall cause the copper to be coined at the Mint into cents and half cents and that as they shall be coined, to be paid into the Treasury of the United States, thence to issue into circulation.

Sec. 2. That after the expiration of six calendar months from the time (when the total issue to the Treasury of cents and half cents shall be not less than $50,000), which time shall be announced by the Treasurer in at least two gazettes or newspapers, published at the seat of the Government . . . no copper coins or pieces whatsoever, except the said cents and half cents, shall pass current as money, or shall be paid, or offered to be paid or received in payment for any debt, demand, claim, matter or thing whatsoever . . . (balance has to do with penalties for violation of this section).

JANUARY 14, 1793

Be it enacted . . . That every cent shall contain 208 grains of copper . . . (with provision of previous act regarding weight being repealed).

MARCH 3, 1795

Sec. 8. That the President of the United States be . . . authorized . . . to reduce the weight of the copper coin of the United States, provided such reduction shall not . . . exceed two pennyweights in each cent, and in a like proportion in a half cent . . .

Sec. 9. It shall be the duty of the Treasurer . . . as often as he shall receive copper cents and half cents from the mint, to send them to the bank or branch banks of the United States . . . to be by such bank paid out to the citizens . . . for cash, in sums not less than $10 value . . .

JANUARY 26, 1796

. . . Whereas, on account of the increased price of copper and expense of coinage, I have thought it would be for the benefit of the United States to reduce the weight of the copper coin of the United States 1 pennyweight and 16 grains in each cent and in like proportion in each half cent, and the same has since the 27th day of December last been reduced accordingly: I hereby give notice thereof and that all cents and half cents coined and to be coined at the Mint of the United States from and after the said 27th day of December are to weigh, the cents each 7 pennyweights and the half cents each 3 pennyweights and 12 grains . . .

G. Washington.

APRIL 24, 1800

Sec. 1. . . . That a sum equal to the amount of the cents and half cents which shall have been coined at the Mint and delivered to the Treasurer, subsequent to March 3, 1799, shall be . . . appropriated for the purchase of copper for the further coinage of cents and half cents . . . (and with similar appropriations to be continued from year to year).

APRIL 21, 1806

(This was the counterfeiting law, but applied only to gold and silver.)

Sec. 33. . . . That copper bullion shall be purchased for the Mint . . . and that the copper bullion shall be of good quality, and in form of planchets fit for passing at once into the hands of the chief coiner.

Sec. 35. . . . That it shall be the duty of the treasurer of the Mint to deliver the copper coins, in exchange for their equivalent in other money, to any persons who shall apply for them. . . .

Sec. 37. . . . That the money received . . . in exchange for copper coins shall form a fund which shall be used to purchase copper planchets, pay the expense of transportation of copper coins . . . (with surplus, if any, to pay other expenses of the Mint.)

A MYSTERIOUS HALF

Mr. E. H. Pratt of Wichita, Kansas, has a U. S. half dollar dated 1838 which has aroused considerable comment from those to whom it has been submitted, and they are by no means in complete agreement. It has been sent to the Editor with the suggestion that further publicity might solve the question as to its genuineness and origin. It is here illustrated.

In October of last year the Superintendent of the Mint at Philadelphia quotes the Engraver as believing it to be "a genuine coin." Several well known dealers have seen it—some agreeing with the Mint authority, others branding it as a counterfeit; one has identified it as probably No. 67 in the Adams and Woodin list.

It has a lettered edge, and the obverse and reverse are on the same level—the coin must be turned horizontally to bring either in upright position, instead of turned over vertically as is the usual case. Who has the solution?

ROMAN COINS AND ROMAN HISTORY

By G. L. SCHANZLIN, Upland, Indiana

It has become customary to doubt the trustworthiness of Roman writers like Livy. In cases of events where it seems easy to check the old writers, some of their statements have been weighed in the balance of modern criticism, and, apparently, have been found wanting. The testimony of coins, monumental inscriptions and usages known to us from other sources than the historians, is weighty and important in the cross examination of history and historians. Numismatics, naturally, has had a large place in this process. For the sake of argument we might also in turn let history cross examine numismatics.

In Liv. V. 12; 1, the author relates that Sergius and Verginius, military tribunes of the Roman republic, were fined 10,000 aeris gravis each for certain misdemeanors in a campaign against the city of Veii in Etruria. That was in 401 B. C.

In 390 B. C. the famous L. Furius Camillus, a prototype of Washington of early Roman history, in absentia was fined 15,000 of the aes grave, full weight bronze pieces. Liv. V. 32; 9.

In 357 B. C. a law was passed against usury, the bill being introduced in the Senate by M. Duillius. The law was entitled De Unciario Fenore; on the rate of interest at one-twelfth of the capital per annum. Liv. VIII. 16; 1.

The word unciarium deserves special attention. If we take Livius at his word, the Romans in 357 B. C., and some time before that, must have had a rather orderly monetary system the unit of which was a bronze piece, one pound in weight, with fractional pieces down to one ounce, otherwise it would not have been necessary to legislate, fixing the rate of interest at one ounce from the pound annually.

The system by 357 must have been of considerable standing. In the same year another official of the republic, C. Licinius Stolo, was fined 10,000 coppers (decem millibus aeris) i. e. bronze pieces. Unminted lumps of bronze of the aes rude type do not very well fit into this picture. The question is, what other evidence have we that will discredit the historian's statement of rather formidable transactions involving large sums of currency? If we accept these items as history they imply a much larger amount of commercial activity in fourth century Rome than the admittedly clumsy currency of bronze seemed to justify. Livius clearly is speaking of counted, rather than weighed money, and he would seem to indicate that as early as 401 B. C. Roman money, cast bronze pieces, had taken the place of earlier types leading up to the aes grave.

The theory in vogue for some time has been that the aes grave system of currency started at a much later date than was formerly supposed. For a while 338 was given as the date, but outstanding German and English numismatists have been contending for 311 B. C. as the earliest year when the aes grave with its fractions made their first appearance in Central Italy. The tendency in fixing both the earlier and the later date has been to find in political conditions of the fourth century the background and economic necessity for the rise of this monetary system. The rather perplexing problems of weight of the extant pieces of the cast bronzes, libral, semi-libral, and down to the sextantal weight reduction have taken a large place in this discussion. The generally adopted standard of weight for the libral (pound) pieces was 273 grammes, or 4212 grains, with the fractional  $\frac{1}{2}$ ,  $\frac{1}{3}$ ,  $\frac{1}{4}$ ,  $\frac{1}{6}$ , and  $\frac{1}{12}$  pieces in proper proportion. The great irregularities in weight, due to the fact of dealing with cast, rather than struck coins, reduced the average weight of the pound unit to 258 grammes. (Sydenham's Roman Monetary System.)

The problem became still more complicated when the relation of the bronze standard of the Roman currency to the silver standards of neighboring nations came up for consideration. It seemed unreasonable to suppose that Central Italy for any length of time, even as early as the middle of the fourth century, could have dealt commercially to any advantage with Southern Italy, or Sicily, where flourishing city states long ago had established silver currencies based on Greek standards of weight and valuation. Even Etruria, to the north of Latium, had an early silver currency, and an authority quoted by Sydenham (Roman Monetary System, Part I, p. 5, Reprint, 1919) makes the astonishing statement that a silver coin of Etruria, a litra, weighing  $13\frac{1}{2}$  grains, dating back to 350 B. C. or earlier, was equivalent in value to the as Libralis, the bronze pound piece of Rome. Sydenham himself admits that that would involve "the extraordinary ratio between silver and bronze of over 300 to 1." The astounding deduction was made from the supposed etymological equation of the Roman word libra, with an earlier Sicilian, and later on, Etrurian, litra, both as weight and as a coin.

Still worse than that is the idea advanced by some modern writers on the subject, that the Roman bronze currency, even in earlier times was nothing but a kind of token coinage, and that the coined, or cast as, really never was intended to weigh, but only to represent, an actual pound of metal. It must be admitted that of necessity the reduced and struck bronze pieces of later periods were tokens, and also that the system of the older cast bronze coins in the third century soon felt the impact of the more modern and more practical silver currencies, which led to a speedy demoralization of the original aes grave system, but the fact seems to stand out that for a long period, long before 311, or 338, the original aes grave system held its place in the economic life of central Italian folks and states, of Rome, her neighbors and her allies, her subject cities and commonwealths.

Until a better order has come into our ideas of early Italian coinages, it will not do to set aside the statements of Titus Livius too easily. There is a wealth of information pictured for us on the faces of coins. It seems, however, clear that many of the statements of earlier Roman writers, as to still earlier attempts at moneying have not been elucidated sufficiently, and neither proven nor disproven. The subject of the old Roman pecunia idea, the primeval valuing of things by cow values, is one of these problems.

LOOKING BACKWARD

THROUGH THE EARLY FILES OF THE NUMISMATIST

FIFTY YEARS AGO

The NUMISMATIST for March, 1893, was a sedate number. Nothing especially good or bad had happened in the realm of coin collecting—or so it seems. One interesting item stated that President Harrison possessed a fine collection of Ancient Greek and Roman coins. The present incumbent of the White House is likewise a collector—but of stamps. Does anyone know of any other of our Presidents who was blessed by the collecting instinct? (Lincoln seems to have collected anecdotes.) Wonder what became of Harrison's Greeks and Romans. . . . The statement is also made that the king of Sweden paid $2,000 for a half eagle of 1815—"only five known"—to complete his set of U. S. coins. If his set was then "complete," he had the 1822 half eagle also, and an 1804 dollar. All this is confusing—inaccuracy somewhere. . . . But in a review of the quiet pages we suddenly encounter this isolated but sparkling admonition of Editor Heath: "Wake up, brother, and go to work. The day dawneth."

FORTY YEARS AGO

Dr. B. P. Wright (then President of the Association) continues his extended series, "Unusual Numismatic Specimens," this time dealing with a First Bronze of Augustus, and the chapter in Roman history which saw the heir of Julius Caesar suddenly become the first Emperor—a quick transition from the twilight of the Republic to the dawn of the Empire, whose influence is to be traced even to this day among the nations of the world. A noble series, the First Bronze of Ancient Rome.

Howland Wood writes on a subject wholly strange to most collectors—"The Beard Money of Peter the Great." It seems the Tsar, following his travels in Holland and England, was convinced that the appearance of the men of his own country would be vastly improved if they forsook the universal custom of wearing beards, but in spite of royal decrees little progress was made; beards evidently were a tradition rather than a mere fashion. He finally resorted to a tax, from a small amount for the peasantry up to a hundred roubles for the wealthy classes. When the tax was paid a bronze or silver token was given, which the bearded tax payers were required to wear about the neck, and which was renewed every year, or the old one counterstamped. There were a number of varieties, on one of which the inscription (in Russian) read "The beard is an unnecessary burden." (Has our own Treasury Department overlooked something?)

The advertising section of this issue consisted of four pages.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

Many of the older members pleasantly recall that happy little Canadian, R. W. McLachlan of Montreal, then Second Vice President. His interest in everything pertaining to Canadian numismatics was intense, as was his study. In the March issue of 1913 appears an article from his pen, entitled "Patterns Struck at the Royal Mint for Canada," well illustrated and the product of considerable research.

This number also contains the first notice of the issue of the "buffalo" nickel, showing both obverse and reverse, the regular coinage having started on February 17. The initial letter F below the date had already come in for some criticism, as it seems a certain critical portion of the public was unwilling that Mr. Fraser, the designer, should be given even this slight recognition—the same carping spirit that caused such an unseemly outcry some years before over Victor D. Brenner's initials on the Lincoln cent. Why did the authorities allow themselves to be disturbed over the clamor? The obverse pictured a vanishing race, the reverse a vanishing herd; was this prophetic of the subsequent vanishing nickel (content) itself thirty years later? Anyway, that is what has happened.

The 1913 Assay Commission had as one of its members President Judson D. Brenner.

An article of extreme interest is entitled "Medals Issued by the Circle of Friends of the Medallion," by Charles de Kay, the founder of this organization some years before. A number of their issues (two yearly) are illustrated, all of them charming, and enduring evidence that the art of the medal in the U. S. had achieved real distinction. Among the sculptors represented are J. Edouard Roiné (by an exceptionally fine medal of La Fayette), John Flanagan, Louis Potter, Mowbray Clarke, John S. Conway, and Victor D. Brenner.

Mr. Edgar H. Adams, then Editor of THE NUMISMATIST, pays tribute to the late Dr. W. T. R. Marvin, long Editor of the American Journal of Numismatics, student and enthusiastic collector and writer; and Mr. Adams also discusses the every-recurring subject of a fair basis—fair to both seller and buyer—of description of condition, especially in auction sale catalogues. Mr. H. O. Granberg supplements this with a letter outlining a plan for a uniform standard for use in classifying condition. The owner insists that full justice shall be done, and the buyer is equally insistent that the description shall hew to the line. Truly, the dealer faces no easy task.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Thomas L. Elder of New York delivered a most interesting address on "The Medals and Tokens of Henry Clay" before The American Numismatic Society, linking up these issues of a former day with the man who helped to make history in one of the greatest epochs of our country's career. Contemporary with Andrew Jackson, Sam Houston, Daniel Webster, and others of enduring memory, Clay was a commanding figure politically throughout his entire life. Mr. Elder's address, in itself, was also testimony of the rewards to be found in almost any branch of numismatics by collectors who have the initiative to do some effective research work. The material is available, and the time can somehow be found. There can be no question as to the rewards.

PORTRAITS ON THE $2.00 ISSUES OF UNITED STATES PAPER MONEY

By LOYD B. GETTYS, Davenport, Iowa

The first legal tender notes, small denomination, were authorized by an Act of Congress on July 11, 1862, and these notes are dated August 1 of the same year. The portrait of Alexander Hamilton appears on the first $2.00 note thus authorized, the only $2.00 note which bears his portrait.

Alexander Hamilton, an American statesman, was born in the West Indian Island of Nevis in 1757. At the age of 12 he entered the employ of an American merchant. His extraordinary abilities induced some of his friends to assist him in getting a good education. Accordingly, he was sent to a grammar school at Elizabethtown, New Jersey, and shortly afterward entered Columbia College, New York. When Hamilton was barely 18 he wrote a series of articles on defense of the Colonies against Great Britain. These papers were first taken as the work of the statesman Jay and received notice and consideration from popular leaders. Hamilton was commissioned a Captain of Artillery, appointed Aid-de-Camp to General Washington in 1777, and was a great friend and advisor of the General. After the war he became one of the most eminent attorneys in New York. In 1782 Hamilton was elected by the State of New York as a Representative to the Continental Congress. In 1787 he was appointed a delegate to the Convention which met at Philadelphia for the purpose of revising the Articles of the Confederation. In conjunction with Madison he had the most important share in drawing up the Federal Constitution later adopted. It was due more to Hamilton than to any other one man that the Constitution was adopted in its present form, and that a strong national government was authorized.

On the establishment of the New Government in 1789 President Washington appointed Alexander Hamilton Secretary of the Treasury. In order to re-establish public credit, and despite much opposition, he carried out a measure for refunding the public debt, founded a National Bank and revised the system of duties. He was one of the greatest of American financiers.

In 1795 he resigned his office and resumed the practice of law in New York.

When the conflict with France arose in 1798 Hamilton was commissioned a Major General in the United States Army, and on the death of George Washington he succeeded to the chief command. After peace was established he resumed the practice of law. His death occurred on July 12, 1804. In 1904 he was elected to the American Hall of Fame.

Thomas Jefferson

Another series of legal tender notes which was authorized by Congress on March 3, 1863, are the series of 1869, 1874, 1875, 1878, 1880 and 1917. On these notes we find the portrait of Thomas Jefferson. The $2.00 note is the only United States paper money, other than fractional currency, upon which his portrait appears; it is on the issues of this denomination from 1869 down to the small-sized note now in use, series 1928.

Thomas Jefferson, American statesman and third President of the United States, was born at Shadwell, Virginia, April 13, 1743; started in elementary school at the age of five; four years later he commenced the study of Latin, Greek and French; in 1760 he entered the advanced class in William and Mary College. He was admitted to the bar in 1767. While a law student Jefferson heard Patrick Henry speak against the Stamp Act. He was so impressed that thereafter he was a champion of independence. Jefferson was chairman of the committee that drew up the Declaration of Independence. The instrument was written by Jefferson and was adopted with certain amendments on July 4, 1776.

Jefferson was elected Governor of Virginia. He was a Delegate to Congress in 1783, and the next year wrote the memorandum on the establishment of a coinage for the United States.

Jefferson was Minister to France in 1785. He was Secretary of State in President Washington's Cabinet but resigned that office in 1793 and retired to Monticello. He was Vice-President in 1796, and elected President in 1800. The most important event of his Administration was the purchase of Louisiana from Napoleon in 1803 for 15 Million Dollars. He was re-elected President in 1804, and at the expiration of his second term he again retired to Monticello. Through his efforts the University of Virginia was founded in 1818; he was its first rector. His whole life was given to the improvement and happiness of his fellow men. Jefferson probably exerted a greater influence on the institutions of the United States than any other American, except Washington and Alexander Hamilton. He died July 4, 1826.

General Winfield Scott Hancock

On the Silver Certificates, series of 1886, appears the portrait of General Winfield Scott Hancock. This is a very attractive note, beautiful in design and affords a varied assortment of seals and signatures.

Winfield Scott Hancock, an American General, was born at Montgomery Square, Pennsylvania, in 1824. A graduate of West Point, he served with great gallantry in the Mexican War. He was wounded at the Battle of Gettysburg, and was commissioned Major General in the regular Army in 1866. In 1880 he was the unsuccessful Democratic nominee for President. At the time of his death in 1886, he was in command of the Department of the East.

There is only one $2.00 note upon which the portrait of George Washington appears, and that is on the Silver Certificate of the series of 1899.

George Washington, first President of the United States, was born in Westmoreland County, Virginia, February 22, 1732. His early years were spent in surveying land in the rich valley of the Allegheny mountains where he gained a high professional reputation for skill and accuracy. In 1751 Washington entered the military service, receiving the rank of major. He gained prominence by his brave defense of Fort Mifflin in 1754, and was appointed Commander-in-Chief of all the Virginia forces in 1755. After the war in Virginia was ended he resigned his post and married Mrs. Martha Custis in 1759 and settled at Mt.

Vernon. For the next 15 years his life was that of a Virginia planter. He was elected to the Legislature year after year, and in 1774 was sent as a Delegate to the Continental Congress. His military ability was at once recognized, and the work of preparing armed resistance against England was left to him. When war broke out he was selected as Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the United Colonies. He accepted without salary.

Washington drove the British out of Boston, and from that time until his death he was the leading man of the Continent. The remaining military operations are familiar. Washington resigned his commission on December 23, 1773, and retired to Mt. Vernon. When the Constitutional Convention met in Philadelphia in May, 1787, Washington attended as a Delegate and was unanimously elected chairman. After the Constitution had been ratified there was no hesitation over the selection of a President in 1789. The Electors voted unanimously for George Washington. He was re-elected in 1793. Under his leadership the new Government was firmly established. He refused a third term and left the Presidency in 1797, resuming his life as a farmer. He died on December 14, 1799.

General James B. McPherson

The Coin Notes of 1890 and 1891 afford another very striking series for the collector. On these notes is the portrait of General James Birdseye McPherson.

General McPherson, American soldier, was born at Sandusky, Ohio, November 14, 1828, entered West Point at the age of 21 and graduated at the head of his class, which included Hood, Schofield and Sherman. After graduation he taught practical military engineering at the Military Academy in 1853. He served as an engineer at New York and at San Francisco. General McPherson built Fort Delaware in 1857. He served with distinction in the war between the States, and during this period he attained the rank of Brigadier-General; a most heroic figure, a great soldier.

William Windom

Another outstanding series is the Silver Certificate of 1891. On the $2.00 note of this series only appears the portrait of William Windom.

William Windom was born in Belmont County, Ohio, May 10, 1827. He studied law at Mt. Vernon, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar in 1850. Five years later he removed to Minnesota, and soon afterward was elected to Congress and represented that state from 1859 to 1869. In 1870 he was appointed to the Senate to fill out the unexpired term of Daniel S. Norton, deceased, and was twice subsequently elected. In 1881 Windom resigned from the Senate to enter the Cabinet of President Garfield as Secretary of the Treasury. He was also Secretary of the Treasury under President Harrison, and continued to hold that position until his death. At the annual dinner of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation on January 29, 1891, he delivered a patriotic speech which contained valuable advice regarding the protection of our shipping, and warnings to the advocates of the coinage of free silver. At the close of the address he fell dead on the floor of the speaker's platform. His concluding sentences were:

"As poison in the blood permeates arteries, veins, nerves, brain and heart, and speedily brings paralysis or death, so does a debased or fluctuating currency permeate all the arteries of trade, paralyzes all kinds of business and brings disaster to all kinds of people. It is as impossible for commerce to flourish with such an instrument as it is for the human body to grow strong and vigorous with a deadly poison lurking in the blood."

From this description it will be noted that our old type of currency of the $2.00 denomination ties in dramatically with the study of American history. These legal tender notes, silver certificates and treasury or coin notes offer an opportunity to acquire a most interesting series, one that is dignified in character, educational in scope, and beautiful in design.

CANADA'S 1943 "BLACKOUT" FIVE CENT PIECE

From President Ferguson, and also from Norman B. Mason of Toronto, come specimens of the novel and artistic "12-sided" five cent piece just issued. The obverse is the same as that of last year, but the reverse is strikingly original. Around the inner edge of the border is the slogan "We Win When We Work Willingly" in Morse Code! This is read from left to right, clockwise, beginning with the dot under the left vertical stroke of the N in CENTS.

We should like some information on the artist, whose initials TS appear on the reverse. He has done a very fine piece of work—which, by the way, is no new thing in Canadian coinage designs.

HAVING NONE OF OUR OWN, WE BORROW SOME GOLD COINS

Stephen H. Bibler of Portland, Oregon, has sent us a clipping from a recent issue of "Newsweek," which carries a good bit of human interest. Is it a fact that all the gold coins demanded and received by the government have been converted into bullion? And if so, what was the necessity? But here is the clipping:

"When American troops landed on the shores of North Africa, they began an invasion that was psychological as well as physical. One objective was to sell the native populations on the idea that here was a genuine army of liberation.

"Recognizing that 'folding money' would make little impression on native labor, Maj. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory, Quartermaster General, provided the American forces with a large supply of gold coins and 2,000 tons of barter goods. Gold belonging to the United States had long since been converted into bullion, so the coins were borrowed from Canada.

"Every sixth soldier was issued a 'barter kit.' These included beads, scissors, clothes, perfumes, candies, cigarettes, sugar, tea, and coffee, and the items were dished out to the natives both as gifts and as exchange for work. And to make sure that the natives would have no doubts as to the identity of the troops, each soldier wore a small American flag on his left sleeve or under the camouflage netting of his helmet.

"It was a sales campaign in capital letters, and it worked. The gold and the barter kits told convincing tales to the North Africans: (1) traditionally, conquering armies ravage, but here was one which gave instead of taking away; and (2) America was a nation so rich and powerful that in the midst of its greatest war it had such a surplus of goods it could still afford to deal generously."

THE DEAN OF COLLECTORS—WHO IS HE?

It would be interesting to know who among the membership of the A. N. A. is the oldest in point of years during which he has been an active collector. By "active" we do not mean that he must necessarily have been steadily and largely adding to his collection, but we do mean that his interest must have been maintained regardless of whether his numismatic possessions increased slowly or otherwise.

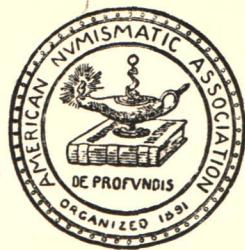

One who began to collect many years ago but who gave it up after a time, resuming the hobby only recently, may have less years to his credit as an active collector than another who started long after the first mentioned but whose interest has persisted without interruption.

We would be glad to hear from our older members with a statement of the facts in their own case. Suppose we set out to locate the ten collectors who have been (steadily) in the harness, so to speak, for the greatest length of time.

Just to break the ice, it may be stated that the Editor began collecting in 1903—no subsequent loss of interest. But the first letter received will no doubt start him toward the foot of the class.

ROCHESTER ASSOCIATION'S PRESIDENT'S MEDAL

Through the courtesy of William M. Hutchinson, Secretary of the Rochester (N. Y.) Numismatic Association, we are able to show an engraving of the silver medal presented to their outgoing President, Floyd B. Newell, at their annual meeting on January 9. The presentation was made by President Edward Meinhart, continuing a custom initiated thirty years ago.

THE NUMISMATIC AND ANTIQUARIAN SOCIETY OF PHILADELPHIA

By HOWARD LONGSTRETH, President

This is the first of a projected series of papers which will tell very briefly the story of our American and Canadian numismatic societies. They have been of immense value to a great body of collectors—directly to their own members, and indirectly to countless others—over a period which had its beginnings nearly a century ago.

They have given form and strength, direction and cohesiveness to the whole fraternity—and we say “fraternity” advisedly, for the fraternal spirit which has always existed among collectors is by no means the least of the values created by such association.

“The science of numismatics” is no empty phrase, and this distinction has been achieved largely through the impetus given to serious research by certain of these organizations.

The history of each, as it appears, should be valuable not only as a matter of permanent record, but as conclusive evidence of the vitality and stability of our pursuit. We are familiar with the long career of our own Association, unique in many respects, and it should therefore be all the more interesting to learn what other seasoned groups have experienced.

While their story is all too brief, considering their span of years, we are glad thus to pay honor in this first installment to the nation's oldest numismatic society.

The preface to Volume I of the Proceedings of the Numismatic Society of Philadelphia records the fact that “on January 1, 1858 eight gentlemen, all citizens of Philadelphia, met and formed a society to encourage and promote Numismatic Science.” (In December 1857 several of these gentlemen had met and discussed the question of forming a Numismatic Society.) In those days an Act of Assembly was necessary for the incorporation of an organization. On February 19, 1858 Governor Packer affixed his signature to a bill which brought the Numismatic Society of Philadelphia into being. This was the first society of its kind to be formed in the United States. During the Civil War period interest in coins abated to such an extent that many Numismatic Societies, ours included, branched out into antiquarian fields. On February 23, 1865, Governor Curtin signed a bill which changed our name to The Numismatic and Antiquarian Society of Philadelphia.

The Society has grown slowly through the years, until now it consists of about seventy-five members. We meet six times a year in the homes or clubs of the members, and at each meeting a paper is read. Most of the places of historic interest in and near Philadelphia have been visited. In order to show the wide range of subjects considered by the Society, the following list was taken at random from the last copy of the Proceedings: “Sheffield Plate;” “Symbolism of the American Flag;” “Some Old Masters of Painting;” “Exhibitions of Coins by Members;” “The Koran;” “Pennsylvania Flintlocks;” “The Temples of Baalbec;” “The Coinage of the Greeks;” “Early Shipbuilding in Philadelphia;” “Mints and Coinage of the United States.” The last paper was read by Mr. Alfred D. Norris, our Associate Curator.

The collections of the Society are housed in Memorial Hall in Fairmount Park and consists of nearly eleven thousand coins and medals, over five hundred pieces of paper money, and twenty-three hundred pieces of emergency (paper) money issued in Europe during and after the World War. The Society has struck three medals, the Brinton, the Mickley, and the Dana, in honor of past presidents.

When I joined the Society, thirty-two years ago, there were three large collectors of coins in the membership and their names, doubtless, are familiar to you: Mr. John Story Jenks, Mr. John T. Morris, and Mr. Clarence S. Bement. The Jenks and Bement collections were sold, but the valuable Morris collection went by bequest to the University of Pennsylvania Museum where it was placed on exhibition for several years. At present it is stored in boxes in the sub-basement of the Museum, and our Curator, Mr. Richard D. Norton, has tried to interest the Carnegie Foundation in financing the removal of this and the other Philadelphia collections to suitable quarters, and making a permanent exhibition with a Curator in charge.

Several other prominent numismatists have been members of the Society:

Dr. T. Louis Comparette came to Philadelphia from the University of Missouri in 1905 as Curator of the numismatic collection at the Philadelphia Mint. Dr. Comparette was an accomplished linguist, an archeologist, and an authority on minting. He was the author of a number of pamphlets on numismatic subjects. After his sudden death in July, 1922, the numismatic collection, together with the library at the Mint, was moved to Washington. At that time the Numismatic and Antiquarian Society made a vigorous protest against this action to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the Director of the Mint. Unfortunately, the collection, parts of which had been here for nearly a century, was transferred.

Mr. John Reilly will be remembered as Treasurer and as a member of the Council of the American Numismatic Society. His collection in the hall of the Society in New York is now the property of the Society and is said to be the finest collection of Oriental coins in the world.

Mr. Frederick D. Langenheim, who died in 1937 at the age of ninety, was a well known numismatist and attended many of these conventions. Mr. Langenheim joined the Society in 1888 and as Curator of Numismatics took splendid care of our collections for many years. He served as Vice President and as President.

Mr. Harold Gillingham has held several offices in our Society and succeeded Mr. John Reilly as Treasurer of the American Numismatic Society. He sold his splendid collection of four thousand Orders of Chivalry and War Medals in its entirety in 1930. Mr. Gillingham has written several pamphlets.

Both of our Curators, Mr. Norton and Mr. Norris, have fine collections and are adding to them constantly.

IN THE APRIL NUMISMATIST

The second paper in this series will probably deal with The American Numismatic Society, the founding of which closely followed that of the Philadelphia organization. We are confident our members will find these installments of extreme interest.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

FOR WIDER HORIZONS

"A primrose by a river's brim
A yellow primrose was to him,
And it was nothing more."

—Wordsworth.

For many years we have had the definite conviction that a collector who is satisfied merely to accumulate is barely on speaking terms with his coins, though he may have lived with them for half a century. He has not established that closer relationship that comes of knowledge of their historical background, of the influences and events which brought them into being, of the origins, significance and implications of the inscriptions, and of the place in history allocated to those rulers whose portraits they bear. The mythology so constantly in evidence on ancient pieces, and the later heraldry, with all its fascinating intricacy, are to him likewise remote and without appeal. All this, for no other reason than that of lack of initiative or incentive. He is content with, let us say, merely the first chapter in a book of amazing richness; granting his claim that he has found enjoyment within his self-imposed limits, nevertheless it is meagre compared with the possibilities within his reach.

A most interesting article in last month's NUMISMATIST, "The Bank of the United States," by Damon G. Douglas, is an illustration of the value of collateral study in connection with whatever branch of our hobby appeals to us. But while his able discussion of a particular segment of Jackson's career supports the claim already made concerning the value of supplementary reading, may we suggest a still broader treatment, being certain that its rewards will be proportionately greater. We refer to the superb biography of Andrew Jackson by Marquis James, published some three or four years ago.

Writing a biography of a great man must partake somewhat of the nature of drawing a complete and authentic map of a great country—and more: the subject must actually live in the consciousness of the author for the time being, and perhaps ever afterward. One cannot imagine Marquis James taking leave of Andrew Jackson when the final sentence of the last chapter was written; it is easy to believe that he must still feel the companionship engendered through the years devoted to the study of this tremendous character. The careful and appreciative reader will himself experience something of the same influence—a lasting impress of greatness.

This single volume is made up of two parts: The Border Captain, and Portrait of a President; the former taking Jackson from his boyhood to his resignation as Governor of Florida in 1821, when he hoped to spend the remainder of his days quietly at the Hermitage; the latter from his reluctant entrance into national politics, through eight years of the Presidency, and back once more to the Hermitage, where, in the "twilight of a chieftain" we see the end finally come.

The high lights of his seventy-eight years are of course familiar in name at least. The Battle of New Orleans, in which he achieved lasting fame, is vividly described, not merely as a separate chapter in history, but as a culmination of many forces, and with its repercussions over a long series of years. General Jackson's earlier military record, his legal and political interests, his personal feuds, and the marriage which long afterward was to bring undeserved unhappiness to Rachel and bitter resentment on his part against his enemies—all this forms a large and thrilling part of the Border Captain period.

In the author's Portrait of a President, we read the dramatic record of the second phase of Jackson's life. Literally forced to become a candidate, refusing to participate actively in the campaign, his position was sincerely stated in a letter written in 1823: "My undeviating rule of conduct through life has been neither to seek or decline public invitations to office. As the office of Chief Magistrate of the Union should not be sought, so it cannot, with propriety, be declined. . . . My political creed prompts me to leave the affair uninfluenced by any expression on my part to the free will of those who have alone the right to decide."

After his defeat in 1825, the Tennessee Legislature renominated him for the presidency, and he thereupon resigned his seat in the U. S. Senate to which he had been elected in 1823. His victory in 1828 was overwhelming—but so was his grief over the death of Rachel which occurred at the Hermitage shortly afterward.

Jackson's long and finally successful fight with the powerful Bank of the United States, in the midst of which financial panic swept over the country; during the Eaton affair, his blind loyalty to its principals; his trouble with France, the latter eventually yielding; the beginning of the long fight to strangle secession, then threatened by South Carolina; his re-election as President; the great Proclamation on Nullification; the recognition of the Republic of Texas—these are a few of the bolder brush strokes of history in this Portrait of a President.

No character in the life of our Nation has left to posterity a finer example of citizenship than Andrew Jackson. There have been great men, yes; but who among them possessed all the qualities, not only so evident, but so dynamic, that combined to make this Border Captain a hero both of War and of Peace? The list of these qualities is a long one, some of them especially fitted to the time and place; in our own time and place, perhaps his clear, honest, and courageous thinking—plus action—is the one most insistently demanded of the public mind. If he were alive today, we can imagine the wrath of the old General as he encountered the stench of the various "isms" that infest the world. True to his character, he never flinched in his loyalty to his principles, regardless of political threat. Expediency must have been a strange word to Andrew Jackson.

The end was to come on the eighth of June, 1845.

"He said farewell to the household servants, kissed and blessed each member of the family, his glance resting longest on the little granddaughter whose name was Rachel Jackson. . . . The chant on the porch sank to a whisper. The chieftain closed his eyes. At six o'clock his head fell forward. His heart stood still."

With its profound appeal for every true American, this may be fairly rated as one of the great biographies of recent times. We have ventured to give this brief review, confident that a new significance may be discovered in certain collections, and likewise in the hope that in a broader sense it will be regarded as typical of similar happy excursions possible in other numismatic directions.

AN EXCELLENT INVESTMENT

The 50-year Index published in 1940 by the Association, covering the issues of THE NUMISMATIST from its first number in 1888 to the completion of Vol. LI in 1938, is an amazing document. Its 200 pages constitute a panorama of numismatic progress in this country which will seem almost incredible to our more recent members, and even to the veterans it must bring a satisfying sense of "good work, true work, square work" steadily accomplished throughout the half century under review.

If the younger collector is ever tempted to question the stability of our hobby and its breadth of interest, a half hour's session with this Index will be a revelation of the enormous variety of subjects directly connected with numismatics—not merely with the coins themselves, but with the countless factors that are inseparable from them. If history appeals to him, here it is indicated in abundance, ancient, medieval and modern; if beauty of design is paramount, he finds many references which prove that avenue has not been neglected; if the lives of great men—statesmen, soldiers, artists (the list is long)—have their compelling influence, he discovers a rich field awaiting him: and so on and on. As he looks it through he finds hundreds of articles in those 24,000 pages which made up the issues of 50 years, by collectors who have generously shared with their confreres the information their study has revealed and the deepened enjoyment this added knowledge has brought. If he is willing to credit the evidence before him, he must be convinced that numismatics does have stability and breadth, and that a reasonable study of available material will put him in touch with a vast and fascinating field.

There are two methods of securing these articles: by use of the A. N. A. Library, and through purchase of back volumes of THE NUMISMATIST as they come on the market.

No doubt there would be an even wider use of the Library if collectors knew what to ask for definitely: by referring to the Index one can easily build up a "want list" of large proportions; and it may well happen that other material, aside from that contained in the bound volumes of THE NUMISMATIST, will be found desirable and the selected subject or subjects pursued still further.

In any event, every collector who has the ambition to study his coins even moderately will find the Index surprisingly helpful; and for the genuine student it is almost indispensable.

A number of copies are still available at the original price of one dollar; and the dollar which purchases this volume is not spent—it is invested. The Editor will be glad to mail your copy post free.

SPRING CONVENTION OF THE I. N. A.

The Iowa Numismatic Association is making definite plans to hold its semi-annual convention in Waterloo on Saturday and Sunday, May 15 and 16, the Waterloo Coin Club acting as host, and with headquarters at the President Hotel.

This is pursuant to the invitation extended by the Club at the fall convention of the I. N. A. held at Muscatine in October. Waterloo is easy of access by rail and bus lines, and its location in the state is convenient for the majority of Iowa members. V. Leon Belt, member of the Board of Governors of the A. N. A., is chairman of the committee on arrangements, and plans for a convention of unusual interest—they mean this, emphatically—are rapidly taking form.

The I. N. A. was organized in 1938, has held two meetings each year since, and its membership approximates 200 at the present time. The Waterloo Club has 30 active members, and the attendance at their regular monthly sessions is exceptional.

NEWS AND COMMENTS FROM THE LIBRARY

By TED R. HAMMER, Librarian-Curator

Circulation picked up in January: 70 books to 23 different borrowers. If you members double that each month, it will not make this office angry.

Late additions to the Library shelves include a bound volume of recent sales (with prices) of The Numismatic Gallery, New York City, donated by Abe Kosoff, who has befriended the Library frequently in the past. The number is K-8.

In a trade with Mr. W. C. Sanders the Library has acquired "State Bank Notes," a reference list with identifications of historical interest by the well known numismatic writer, John A. Muscalus. The work was published by Wayte Raymond, Inc., 630 Fifth Avenue, New York City, $2. Mr. Muscalus, always a thorough worker, did a lot of research on this volume, and we are glad to say he used the Library extensively. The uncurrent notes are listed by states, providing a ready finding list. Those who like to understand every specimen they own will find this a valuable book for attributing so-called broken bank bills (with apologies to our good friend Mr. D. C. Wismer of Hatfield, Pennsylvania, who long ago taught us to use the term "uncurrent" for all "broken bank bills.") Muscalus says in his introduction that this work required years of preparation, and a glance inside the covers makes this readily evident. It is a worthy addition to other Wayte Raymond books on paper money. The Library number will be M-66.

Another book acquired in a trade with Mr. Sanders is H-50, "Colonial Coins and Tokens," by D. F. Howorth. It contains numerous illustrations and a chronological index.

A highly interesting article on "Continental Money" by Joseph E. Miller, and which is in a bound volume of Harpers Magazine (Vol. 26, December 1862 to May 1863), likewise was acquired from the New Haven dealer in numismatic publications. This article is well illustrated with drawings of the notes and vignettes and will prove interesting to collectors of continental notes. There is nothing about coins in the article, which contains several thousand words. As the paper is in excellent condition, we hope to have the article bound by itself.

The Library was on the receiving end of a windfall. Mr. George Blake, the A. N. A. Treasurer, donated a stack of catalogues including that of the famous John Story Jenks sale of 1921. This catalogue is unpriced, but we hope to borrow a priced catalogue and do the job by hand. The Library receives several requests a year for this catalogue—having one just a few days before Mr. Blake's fine contribution was received. Other catalogues sent by Mr. Blake: Dr. G. F. E. Wilharm collection, sold by Mehl, February 15, 1921; E. Gilbert sale, by Elder, 1910; P. H. Griffith sale, by Mehl, 1912; Captain Zabriskie sale, by Henry Chapman, 1909; Henry L. Jewett sale, by S. H. Chapman, 1909; the noted Matthew A. Stickney sale, catalogued by Henry Chapman, June 25-29, 1907. All of these are unpriced. Persons having any of these priced will do the Library a favor by lending them for a week. Drop us a card. Likewise unpriced are catalogues of: Bement Greek coins, sold June, 1924, in Geneva; Roman coin catalogue, same; Franz Ferdinand Kraus sale No. 3, 1928; sale of H. C. Levis collection of Roman coins, at Lucerne, June 18-20, 1925. Priced catalogues in the lot are: B. W. Smith collection of rare U. S. coins, sold by Mehl, May 25, 1915; a German sale of coins and medals of the world containing numerous fine Greek pieces (two volumes), German, Nov. 5, 8, 1928, well illustrated. There is a demand for priced catalogues of big sales, especially where the books are illustrated well.

The Library needs some illustrated works in English on Swedish, Russian and Polish coins and on Papal pieces. Contributions such as the foregoing greatly increase the value of this department of the A. N. A. We appreciate all of them.

P. S. The Library now has the famous 1921 Jenks sale priced catalogue (J-10). There have been frequent requests for this work in the past. If there is a heavy demand for the work at once, we may request that borrowers keep it for one week only.

BREVITIES

Charles Baker of Hillside, New Jersey, writes that he recently discovered a minor variety in our 1908 5 cent piece: the normal date beneath the head of Liberty curves almost parallel with the edge of the coin, but in this piece the "908" of the date rises considerably above the usual position.

In the "Brevities" for February (page 120) Mr. John Garber of Cleveland asks if anyone has seen another specimen of the 1918 D five cent piece, the 18 over 17. Mr. Fred H. Broom of Lindsay, Ontario, writes that he has one, and that it is listed by Stack's.

The Chicago Coin Club has just issued its Annual Bulletin, an attractive and interesting document of 32 pages, Vol. VIII in the series. An appreciative message from the immediate Past President, Edmond E. Land, prefaces the main section, followed by a roster of the present membership—114 names.

The library contents are listed, filling two and a half pages—certainly a reflection of the genuine interest of the Club as a whole in serious collecting.

"The U. S. Trade Dollar in China," by Don C. Keefer, is a brief but worthwhile comment on a coin that has met with no great favor in comparison with many other issues. William Evans contributes some timely remarks on the Maria Theresa Dollar; Hans Holzer, Earl F. Barger and C. E. Green are also among the contributors, the latter dealing with "Rare Varieties of Private Gold."

A review of the list of Charter Members discloses a saddening number of those who have passed on even in the short period since organization in 1919. We recognize at least seven of the original 33, and there may be still others.

COLONIAL PAPER CURRENCY

In 1794 there was published in London a "History of the American War," by C. Stedman. The following extract, thoughtfully sent in by President Ferguson, will be of interest to the many collectors who have found attraction in the various mediums of exchange adopted by our Colonial authorities. Author Stedman, in summarizing the contributory factors leading to the war, brings our early paper currency clearly into the picture.

In the same session of parliament (1764) an act was passed respecting the paper currency of the colonies, the grounds and motives for the enactment of which it is necessary here to explain. During the late war, the colonial assemblies had been in the practice of issuing bills of credit to answer their present exigencies; and that these bills might more effectually supply the place of money, they were made a legal tender in the payment of all debts, as if they had been gold or silver, and were made redeemable after a certain time, either by the collection of taxes imposed by the assemblies for their redemption or by the money allotted to the respective colonies, by the votes of parliament, as a compensation for their services.

The emission of so much paper money, issued perhaps in some of the colonies with more profusion than was absolutely necessary, produced one effect very injurious to the colonies in raising the course of exchange between them and the mother-country, so that in some of them bills of exchange on Great Britain could not be procured but at a loss to the purchaser of between thirty and forty percent; and as British money, and indeed every kind of coin which was current in the colonies, passed only at certain rates fixed by law, whatever the course of exchange might be; it happened, that when the course of exchange rose above those rates, not only the British money, but all the other current coin in the colonies, was either withheld by individuals from circulation, or remitted to the mother-country in lieu of bills of exchange; and thus in the course of a few years the scarcity of specie was felt as a general evil in the colonies.

This scarcity of specie was also very injurious to the British merchants; because it happened not infrequently that the paper bills of credit, which their agents in the colonies were obliged to receive in payment of their debts, for want of other medium of commerce, were depreciated in value by the rise of exchange, even while they remained in their possession, and before they could lay them out in the purchase of bills of exchange, or any other commodity which would serve as a remittance to Great Britain.

This evil was more or less felt in all the colonies, but more especially in Virginia, where, from the misconduct of the treasurer, the bills of credit received by him from the collectors of the taxes were lent out by him to individuals for his own benefit, and thrown back into circulation, instead of being locked up and secured until they were burnt by order of the assembly. A representation on this subject had been made to the British minister by the merchants trading to Virginia, in which the evils arising from the superabundance of paper money had been more severely felt than in any of the other colonies. But as the evil was more or less felt in all the colonies, it was necessary that the remedy to be provided should be as extensive; and thus the act of parliament above mentioned was passed, whereby the colonial assemblies were restrained from making their bills of credit a lawful tender in payment of money.

PLATING PAPER MONEY

Collectors of Colonial notes and the later American Bank notes and scrip have observed that most notes have a plate letter. This is almost always true where more than one note of the same denomination occurs on the same plate. Some collectors have been ambitious enough to try to reconstruct the sheets; this is not very difficult where the notes are plentiful, good examples being found in most issues of the Confederate States.

The City of Newark, N. J., issued five-cent scrip notes on January 1, 1863, ten notes to the sheet. They were numbered in red figures by machine, starting with Number 1, more than 9,000 sheets being cut up and distributed. I have been able to assemble seven notes of Sheet No. 2, and lack the three notes bearing the letters: A, I and J.

It would be quite an accomplishment to complete a specific sheet of notes. I have often wondered if perhaps the missing notes might be in the possession of some of the members of our Association. If any of my readers has a five-cent note of Newark, N. J., with the figure 2 in red on the right hand side, I would be pleased to hear from him.

A COMPREHENSIVE REPORT OF LAST YEAR'S U. S. COINAGE

The following report was prepared by Martin F. Kortjohn, 1st Vice President of the A. N. A., for the American Numismatic Society, and he has kindly consented to its publication here.

The production of the mints of the United States during the year 1942 was not as large as that for 1941 but it exceeded that for 1940, which had the greatest coinage of any year up to that time. This holds true only if output of coins is used as the measure of productivity. However, there was during 1942 a different kind of activity brought about by reason of the war. Changes were necessitated by war requirement of nickel, tin and copper. The coinage executed for foreign governments as shown by the monthly mint reports was confined to the month of January and consisted of coins for the Netherlands East Indies and Surinam.

No change was made in any of the silver coins, but the cent and five cent pieces differ in their composition. The content of the cent is 95% copper and 5% zinc and tin as authorized in 1864. It used to contain about 1% of tin but it now contains but a trace of this metal, its place being taken by additional zinc. No new authorizing act was required to effect the change.

A major change was made in the five cent pieces. In 1866 the alloy was fixed at 75% of copper and 25% of nickel. On March 27, 1942, the President approved a bill changing the metallic content of the five cent piece until not later than December 31, 1946. The new law provided that the new pieces should be minor coins and contain half silver and half copper, though for certain purposes they would be deemed to be copper and not silver coins. On the order of the Director of the Mint, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Chairman of the War Production Board, the proportions of silver and copper could be varied, and other metals could be added if in the public interest. In conformity with this authority, the alloy was finally fixed at 35% silver, 56% copper and 9% manganese, a new metal for the U. S. coinage. The manganese was apparently introduced as a result of recommendations made by owners of coin-operated devices. Criticism that the 50% silver and 50% copper alloy mentioned in the bill is not magnetic seems to have been met by the addition of the manganese; the new pieces are affected by a magnet to a greater degree than the old five cent nickels. Furthermore, the objection that pieces with a 50% silver content would be worth too much was met by the introduction of the manganese and by the increase of the proportion of copper, with a consequent reduction in the ratio of silver. Apparently, the present five cent piece and the old five cent nickel are almost alike in their electrical properties.

Coinage of the five cent nickels ceased in May, 1942, because the old alloy could be used up to sixty days after the approval of the bill. The new pieces were first shown in the mint reports for October and, aside from the difference in composition, differed from the old pieces in that mint marks were placed in large letters above the dome of Monticello.

For the first time in the history of the mint service the mint mark P has been used on coins of this country.

Another change in the law took place on December 18, 1942, when President Roosevelt signed a bill authorizing the minting up to December 31, 1946, of one or more special series of minor coins limited to the one and three cent denominations. Interesting features of the bill are that each denomination is to constitute a series and that if a denomination is coined in more than one physical form or composition, the pieces of each physical form or composition will constitute a separate series. Another feature is the fact that the use of the coins in coin-operated devices and the conservation of strategic metals in the furtherance of the war effort are to be taken into consideration before the pieces are coined. The Secretary of the Treasury, after consultation with officials charged with the production of war material, will prescribe the denomination, pertinent physical properties, content, weight, dimensions, shape and design of the new pieces. A third feature provides for melting down and use or sale of all worn and uncurrent minor coins on order of the Secretary of the Treasury. A special section also provides for the melting down into bars of all worn and uncurrent standard silver dollars now held by or hereafter received in the Treasury. Finally, the coinage of the new series of coins will be executed at the mints of the United States or in whole or in part at other places or plants designated by the Director of the Mint, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. News reports have announced that the first coins to be issued under this law will be cents with a steel base and a zinc surface.

THE COMMON PEOPLE OF ANCIENT ROME

By EARLE KEZARTEE STANTON, Los Angeles, California

(A paper presented at the Cincinnati Convention, 1942)

The common people have received too little attention in the writings relating to ancient Roman coins which deal largely with the greatness of Julius Caesar and others or the interesting wickedness of Nero and his kind. Yet the Roman citizen was the one who handled most of the bronze and silver coins and his importance in the civic scheme is witnessed by the well known initials found on many coins: S. P. Q. R., which means "The Senate and People of Rome." The worn and rubbed condition of sestertii and denarii was not caused by the hands of the emperors but by the constant circulation among the middle and lower classes who exchanged these coins for circuses and bread or other pleasures or necessities.

Those who have not made a study of these coins or of ancient history, and who have not seen the existing remains of the great Roman Empire, are likely to think that these people were barbarians who spent most of their time fighting other barbarians, or watching Christians being torn to pieces in the Coliseum. One has only to examine some of the fine coins struck by ancient moneyers to learn that Rome enjoyed a civilization quite comparable to our own, and that in the realm of die making as in many other lines the Romans were our equals or even our superiors. The everyday life of the ancients can be learned from their coins alone, for we find here portrayed their buildings, dress, food, implements and weapons. Religion, politics, history, art and architecture are treated in considerable detail during a period of some eight hundred years from the first Roman coinage about 300 B. C. down to the fall of the western empire in 476 A. D.

In the Roman Republic which terminated with the murder of Julius Caesar in 44 B. C. and to a more limited extent in the empire which followed, the common people actively participated in the affairs of government and voted at elections much as we do. Several denarii show Roman citizens dropping their ballots in the ballot box which seems to have been a jug or urn. On other coins we find a representation of soldiers taking an oath in what was believed to be a very solemn ritual, over the body of a pig. Various officers are shown performing their civic or religious duties and a denarius of Brutus pictures his ancestor, Lucius Junius Brutus, the first consul, walking between two lictors who are preceded by an accensus or herald. The officer of the people was the Tribune, nominated by popular assembly and this office was considered of such great importance that Caesar, Augustus and the succeeding emperors took the tribunitian power to themselves and renewed it annually. Many coins are definitely dated by the inscription TR P XII or other numeral, signifying that the particular issue was struck during the twelfth year in which the named emperor had enjoyed the tribunitian power. This does not however, necessarily indicate the twelfth year of the emperor's reign since several princes were granted this great power during the lives of their predecessors.

When first viewing Roman coins people sometimes exclaim: "Why, they used our alphabet!" This of course is not strictly true; we use theirs. The Latin language itself never died, for the classical form was preserved in the church and elsewhere as well as in the writings of Caesar, Cicero, Pliny and many others. The popular form of speech as used in the various Roman colonies, implanted there by victorious armies, colonists and merchants, underwent various changes in form and pronunciation, finally becoming Italian, Spanish, French, Roumanian, etc. Colonial coins struck by Brutus and Cassius about 43 B. C. spell the Latin word for liberty, "LEIBERTAS," instead of using the Roman form "LIBERTAS" found on the coins struck about the same time in Rome.

We cannot be ignorant of the home life of the Romans, for from their coins we know the kind of chairs they sat on, the tables they used, how they dressed, and what the barbers did to their hair and beards. Styles in hair dressing changed with the times, and the examples set by the emperors and their families were closely followed by the common people. Coins portraying the wives of the emperors illustrate elaborate coiffures with permanent waves quite comparable to those of the present day. The hair arrangement exemplified on the coins of Antonia, daughter of Marc Antony and mother of the emperor Claudius, the two Faustinas, mother and daughter, who were respectively the wives of Antoninus Pius and of Marcus Aurelius, are certainly worthy of emulation. Nor were the men to be outdone in this respect. The curly head of Marcus Aurelius distinguishes his coins and his finely dressed beard was copied by his colleague Lucius Verus and presumably by many others.

The household gods, Lares et Penates, appear on several coins, one of the gens Sulpicia picturing two fine male heads representing the Penates who were the guardians of food supply, store room and kitchen. The great market of Nero, the Macellum Magnum, where the Romans purchased their meats and supplies, is found on the reverse of a bronze of that emperor. The circular markets of the Emperor Trajan are still to be seen in Rome. While the prices they paid are not recorded on the coinage, a list of ceiling prices put in effect by Diocletian, 284-305 A. D., has come down to us in considerable detail. Coins of Marcus Aurelius and others show citizens receiving donations of grain as a so called Liberality presided over by the emperor in person.

The vaulted aqueducts which brought drinking water to the Romans are also represented on denarii of the Republic. Some of these aqueducts are still in use at the present time, bringing the water to Rome from the Alban Mountains much as they did two thousand years ago. Another denarius is inscribed to the goddess Cloacina who presided over sewers and drainage. Representations of Bacchus, grape leaves, wine amphorae and drinking utensils are quite common on both Greek and Roman coins.

While the houses of the great middle class do not seem to have been numismatically represented, the actual residences of these people may still be visited at Pompeii, Herculaneum and elsewhere. The state guest house, the Villa Publica, where distinguished guests were entertained, is shown on a denarius struck about 69-50 B. C. Many temples and public buildings of various kinds are also pictured showing fine examples of the Graeco-Roman architecture. The Roman Forum, or public square, was the chief gathering place of the common people, and on a denarius of the Lollia family we find the Rostra or speaking platform from which Cicero and other orators, good and bad, addressed the people.

"The amusements of the Romans," says Prof. William C. Morey in his 'Outlines of Roman History,' were largely sensational, and appealed to the tastes of the populace. Their influence was almost always bad and tended to degrade the morals of the people." Be this as it may, we find many coins referring to matters of recreation. The great Circus Maximus, 1875 feet long and 625 feet wide, capable, according to Pliny, of accommodating 260,000 spectators, appears on a sestertius of Trajan. Here were held chariot races and athletic exhibitions of various kinds, and many of the worn coins we now possess presumably paid admission to this and other places of amusement. Wooden amphitheatres, including one erected by Nero on the present site of St. Peter's and the Vatican, eventually gave way to the famous stone Coliseum at Rome, which Titus and his father Vespasian built with forced Jewish labor, and dedicated in 80 A. D. This great edifice, still standing, is pictured on a rare sestertius of Titus and on coins of a few of the later emperors. Seating between 50,000 and 100,000 people, it was the scene of fierce gladiatorial exhibitions as well as the persecution of Christians. Even the emperor Commodus, the bad son of the philosopher Marcus Aurelius, appeared here as a gladiator, and in one day killed more than a hundred beasts. It is said that 50,000 Christians suffered martyrdom in this arena, meeting death in a variety of dreadful ways.

There were many theatres designed for ordinary dramatic events such as the Theatre of Marcellus built by Julius Caesar and Augustus, and the Theatre of Pompey where Caesar's murder took place. Musical instruments used by the Romans and portrayed on their coins include the cithara, a guitar-like instrument struck with a plectrum, the lyre, trumpets, cymbals, tympanon and sistrum.

There is scarcely anything in the lives of the Roman people which is not in some manner portrayed or referred to on their coins, an examination of which will easily demonstrate that these people were human beings much like ourselves. We have made us of their coin designs, their architecture, their alphabet, their governmental forms and much else, for which credit should be given. A noted writer on Roman history, Guglielmo Ferrero, himself an Italian, in praising our form of government, says: "This superiority—never forget it—you owe to Rome; for its possession, be grateful to the city that has encircled you with such glory, by infusing so tenacious a life into the Respublica." The rise and fall of the common people, the mistakes and triumphs of their leaders, and the obvious superiority of the republican form of government, is clearly written on the coins of Rome.

WITH THE DEALERS

The magnificent collection of A. A. Grinnell of Detroit is to be sold in the near future by B. Max Mehl. Particulars will be found in the advertising section.

Mr. Mehl reports unexpectedly fine results from the sale of the Voetter collection, the total exceeding $21,000, and only one or two coins bringing over $100 each. The foreign silver went at substantial prices, and the U. S. indicated a steadily rising market.

CINCINNATI CONVENTION BADGES

Librarian Ted R. Hammer of Burlington, Iowa, wishes again to call attention to the fact that some of the badges of the Cincinnati convention are still available at $1.00 each; and that a few of the (1939) New York convention badges also may be had—the two for $1.75. Receipts will go into the Library book purchase fund.

THE ORDER OF THE EAGLE EYE

BE IT KNOWN, that this day there is constituted a new fraternity, under the name of The Order of the Eagle Eye. There are no officers, no dues, no conventions, and no medals. Membership will be acquired by the simple and friendly act of pointing out to the Editor any error in a statement of fact which may in the future be discovered in articles appearing in THE NUMISMATIST.

While the Editor may deplore the occasion which makes any given membership possible, nevertheless if such does occur, the member is assured of a welcome; and in spite of the invitation here extended to join this unique organization (on the above terms only), it is hoped that the opportunities of so doing will be reasonably rare.

Capt. Otto C. Steinberger of Richland, Michigan, calls our attention to the statement made in Carl Wurzbach's article last month to the effect that the "In God We Trust" motto first appeared on a U. S. coin in 1866, and reminds us that its first appearance was on the 2 cent piece of 1864 instead. The original article in 1918 gave the date as 1866.

CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

ATLANTA COIN CLUB—February 3. There were 12 members and 7 visitors present, with President Todd presiding.

Correspondence included a letter from the Treasury Department stating that proof coins were not being minted at this time, and a letter from Mr. Shepard Pond, President of the Boston Numismatic Society, recommending the book "Numismatics of Massachusetts" by Malcolm Storer, as an authoritative work and a useful addition to any numismatic library.

President Todd exhibited a frame of miscellaneous coins illustrating how coins will be displayed at the Carnegie Library. Their nation's flag will be placed at the top of each row of Pan-American coins included in the exhibit. Mr. Johns, Chairman of the Committee, said that members had turned in a large number, but that many more were needed to complete the display.

The meeting was adjourned and our quarterly auction was held with about 60 lots of coins sold.

—Frank G. O'Rear, Secretary.

BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The annual meeting of the Society was held on Monday evening, January 25th, 1943, at the Boston City Club. Owing to the inclement weather and the uncertainty of a private meeting place at the City Club, it was gratifying to note that 16 members and one guest were present, namely, Messrs: Pond, Kuhn, Schuhmacher, Klein, Vikre, Stiff, Heide, Lowenstam, Chell-Frost, Prior, Grant, Doyle, Sonnabend, Evanson and Shackford, the guest being Mr. Flint of the City Club.

Mr. Schuhmacher made further report on his progress of public displays for National Coin Week which is to be observed this year during the week of April 11th. He reported progress and advised the members that he had succeeded in obtaining space in Gilchrist's, which is located in the heart of the city of Boston at Washington and Winter Streets. The display there, will be made in one of their prominent street windows. Mr. Sonnabend at this time made the suggestion that he could also obtain space at the Cleveland Circle Branch of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston, in Brookline. The display to cover Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays. Mr. Schuhmacher said that the displays would be made by the members, without signatures on the frames, and that Gilchrist's would insure the exhibit. More of the progress will be reported at the next meeting.

The Treasurer's report for the past year showed, among other things, that the membership was the largest in the history of the Society, about 50, and that during the year six new members were added, with only one death (Dr. Victor A. Reed of Lawrence). The Treasurer also reported that there were five active members in military service.

The annual election of officers was held, with the following results: President, Shepard Pond; Vice President and Curator, Samuel S. Reynolds; Treasurer, Henry Evanson; Secretary, Ernest R. Shackford.

Mr. Herman J. Heide was made a Life Member at this meeting.

—Ernest R. Shackford, Secretary.

BUFFALO NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—The meeting of January 11th was called to order by the newly elected President, Dr. J. H. Wild, with nine members present.

In a few well chosen words President Dr. Wild expressed appreciation on his election to the Presidency of the club. He felt it a great honor and sincerely hoped to justify the judgment of the members.

A motion was made, seconded and carried, that the Club acquire a priced catalog of Max Mehl's latest auction, the sale of the Thomas W. Voetter collection, considered as one of the best of South American coins; this to be added to the Club's reference library.

Mr. Cage, Club Librarian, was asked to report the status of the library at the next meeting.

Favorable comments were made on the new editing of the Numismatist, the style and simplicity creating a good impression, and the editorial, "A Personal Word," was, at President Wild's request, read by the Secretary for the benefit of all present. The Secretary was instructed to send a letter of congratulation and assurance of co-operation to Burton H. Saxton, the new editor.

Displayed by Mr. Prickett the following: $10 gold, U. S.; 1889-S; gold half Sovereign, England, George V.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—The 179th regular meeting of the club was held on February 2, 1943, with an attendance of twenty-five members and guests. President Adolph Larson, Jr., presided. Mr. Koepfel read a letter advising that due to more pressing business, the striking of 1943 proof coins had been delayed and that orders therefor could not be supplied at the present time. Mr. Koepfel also mentioned the new steel cent which will be issued, and the report that the government plans to call in the silver dollars which are now in circulation. Mr. Larson presented seven numismatic questions for solution by the members.

Secretary Stanton then spoke on "The Comparison of Ancient and Modern Coins," calling attention to the fact that the form, size, design and metallic content of our modern coinage is not materially different from that of the ancient Greek and Roman coins. The Romans largely derived their art from the Greeks, and the modern coin designs have in many cases been taken directly from the Roman coins; for example, the Roman eagle and fasces, and the head of Liberty. While the Greek coins surpassed all others in art, the Roman die makers excelled in portraying historical events. The hoarding of coins by the ancients has resulted in many of these pieces being available to modern collectors at very low prices. The accompanying exhibit included ancient coins of gold, silver and bronze, and a tray of genuine and counterfeit ancient coins for comparison.

—Earle K. Stanton, Secretary.

CALUMET NUMISMATIC CLUB—The 27th regular meeting of the club was held Jan. 13, 1943, at the "Katherine House," 3803 Deodar St., Indiana Harbor, with 10 members and one visitor present.

After the regular business meeting, at which all committees for the ensuing year were appointed, an interesting exhibit of paper money by Arthur Rutz was enjoyed.

—L. Achenbach, Secretary.

CANTON COIN CLUB—The 90th meeting of the Club was held February 1, 1943, with nineteen members and one guest present: President Warren G. Smith in the chair.

After a report by the officers and committees, Mr. V. L. Stover read a letter from Dr. H. Dell of Dayton, Ohio, in which he expressed his appreciation of all that the Club has done for him and numismatics in general by donating a check of $10 to be used by the Club for publicity purposes. Dr. Dell was one of the founders of the Canton Coin Club a little over seven years ago. He is an enthusiastic numismatist; is a man who likes nothing better than the study of good coins and also the good fellowship created by men in general. While an active member of this club, Dr. Dell always duplicated a members dues to help the club finance its early programs. He also donated a cup to be given each year to the member doing the most for the club.

The members of the Canton Coin Club herewith wish to express its gratitude publicly to Dr. Dell for his generous gift.

Dr. Sargys, of Cleveland, the great lecturer and numismatist, was voted an honorary membership for the good work he has done in helping to make this club the success it is today.

Mr. William Bruce gave a talk on the history of cowrie shell money, Chinese knife, hand wrought nail, and circular money; money from the isle of Yap, from Cyprus, Lydia's gold and silver. A brief sketch of these territories covered the origin of their mediums of exchange from the beginning to the present day.

For an added attraction which we hope will stimulate more interest in our auctions it has been suggested, and we are going to try it at the next meeting, that we take a special subject such as Colonials and Indian head cents for the next meeting for auction purposes only. Each member will bring his or her collection of these two items for display and also any and all of their duplicates to be put up at auction. At each subsequent meeting two new coins will be taken up.

Displays shown at this meeting were: William Bruce, Chinese knife and spade money, Roman and English silver pennies, English shillings, territorial coins of early Greece, Cowrie shell money.

V. L. Stover, Canton depression scrip of 1933, one, five and ten dollars.

G. F. Duryee, fifty cent pieces: 1845, proof; 1846 proof surface; 1846, reeded edge; 1855 S.

Walter E. Welch, Presidential medals of McKinley and U. S. Grant.

Terry Brown, military decorations of Russia, Austria, Germany, Belgium, United States, Ohio, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania. These decorations were all from the first World War.

—Louis A. Salasek, Secretary.

CHICAGO COIN CLUB—The 288th regular monthly meeting of the Club was held at La Salle Hotel on February 3rd with 66 members and three visitors present, President Pennington presiding.

President Pennington and Mr. Green reported on the progress of the Yearbook. Mr. Ostrander announced that an auction is planned for the next meeting. Mr. Barger spoke on the notes recently released by the Federal Reserve Banks.

Dr. Reich then asked the exhibitors to speak on their exhibits, which were exceptionally choice. Lincoln and Washington items predominated. Dr. Skeen exhibited some scarce Indiana items, which were very interesting. Following the exhibits Mr. Ripstra spoke on Lincoln and the women whom he knew. This was received with an enthusiastic rising vote.

COLUMBUS NUMISMATIC SOCIETY

—The 134th meeting of the Society was held in the Walnut Room of the Neil House, Monday, Feb. 8. President Gillhooley presided, with 19 members present.

The club voted unanimously to exempt all members in the armed forces from 1943 dues and to forward their membership cards immediately.

President Gillhooley gave an interesting talk on Washington and Lincoln. All members had Washington and Lincoln commemorative coins and medals on display. Outstanding exhibits of the evening were photographs of Lincoln owned by Mrs. Henderson. The most remarkable of these had printed on the back the following:

"LINCOLN AS HE REALLY WAS"

"The remarkable photograph of Abraham Lincoln of which this is a faithful color copy is entirely unknown to America at large. It was made in the White House, April 9th, 1865, by Alexander Gardner, and at the instant of its taking Lincoln had just finished sharpening a pencil for his son Tad. Prints from the negative, which is as clear today as on the day it was made, have been given a few friends and acquaintances by J. H. Gossler, who acquired the negative many years ago."

"And having thus chosen our course, without guile and with pure purpose, let us renew our trust in God and go forward without fear and with many hearts."

(Signed) "Abraham Lincoln"

The meeting was adjourned and a general discussion followed.

—V. B. Chambers, Secretary.

JERSEY CITY COIN CLUB—The regular meeting of the Club was held January 28 at the Hotel Plaza. The following members were present: Mr. and Mrs. Douglas, Messrs. Blake, Hughes, Arthur, Carpenter, and Mathews. The guest for the evening was Mrs. Bauer. The exhibits were as follows: Mrs. Douglas, seventy-two Columbus medals; W. Ray Carpenter, misstruck pieces of George III of England, ½ penny, farthing, and shilling; obverse and reverse shells in copper of the Pistrucci Waterloo medal; Aes of Octavianus struck in Austria, which shows Caesar and Octavianus on the obverse; This piece from the Faelton Sale. Penny of Fiji struck under Edward VIII. Damon G. Douglas, 1793 cents C3 and C11; 1794 cents H5, 12, 20, 31, 33, 39, 45, 48, 54; Coins of Fiji, Finland, France. D. O. Hughes, four varieties of 1793 cents, 19 varieties of 1794 cents, Centennial set of Columbian medals, other Columbian medals, coins of France including Colonial, Fiji, West Frisia. W. H. Arthur, Tripoli 1/8 of crown, 1841, rare; Morocco 1/10 Ryal 1880; a gold plated Lincoln cent of 1909. George H. Blake, French Essais; Gold 10, 20 and 100 Francs, Silver 5, 10 and 20 Francs.

—H. C. Mathews, Secretary.

NEW JERSEY NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The 113th meeting of the Society was held at the Downtown Club, Newark, on February 11, 1943. Eleven members and two guests were present. President Brookes presided.

Mr. Blaisdell read press items of numismatic interest.

Mr. Blaisdell, for the Topic Committee, suggested the topics for March: "Emergency Money"; "Coins of Foreign Countries Beginning with C"; and "Pattern Coins."

President Brookes announced the annual auction for the March meeting.

Mr. Thomas U. Purrington read a most interesting paper on "Observations on State Coinage in the U. S."

The topics for the meeting were: "Encased Postage Money"; "Coins of Countries Beginning with B"; and "Colonial Coins."

The exhibits, consisting of a wide and interesting selection of coins appropriate to the evening's topics, were made by Mrs. Black and Mrs. Brookes; and by Messrs. Arthur, Blaisdell, Blake, Brookes, Douglas, Gebshemer, Hughes and Purrington.

—Mrs. Frank Brookes, Secretary.

NORTHWEST COIN CLUB—The Northwest Coin Club held its regular meeting on Thursday, February 4th, at the Curtis Hotel, Minneapolis. In the absence of the president, Oce Curtis presided at the meeting, which was attended by eighteen members and two guests. Mr. Curtis auctioned several American and English gold coins. The Rev. Elias Rasmussen displayed some very beautiful commemorative coins of the Scandinavian countries. Many of these were proof coins issued at the time Norway was under the rule of Denmark. These coins were issued as "traveling money"—the maximum value being approximately $4,000.00 and the minimum value about $500.00. The coins were designed as "traveling money" because the King used them for that purpose in going from one country to another, or in traveling within the boundaries of any Scandinavian country.

—Oce Curtis, Act. Secy.

OMAHA COIN CLUB—Our 96th regular meeting was held at the home of Dr. J. Hewitt Judd. Fourteen members and guests were present.

Dr. Judd not only has a wonderful numismatic collection but he also has an elaborate and marvelously designed coin room for this well known collection. The way his collection is housed and exhibited makes it all the more interesting and educational.

Our host had just returned from a trip to New York and while there had obtained some very choice and rare classical silver and gold coins.

Mr. & Mrs. D. C. Whitford were guests at the meeting. Mr. Whitford has been transferred to Omaha from Des Moines, Iowa where he was District Secretary for Western Iowa.

After a few words from President Blaufuss and the reading of letters from our members in the Armed Services, we were served a most delicious lunch by Mrs. Judd.

—Raymond Moulton, Secretary.

MISSOURI NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The February meeting of The Missouri Numismatic Soc. was held on Monday, February the 8th with 22 members present and President Saab in the chair. Mr. Saab gave an interesting account of his recent trips in which he visited several other coin clubs.

Exhibits were made as follows: Mr. George E. May, Proof sets, also Proof Indian head cents. Mr. F. K. Saab, some very choice specimens of U. S. and Foreign gold, including a superb 10 drachmas of George I of Greece, brilliant proof of 1869 of which there are but two known.

A new club Roster showing eighty members and the collecting preferences of each was distributed to all present.

An impromptu Auction of some forty lots produced from the pockets of those in attendance was then held and some good prices were realized.

—John H. Snow, Secretary.

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The 69th meeting of the Society was held Monday evening, February 8, 1943, at the Benson Hotel, in Portland, with 22 members and 3 guests in attendance; President Bibler in the chair.

Hugh Davenport reports the weather was cold in Chicago, during the month of January, but not so cold for him to visit some of the coin shops in the Loop District. He tells us most coins bring more of a premium there than here. His trip also took him into South Carolina where he visited the Confederate Museum and other points of interest. Says there was no coin shop in the city of Columbia, S. C. which has a population of about 60,000.

Displays of coins from the Philippine Islands were made by Hugh Davenport, Henry Perry, Howard Hughes, Steve Bibler and Felix Baranovich. George Pipes gave a very interesting talk on the Philippine Islands, giving a summary of their history from 1521 up until the present time as well as a description of the population and its changes. Mrs. Effie Eltings, wife of the late Brigadier-General LeRoy Eltinge of the U. S. Army, displayed a varied and interesting collection of souvenirs collected in the Philippines by General Eltinge. These included crude native weapons, protective charms made of cloth, flags and native costumes.

For our next meeting President Bibler called on each of the members to bring Russian Coins and Bill Conger has promised us some highlights on Russian History. An auction, with John Gale as auctioneer, closed the meeting.

—John R. Slusher, Secretary.

PACIFIC COAST NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—January 27th. 325th meeting with 21 members and 7 guests present. M. M. Morris, Jr., presiding.

The President welcomed all and in a short address outlined the activities of the Society and urged all to do their best to keep the high standard of the Society in the numismatic field. The Secretary read a communication from the U. S. Treasury that owing to the already overtaxed Philadelphia Mint the striking of proof coins has been discontinued for the present.

Mr. Moses Dunn gave a fine talk on the varieties of the Lincoln Cents, and on die breaks and the different positions of mint marks.

Moses Dunn: Lincoln Cents.

Wm. Wilson: Roman Coins 286 to 305 A. D.

H. T. Wrede: Great Britain and Colonies.

Bruno Crossfield: Complete set of Unc. Indian Head Cents.

Clifford Bloom: Old types of U. S. Paper Money.

Edward Fogler: Coins of China, Chile, Cuba, Costa Rica, Colombia and Czechoslovakia.

PHILADELPHIA COIN CLUB—February 11, 1943. The 92nd meeting was called to order in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel by President Havens, with twenty-seven members and two guests in attendance.

The members listened with interest to the reading of two letters from Private George J. Patterson and Captain Joseph Moss, both expressing their pleasure in receiving the Club's new publication, "The News Letter," which is sent to all members in the armed forces.

On motion it was decided to order for the Club's library a copy of Malcolm Storer's "Numismatics of Massachusetts."

The Treasurer reported a balance in the treasury of $414.99.

The following were the exhibits of the evening:

Mr. Ballard: Nine Washington pieces, 1783-1795; also the four representative types of Nova Constellatio, three of Fugio, and Colonials as follows: 1766 Pitt, 1781 North American Token, 1783 Georgius Triumpho, Bar Cent, and 1794 Franklin Press, all in extremely fine to uncirculated condition.

Mr. Reed: Several cards of fine Oriental coins.

Mr. Enburg: A large number of sets of United States coins in holders.

Mr. Schick: The one, five, and ten dollar gold seal notes used by our armed forces in North Africa.

There were a large number of coins for the evening's auction, which was conducted by Mr. Schick.

—Arthur Sipe, Secretary.

RACINE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The 59th regular meeting was held at the Y. M. C. A. Friday, February 12th, with Vice President Arthur E. Jones in the chair.

Thirteen members were present.

Much of the meeting was devoted to a discussion of the problem of conducting club activities under war conditions. The annual banquet, always a successful affair, was discussed at length. The publicity and the exhibits in connection with the banquet have always received city-wide attention. The banquet, which is usually held during NATIONAL COIN WEEK has proved to be the "main event" of our organization in past years. War conditions such as transportation difficulties and the like face our program committee this year. Further consideration on the question was slated for the March meeting.

Joseph Martin presented the society with a copy of B. Max Mehl's catalog of Dr. George P. French's collection of Large U. S. Cents.

—R. S. Yeoman, Secretary.

RICHMOND COIN CLUB—The twenty-fourth meeting of the Club was held at the home of Miss Dorothy McCaw, on Wednesday, February 10, at 8 o'clock, with President Howe presiding. There were eleven members present.

After the collection of dues the meeting was turned over to Mr. Lewis, Chairman of the Program Committee.

Mr. Lewis made a few preliminary remarks on methods of displaying coins, and then called on Mrs. Lewis who showed her Chinese dollars and read an article on Chinese money by Stuart Mosher.

Miss McCaw showed a few Mexican coins and talked briefly about them. She also displayed her very fascinating collection of approximately 60 different specimens of cacti, including several of the rarer varieties.

—Helen G. Lewis, Secretary.

ROCHESTER NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—The Association held its annual banquet at the Hotel Seneca on Saturday evening, January 9, 1943.

After the repast President Edward Meinhart presented retiring past President Floyd B. Newell with a silver copy of the Association's XXX President's medal, thus continuing a custom initiated in 1912, the year of organization. This custom of striking a medal of each retiring President of the R. N. A. is believed to be unique in the history of local numismatic groups. The medal shows the portrait of the President for the year and on its reverse shows the Coat of Arms and Seal of the Association.

Notables in attendance were Dr. Arthur C. Parker, Director of the Rochester Museum of Arts and Sciences, in which the Association constitutes the numismatic section; Charles W. Foster, a former Librarian of the A. N. A., and George J. Bauer, a past President and a life member of the A. N. A.

—W. M. Hutchinson, Secretary.

(The President's medal is illustrated elsewhere in this issue. Ed.)

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 78th meeting of the Club was held January 28th; President Fouts in the chair. Twenty members and visitors present.

Mr. Wagner read an article regarding the mottoes on U. S. coins. Mr. Fouts spoke on the significance of the number of points on the stars on U. S. coins.

After hearing the recommendations of the nominating committee, the annual election was held with the following results: President, Wm. M. Worth; Vice President, Bert A. Wagner; Secy.-Treas., Henry Zeckser.

One of the coins displayed was a Confederate restrike half dollar, by Mr. Glickert. Mr. Ryckman showed a tray of U. S. patterns, also two trays of civil war cents. Mr. Fleider a tray of U. S. gold containing denominations from $1 to $20. A variety of U. S. notes were also shown.

—C. C. Saeman, Secretary.

SPRINGFIELD COIN CLUB—310th meeting, January 13th, 1943, held at the Museum of Fine Arts, President Wheeler presiding, with five members present.

This, being the annual meeting, Mr. Wurtz was called on for the nominating committee's choice for election of officers. He presented the names of all present officers for reelection and there being no other nominations, the Secretary was instructed to cast one ballot for the reelection of Howard A. Wheeler, as President, Howard E. MacIntosh, Vice-President, and William W. Willard, Secretary-Treasurer.

The attendance, being small, due to transportation, the exhibit and auction were omitted; the activities for the evening were given over to general discussion. During the discussion the death of Mr. John E. Morse on Nov. 23, 1942 was recalled and all present felt that the Club had lost a valuable member. It was suggested that a copy of Resolutions adopted by the Club at the December meeting be sent to the A. N. A. that they might know how much the S. C. C. thought of this veteran collector, who was a charter member of that organization. Mr. Morse was well known for his interest in paper money and Lincoln material of which he had an extensive collection.

RESOLUTION.

"Whereas, in the death of John E. Morse the numismatic fraternity in general and the Springfield Coin Club in particular, has lost a much beloved fellow collector, one who had many personal friends in the organization who deeply valued his many virtues and splendid qualities of fellowship.

"Therefore, be it resolved: That the Springfield Coin Club hereby expresses its keen sorrow at the passing of its valued associate and that it extends its sincere sympathy to the family in their great loss;

"Resolved: That these resolutions be placed upon a separate page of the club, and that a copy be sent to the family of our deceased member."

WESTERN MARYLAND COIN CLUB

—The regular monthly meeting of the Western Maryland Coin Club was held Wednesday, January 20, 1943 at the Crystal Laundry, 23 members and 1 guest, Mr. John Weller, attended.

The meeting was called to order at 8 p. m. with President Morris presiding. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Letters were read from the Central Y. M. C. A. and William A. Gaede of Pittsburgh. A letter of resignation from Member Geo. H. Korn was read. The tone of his letter led us to believe that he misinterpreted the monthly notice he received, resulting in a motion by Member

Young that the Secretary advise Mr. Korn as to the meaning of the monthly notice to the effect that it only applied to members who were delinquent. This motion was seconded by Member Keyser and carried.

Our Coin Auction raffle, an 1883 Proof Shield Nickel was won by our guest, Mr. Weller. The door prize, a magnifying glass, was won by member Louis Young.

An auction was held with each member auctioning his own material. A complete set of unc. Indian cents were broken down and auctioned separately, with some of them bringing very handsome prices.

Our speaker of the evening was member Albert Doub. Mr. Doub elected to hold a coin quiz; a prize of U. S. War Saving Stamps was offered to the member answering the most questions correctly. Many of the numismatic questions were of a historical nature and were highly enlightening.

Member Wilson was the winner of the Coin quiz.

—Charles H. Hyde, Secretary.

WESTERN PENNA. NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—Regular monthly meeting, February 2, 1943.

Those present were members Gillis, Peters, Coatsworth, Hepting, Hall, Marlier, Woodside, Buterbaugh and visitor Mr. B. G. Stoneking.

Dr. Gillis announced that the subject of his talk to be given at the March meeting of the society would be "War Decorations."

Program Chairman Mr. Woodside introduced the subject of the evening, "Housing a Collection," by giving views based on his own experience. The resulting discussion gave everyone present an opportunity to express many ideas. The pros and cons of long or square envelopes; gummed flaps and printing on envelopes; cellophane or various types of paper in envelopes; the ills of cedar wood in coin boxes and rubber bands in the wrapping of coins; steel drawer safes; thin glass sheets with holed cards between, and the various types of coin holders; the advantage or disadvantages of camphor in the coin drawers, and the wrapping of coins in tarnish free tissues: all were thoroughly discussed until the allotted meeting time was gone and it seemed that the subject still had not been exhausted. Exhibits:

Dr. Gillis: Medals of Queen Anne, Queen Victoria, Michael Angelo, and the present King and Queen of England.

Mr. Coatsworth: All of the U. S. commemorative gold pieces except the fifty dollar Panama Pacific slugs; Representative collection of commemorative U. S. half dollars; Lafayette dollar and Isabella quarter.

Mr. Marlier: Various foreign pattern and trade crown size pieces.

Mr. Hall: Commemorative medals, silver and bronze.

Mr. Woodside: Collection of Civil War Sutler's checks.

Mr. Buterbaugh: Crown size coins of South American countries.

—R. J. Buterbaugh, Secretary.

WASHINGTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The Society held its monthly meeting at the Women's City Club, 736 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington, D. C., on Monday evening, February 1, 1943. Eleven members were present, with one guest, Lieut. Surack, of Oklahoma.

Three members exhibited coins and notes. Mr. Rothwell presented a small group of English coins. Mr. Permoda exhibited a number of Confederate notes, including both counterfeit and genuine types, and made interesting comparisons. He also displayed an interesting 1799 U. S. cent, on which the "9" had been made over an "8". He said it was possibly a rarity, depending on whether the date had been altered in the mint or outside. The coin has a die break on the reverse. Mr. Leachman, president of the Society, exhibited part of his collection of British coins, particularly the coins of the present ruler, George VI. His comments on the coins, covering Great Britain, the dominions and colonies, were supported by carefully prepared data. It was an unusually interesting review.

Mr. Frederic E. Hoge, who holds membership card No. 1 in the Society, presented a report of preliminary investigation made by himself and several other members, of the move being made by the District of Columbia tax authorities to include stamp and coin collections in assessments of personal property. It was pointed out that the current tax questionnaire which property owners are required to return calls for a listing of such collections. After considerable discussion by all present, a motion by Mr. Deitrick to appoint a committee to determine the provisions of the present law and investigate the steps necessary for a hearing before the proper authorities was approved. President Leachman appointed Mr. Permoda and Mr. Jones on this committee and stated he would serve with them.

Mrs. Wilkins reported that proof coins from the Philadelphia mint are a casualty of war. The facilities formerly used for striking proofs are now required for medals for the armed services.

—N. Key Hart, Secretary.

NEW YORK NUMISMATIC CLUB—

The 410th regular meeting of the Club was held on Friday evening, February 12, 1943, Mr. Thomas F. Morris, President, presiding, with 14 members and two guests present.

The topics for the evening: Roman Coins of Caligula, Coins of Mexico, Necessity Coins of World War No. 1, U. S. Cents prior to 1805.

Comprehensive exhibits were made by Morris, Johnson, Kusterer, Schia, Steinberg, Deas, Douglas, Schilke, Arthur, Cox, Kortjohn, Carpenter and Downing.

The Executive Committee suggested as the topics for the March meeting, Coins of Claudius, Alexander the Great, Cents from 1805 to 1857, Lincoln Ferro-types, Coins of Canada, Mormons in Numismatics.

The Publication Committee, through Mr. Arthur W. Deas, called the Club's attention to the article in the January 23rd issue of "Collier's" entitled "Josiah Sprinkle's Oversize Dollars."

—F. C. C. Boyd, Secretary.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY COIN CLUB—

The 103d meeting of the Club was held Tuesday evening, December 15, 1942, at the New Rochelle Y. M. C. A. In the absence of President Cox, the meeting was called to order by Julius Gutttag, honorary chairman. Eight members and three guests were present.

The secretary was instructed to cast one ballot for the list of members nominated at a previous meeting. The officers elected for 1943 are as follows:

President: LeRoy Cox (reelected);

Vice President: Adolph Friedman;

Secretary: Hugh Lott;

Treasurer: Pitt Skipton (reelected);

Librarian-Curator: Kenneth Marsden (reelected).

Mr. Kosoff told members of plans for a salvage drive in collecting mutilated coins for scrap purposes, to be conducted in the New York City area and sponsored by the local clubs. The Brooklyn club, he said, has initiated such a drive and he has been appointed chairman. He expects to request action by the Westchester and other clubs later.

The topics for the evening were: Coins of Mexico, new acquisitions, and other items of timely interest. Exhibits:

Mr. Lighte: Bronze medal commemorating treaty between U. S. and Great Britain for peace and amity, signed at Ghent, Dec. 24, 1814.

Mr. Kosoff: Smallest types of gold, silver and copper coins of various countries.

Mr. Skipton: Mexican 8 reales, 1894; 25 centavos 1878, 186; 1/8 real in copper, 1842; 5 centavos, 1914; 1 centavo, 1891, 1889, 1939.

Mr. Massey: Boise, Idaho cardboard cent.

—J. E. Massey, Act. Secy.

A WHOLESOME PHILOSOPHY

To be honest, to be kind—to earn a little and to spend a little less, to make upon the whole a family happier for his presence, to renounce when that shall be necessary and not be embittered, to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation—above all, on the same grim condition, to keep friends with himself—here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.

—Robert Louis Stevenson.

"PENNIES FROM HEAVEN"

Maurice D. Scharlack of Corpus Christi, Texas, member of the A. N. A., has just turned in 75,000 copper cents which he had been accumulating for some years, purchasing therewith War Bonds and at the same time doing his part in relieving the alarming shortage of this small coin, to which the U. S. Treasury has been insistently calling our attention in recent months. In the picture are seen, left to right, Meredith Queen, County War Bond Chairman, L. Y. Westbrook, U. S. N., and Maurice D. Scharlack. "Uncle Sam" was borrowed from a bond sales display in a local bank. (It is not stated who counted this most unusual hoard.)

Mr. Scharlack's real collection, however, consists of a comprehensive series of U. S. coins in all metals and of all periods. His A. N. A. number is 6698, having joined in 1934.

(Collection valued at approximately Fifty Thousand Dollars)

This beautifully designed and Illustrated Catalog will be sent free ONLY to those who have been and are NOW active on my "Mehling List."

If you are one of the "unfortunates" not now on my "Mehling List," or if you have not made any purchases at my last two sales, you may get a copy of this magnificent Catalog of this Great Sale free by ordering a Price List of the Sale NOW, at only $1.

However, this special offer will hold good only to April 1st, 1943. From April 2nd to April 15th, the price will be $2 and after April 15th the price for the Catalog and Price List of the Sale will be $3. Positively no deviations or exceptions will be made for anyone.

(Remember, my Dunham Catalog was first offered by me for only $1. Some 30 days before the Sale it sold for $3, and now the price is, and sells for, $5.00 per copy, and will soon advance to $10.00 per copy).

Don't wait 'till the last moment to order the Catalog and Price List. Save by sending in your order right NOW, while you are thinking about it.

The Catalogue will be a de luxe edition. Special historical information regarding the rarities; actual photographic illustrations of the greater rarities. A valuable reference work for all time.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

During the last twelve months we have issued five Catalogues and five Price Lists. The response to these has been highly satisfactory and we are indeed indebted to our old and new friends who have supported our efforts.

Our Mailing list is the result of years of compilation and business and we feel that some who are now receiving our catalogues and price lists may no longer be interested in them. It is our desire and wish to assist the Governments' program of curtailing use of paper, while maintaining our past relationship with all of our customers.

With this end in view we would appreciate hearing from those who are no longer interested in receiving our literature as to whether they wish it continued. We do not wish to imply that it is necessary for you to buy, in order for you to continue to receive our catalogues and price lists. We will gladly continue to mail them to those who find them of interest and who wish to keep their files complete.

In preparing these catalogues we use every effort to offer a diversified selection of worthwhile numismatic material, properly attributed and conservatively graded as to condition. If you need certain coins and do not find them in our Lists do not hesitate to write us. Our stock contains many choice pieces and is continually changing.

If you wish to sell, remember that we are always interested in buying collections and accumulations and would be pleased to hear from you.

This month's advertisement is dedicated to all the men in the armed forces of the United States

I have a son in the U. S. Navy. He was in the battle of Casablanca. These men need our support, so the profits from my next sale will be contributed to the purchase of War Bonds.

A consignment from you will help this program, or I will buy your collection for cash.

AN EXPLANATION

To our many customers: Owing to the fact that our three boys are now in active military service, and to the difficulty of securing efficient help, both our work and correspondence have been seriously interfered with. We ask the indulgence of our friends for a little time longer, when we hope to get back to our normal efficiency and promptness.

EPITOME OF THE HISTORY OF MILITARY MEDALS

Written for National Coin Week, April 11-17, 1943

By WILLIAM S. DEWEY, Crestwood, N. Y.

National Coin Week of 1943 finds our nation once again engulfed in the throes of another and more terrifying world strife, which may well surpass all previous conflicts in its numismatic as well as historic results. In this present struggle for individual and national freedom the military medal has already assumed an importance far greater than any of its former roles in history. For this reason alone it is not only permissible but appropriate to review, very briefly, at this time the story of how these medals came into being, and how the passing years since their inception have changed their purpose, distribution and use.

The bestowing of medals on military heroes as tangible evidence of personal bravery or as reward for especial tactical achievement is probably as ancient as man's appreciation of man. In early Greek times the military medal generally appeared in the form of the standard coin of the realm, and many interesting examples of this kind of tribute remain to attest to the prowess of the heroes of that period. It is doubtful, though, if that cultured civilization ever turned to the personal medal as we know it today to reward valor on the field of battle. The Romans, on the other hand, seem to have turned to the medallion to supplement their regular and commemorative coinages, but these, in turn, could hardly be classed as military decorations since their purpose was evidently foreign to such usage.

In the Far East during the first century A. D. an Emperor of China is said to have presented medals to his most successful military commanders, and this observance may be the first instance of a strictly personal medallie decoration.

From the fall of Rome to the end of the 14th Century the medal in any form whatsoever was an unknown thing. It might be argued, of course, that the badges and insignia of knighthood during the middle ages were effective military decorations, but it is quite generally admitted that these were more nearly comparable to our present-day designations of rank and branch of service than to our awards for heroic performance or honorable service.

Out of the Renaissance

One of the earliest fruits of the Renaissance movement was the return of medallie art to a rejuvenated world. But the recognition of individual acts of heroism or exceeding bravery by means of the commemorative medal was not to come until about the middle of the 16th Century. Queen Elizabeth of England is credited by some with the initial attempt of modern times to reward military proficiency with a medal. In 1588 she issued the famous "Ark in Flood" medal for naval heroes—probably for their defeat of the Spanish Armada in July of that year. The obverse of this medal bore a crowned portrait of the Queen in richly ornamented dress, and the reverse, an "Ark" riding the crest of a wave—very possibly symbolic of the English ship of state overriding her nautical enemy, Spain. This medal was struck in both gold and silver, and was provided with a suspension loop for attaching to the person.

Other commemorative medals followed, and in 1643, Charles I granted the first strictly "military" decoration; that is, for ground troops as against seamen who were the recipients of all previous issues. In 1638 a medal was presented by the French to Bernhard, Grand Duke of Saxony-Weimar, who had been successful in the conquest of Breisach on the Rhine during the Thirty Years War (1618-1648). This piece bore a bust of the Duke himself on the obverse and the following prophetic inscription on the reverse: "The name of this hero shall last for all centuries."

But to this point in our review there has been no recognition of the so-called "men behind the guns," only laud and honor for their leaders and commanding officers. It remained for no less colorful a person than Oliver Cromwell to break with this precedent. In 1650, after he had turned back the Royalists at Dunbar in Scotland, the English people, through their Parliament, authorized the distribution of an oval-shaped medal-of-honor to all men, regardless of rank, who participated in that affray. So important a departure from accepted practice was this that medallists now refer to this occasion as "the Dunbar precedent."

The first experiment with a ribbon suspension for a commemorative medal has been attributed to the Island of St. Vincent which awarded such a piece to the entire local militia in 1773 for its victorious campaign against the Carib Indians.

Purely as a digression and as an example of the transgression of State's rights by an individual, we learn that General George A. Eliot, one time commander of the forces at Gibraltar, set a curious precedent by personally awarding medals to each member of the Hanoverian Brigade that took part in the defense of that fortress from 1779 to 1782. Later on, other individuals followed this same course and presented military men of all ranks with medals of commendation for personal sacrifice or heroic deeds.

Military and Naval Awards of Great Britain

Since 1793, the British have awarded medals to their troops for every success on land or sea, but the only one actually issued prior to Queen Victoria's reign was the Wellington Medal granted by George IV (then Prince Regent) in 1816 to all participants in the battle of Waterloo on June 18, 1815. This medal, struck in silver, carried a likeness of the Prince on the obverse and a figure of Victory, seated, on the reverse. Its greatest claim to distinction lies in the fact that its method of distribution firmly established the principle of honors for all; a custom which in later years spread gradually throughout all the civilized world.

Our present day system of clasps to designate specific engagements or additional honors was also instituted by the British in their familiar "Peninsula Medal." This medal, for high ranking officers only, as originally authorized in 1810, could be re-won by the same individual any number of times since it was awarded for each separate battle in which troops were engaged during 1808 and 1809. In 1813, the fallacy of such an arrangement was evident, and it was then provided that thereafter no more than one such medal should be worn by any officer; additional honors to be designated by the mounting of a clasp or bar citing the engagement.

With this much general background to our story we turn our attention to the history of the military medal in our own country.

The development and progress of service awards in the United States very closely parallel the experience of the British in that, at first, no recognition of the rank and file was attempted. Whatever medals were issued during the Colonial period, and in the ensuing period through the first half of the 19th Century, were limited in distribution to higher officers of the Army and Navy.

First Colonial Awards

The earliest meritorious service medal to be struck by the United Colonies was awarded, appropriately enough, to George Washington. This medal, in solid gold, is one of the most important pieces in the entire series of Colonial medals, although the historical significance of the event commemorated (the evacuation of Boston by the British in 1776) can hardly be classed as worthy of such distinguished numismatic position. Subsequently, medals were awarded to General Gates for his victory at Saratoga in 1777, and to John Paul Jones for his fight with the Serapis in 1779. Medals were also struck for the commanding officers in the War of 1812 and the Mexican War, but none of these were decorations in the true sense of the word. They could not be worn on the person and consequently they were hardly more than medallie mementoes bearing witness that the recipient had earned the plaudits and thanks of his country and of Congress.

(During Washington's time a non-medallie decoration awarded to men in the ranks is discussed at the conclusion of this paper).

The year 1847 is of considerable importance in military history because in that year the President was authorized to recognize and reward distinguished service among enlisted men of the services. For this purpose the Certificate of Merit was born, but the medal which should have accompanied the citation from its inception was delayed for nearly 60 years. As a consequence, the Certificate itself was not originally a decoration; it merely set the stage for the new era which was soon to follow.

Civil War Decorations

It required a Civil War between the States to bring about the first all-inclusive personal decoration in this country for distinguished military service. Patterned after the noble Victoria Cross of Great Britain, the "Medal of Honor," authorized by Act of Congress in 1861, is presented to the recipient by the President in the name of the Congress and the people of the United States. Originally a naval award for enlisted personnel only, its field was broadened the following year to embrace enlisted men of the army, and, in 1863, it was extended to include officers in the army. Naval officers were made eligible for the award in 1915. Conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at risk of life above and beyond the call of duty were ultimately set as the requirements of attainment, and because of such high standards, it remains today the senior award of our government. It is especially distinctive in that the medal proper is hung from a long ribbon which, in the form of a loop, is passed over the wearer's head and suspended around the neck similar to certain foreign orders and decorations.

The Medal of Honor remained until the Spanish-American War the only military decoration available to the "man behind the gun." Since June 3rd, 1898, when the Manila Bay or "Dewey" Medal was enthusiastically awarded to the sailors of Commodore Dewey's Asiatic Fleet who vanquished the Spanish Squadron at Manila on May 1st of that year, there has been a growing tendency on the part of Congress to provide more and more medals for military purposes. Thus we now have adopted a rather extensive series of campaign and foreign service medals, and proficiency or distinguished service medals, as well as a special group of honorable discharge citations known as "Good Conduct Medals."

In January 1905 the War Department issued an order directing that Military service in all future wars or campaigns should thereafter be commemorated by a distinctive medal or badge for each participant. This directive was undoubtedly the result of increasing demands for such recognition from the people of the United States, after the bitter experiences of the War with Spain. More than a century of intermittent war was required to awaken us as a nation to the fact that all military service is, of itself, meritorious, and that all who serve the nation's fighting units are deserving of praise.

The successful termination of the First World War in 1918 gave birth to another innovation in the history of military medals. Because of the number of men and nations involved in this conflict, it was deemed advisable to provide a semi-uniform decoration for all service men of the Allied nations. The "Victory Medal" was the culmination of this proposals. It is, effectively, the symbol of union and solidarity of purpose for which those nations fought, and it bears on the obverse a figure of Victory according to the pleasure of the issuing country, and on the reverse the names of fourteen United Nations. The size (1.4 inches in diameter) as well as the composition (bronze), is the same for all countries of issue, as is the colorful double rainbow ribbon.

Now we are in the midst of a new struggle for freedom. Before the awful consequences of this new conflict, all previous wars grow smaller by comparison. Who can foretell the shape of things to come, or project with accuracy the events of the days that lie ahead? Military honors are even now being heaped upon those who have already earned the everlasting gratitude of their nation, and thousands more will follow in their footsteps ere the last bitter round is fired. Who will say that a new era in medallie history is not in the making?

Origin of the Order of the Purple Heart

No discussion of military decorations would be complete, however much abridged, without at least mention of a very special non-medallie award which was brought into being by the first Commander-in-Chief of our armed forces. It has only recently been determined that, on August 7, 1782, General George Washington's order book carried the following entry: "The General, ever desirous to cherish virtuous ambition in his soldiers as well as to foster and encourage every species of military merit, directs that whenever any singular meritorious action is performed, the author of it shall be permitted to wear on his facings over the left breast, the figure of a heart in purple cloth . . . not only in instances of unusual gallantry, but also of extraordinary fidelity and essential service in any way shall meet with a due reward . . . the road to glory in a patriot army and a free country is thus open to all." Thus was the original "Order of the Purple Heart" born in the mind of Washington. In the award of this decoration we see again the abiding faith of Washington in the ability of the common man to triumph in a just cause. On the bi-Centennial of his birth (1932) Congress authorized a new "Order of the Purple Heart," this time a full medallie award for acts of "singularly meritorious service or extraordinary fidelity, and for wounds received in battle." It stands today a perpetual memorial to its founder, the father of his country.

And so we bring our resumé of military medals to a close, hoping, perhaps unreasonably, that it may have struck a responsive chord in those to whom military medal collecting is still an unexplored field.

THE BALLAST OF THE FUTURE

We English speaking nations are by chance, as it were, the ballast of the future. It is absolutely necessary that we should remain united. The comradeship we now feel must and surely shall abide. For unless we work together, and in no selfish and exclusive spirit, goodbye to civilization! It will vanish like dew off the grass. The betterment not only of the British nation and America, but of all mankind, is and must be our object.

—John Galsworthy.

A SUPPLEMENT TO HETRICH AND GUTTAG'S LIST OF CIVIL WAR TOKENS AND MERCHANTS' CARDS

By JOSEPH BARNET, Brooklyn, N. Y.

When Hetrich and Gutttag issued their celebrated list in 1924, they were aware that their listings would be much increased by future research. In fact, they arranged their book with numbers added in series throughout, not describing known tokens but providing places for future discoveries. The present supplement sums up the advance of our knowledge of the series to 1942. It is based on notes gathered after the publication of the work by Dr. George Hetrich and Mr. Julius Gutttag; upon examination of the collections of the American Numismatic Society (where I was deeply indebted to the helpful courtesy of the late Howland Wood, who took great interest in the series), of Mr. Julius Gutttag, Mr. F. C. C. Boyd, and my own collection (which includes that of the late David Prosky); a few varieties have been communicated to me by friends. Where a Hetrich-Gutttag number is available I have used it; where it is not a numeral, an intercalated letter is adopted.

It is hardly necessary to point out that these privately made pieces, both tokens and cards, were used as necessity money during the Civil War. Those in bronze, brass, and a few others actually circulated. Most of those in unusual metals (and all of those in silver) were in the nature of trial pieces and souvenirs. They have the same relation to the regularly issued pieces that patterns and trial pieces do to coins, and since they are without exception individually rare, most collectors of the series have given them great attention, so that they have a particular and real interest for the scientific numismatist. I have also included a few pieces struck between 1861 and 1864, which are not surely of the series—some being Sutler's checks, but which come each from a die which is known on regular tokens or cards, and so are at least intimately connected with the series.

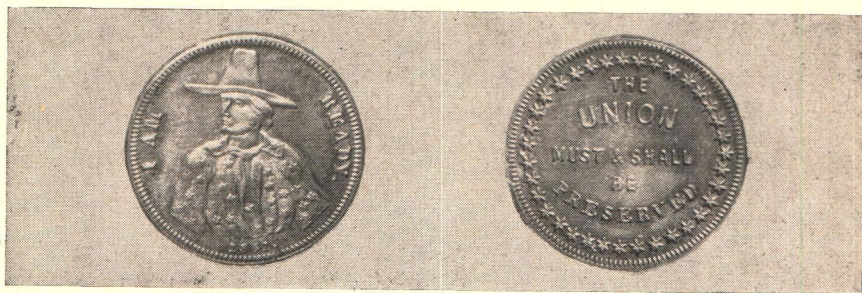

Cards and tokens are now known in copper, brass, bronze, nickel, copper nickel, lead, zinc, tin, and a base alloy plated with copper; trial pieces exist in nickel, white metal, silver, german silver, iron, silver plated, nickel plated, and gold plated, and even one or two pieces in rubber, and perhaps in gold may be found. They come from 23 states and 396 towns. New pieces here described include 593 tokens and 1,945 cards; a total of 2,538. This brings the total of known varieties to 1,318 tokens, 7,698 cards, and 25 uncertain, giving a grand total of 9,041. In the present list tokens from nine towns from which no token was listed by H. & G. are described: namely, Defiance and Evansville, Ind.; Bartlett and Colerain, Minn.; St. Joseph, Mo.; Ashland and Ripley, Ohio; Mt. Washington and Wilkes Barre, Pa. Prof. T. O. Mabbott writes me, "the addition of so many new pieces, including not only new metal varieties, but types and issuers hitherto unknown, is really important contribution to numismatic science, and to historical knowledge as well." At the end of the list of unpublished cards will be given a series of corrections and additions to the descriptions of cards known to H. & G., a list of towns and states issuing cards, with the number issued in each locality, and synoptic lists of all varieties of cards in H. & G. or the present supplement, with heads of Washington (113 varieties), Lincoln (47 varieties), and a similar list of Jewelers' cards. There are 25 Monitor tokens in various metals.

I am aware that this work is not complete, and shall be glad to hear of any additional finds, to be informed of errors, and will be grateful for a rubbing or a chance to see any unidentified specimens for attribution, and will cheerfully give any information I possess on this subject.

I sincerely dedicate this work to the memory of Dr. George Hetrich.

BROCKAGES, FREAKS AND OTHER ODDITIES OF ANCIENT COINS

By HANS HOLZER, Elmhurst, N. Y.

Contrary to Horace, who boasted of having erected by his writings a monument to survive even metal, it is this very substance which in the shape of coins continues to tell us stories and history alike.

Most collectors find pleasure and satisfaction in the study of certain series, sequences of numismatic material which develop in accordance with the laws of our science. But theirs is a heavy mental burden if they aim at thoroughness, and therefore it seems only natural that some of us have chosen a sideline in our numismatic activities, chiefly of a lighter, or, let us say, less strenuous but interesting kind.

Such is my collection of misstruck, double struck, mutilated and misspelled inscriptions on ancient coins, specimens of which I am going to describe to you.

Most of such oddities were caused unintentionally, with the exception of mutilations resulting from political hatred.

We all have at one time or another seen coins of recent dates with an incused impression of the obverse die replacing the regular reverse. Such pieces result from the failure of the previous coin to relinquish its place on the anvil or in the coining press, thus providing an accidental die for the reverse side of the next planchet. This has been happening since the beginning of coinage apparently, and freaks of this type are called brockages; specimens from the Greek and Roman periods are known.

Some Examples

The younger Pliny, whose belief in occultism is confirmed by his writings, would have been jubilant had he seen a remarkable double struck coin of the Emperor Domitian, and the presence of a second bust jugate with the Emperor's might have inspired the thought of a reappearance of Domitian's murdered brother Titus. This coin was formerly in the collection of the well-known author Sholem Ash, who very kindly let me have the piece.

Sometimes anatomical miracles occur through the carelessness of moneyers: heads with two noses, legs preceding the body considerably, human bodies of extreme length, cross-eyes, broken noses, two pairs of eyes and other oddities are scientifically unimportant, but interesting varieties nevertheless. The impression of a beheaded Constantius on a late follis is due to the cutting wing of Victory, the coin having been struck four times altogether. Another late copper follis of the same ruler repeats the legend and yet does not show any traces of double striking.

Spelling, it seems, caused trouble occasionally even in ancient times, but in some instances such errors have a certain philological significance. The letter H instead of A or N is fairly common in the East just as the spelling of IUBENTUTIS with a B instead of V was appropriate in the West in the third century.

The letters S C, for Senatus Consulto and meaning by consent or authority of the Senate, proved a stumbling block for at least two Roman die-cutters: one example is a coin of the Emperor Philip, the other of Postumus, both in the third century and both reading C S instead of S C, the remaining parts of the legends being well executed in both cases. I have published one of them but do not propose to add any special significance to this die error, political or otherwise.

Puzzling is a little copper follis of Constantius II struck at the Siscia mint and reading plainly FL CONSTANTIS BEAS instead of the customary CONSTANTIUS NOB C, an abbreviation of Nobilissimus Caesar. Misspelled inscriptions are sometimes products of local counterfeiters, and it may very well be that such is the case with the above mentioned piece.

Some will perhaps wonder at the significance of such difference between a regular coin and an identical piece misstruck. But there is a certain touch of "being out of the regular" in it—just as it is not the same if you have a three-minute egg, or swallow a raw egg and drink boiling water for three minutes afterwards.

Spite Work

Another division consists of forced damage to portraits by reasons of political or personal hatred. A bronze coin of Naples shows two heavy cuts covering the head of Apollo which some disappointed lover might have applied in his hatred of this particular god.

Similar cuts on a denarius of Vespasian may be explained by the ill feeling persisting in certain parts of the populace even after the Emperor's victory—the legions especially, who during the Civil War had supported his enemies. The heavy cut that nearly severed Domitian's head on one of his coins was administered similarly to the tyrant a few years later in the flesh, and the attempt to disfigure the face of the Emperor Commodus can easily be understood if we remember his outrageous career and eventual assassination. Even Diocletian was not always well liked, and escaped a sudden end only by retiring voluntarily after twenty years of reign, withdrawing to care for his rose gardens at Salonae. Some enemy seems to have been responsible for the punch-marks which practically cover his face on one of his coins.

Classical instances of disfiguration are the brothers Caracalla and Geta, the younger of whom was murdered in the arms of their mother, who, it transpired, cared more for her high position than for revenge.

By act of the State, memory of deceased members of the Imperial family could legally be cursed, such instances of condemnation nearly equalling in number the deifications of others, mostly unworthy.

After Geta's death his brother, the assassin, ordered a damnatio memoriae which in some instances even included coins, especially those which showed the portraits of both brothers. I have seen, among others, a bronze coin of Stratonikeia in Caria with one head, Geta's erased; another specimen with Caracalla's head extinguished, either by mistake, or intentionally by someone who did not approve of the murder.

Puzzling Combinations

There are two more points of interest which, although not precisely errors, seem to belong within the scope of this paper. A silver Antoninianus of the Emperor Gallienus struck in his name might be puzzling because it shows the portrait of the Emperor Philip instead of his own. It was fairly common at the termination of a reign to couple the deceased ruler's bust with his successor's name until a copy of the latter's had arrived. Philip died in 249, however, and it was not before 253 that Gallienus' accession took place.

During the first century southern France was supplied with small change by the local mints of Nîmes and Vienne and their native imitators. It seems, however—and the two different halves now before me prove the assumption—that in order to relieve the shortage of still smaller change the bronze asses of Nemausus were cut into halves and passed at half their original value. Such has been done throughout history, even quite recently in the West Indies, and always offers interesting points.

Sometimes people wonder how the specialist makes out all these details where others see only scratches and bruises. Which reminds me of the teacher who did not believe in the talents of young Gaus, the famous mathematician. So when walking past a church one day, the teacher asked the boy whether he saw the little rooster away up on top of the steeple. "I can't see the rooster, sir," was the answer, "but I see the little fly that's sitting on his head!"

DANGEROUS COUNTERFEITS

An expert safe cracker, with an evident preference for operating in schools, churches and libraries, recently robbed fifty-one such institutions in Philadelphia and vicinity, according to The Philadelphia Record, a clipping from which has been received from Capt. Joseph Moss of that city, now in Washington as Judge Advocate in the War Department.

The clever operator, who merely used these means to an end, needed money to purchase various engraving, photographing and etching paraphernalia for the purpose of counterfeiting paper money. His skill enabled him to turn out $10 bills that almost defied detection. He would use a new genuine $10 bill, and after soaking it thoroughly in a solution split it with fine instruments, pasting each half to his own counterfeit half of the opposite side, thus getting $20 for the original $10. Presenting them with the genuine half up naturally cut his chances of discovery. But the U. S. Secret Service finally got him. A safer hobby would have been to collect paper money instead of manufacturing it.

NO 1943 PROOF COINS AVAILABLE

The Superintendent of the Philadelphia Mint has stated to all inquirers for current proof sets that "In view of the extremely heavy demand for coinage and service medals, the facilities of the Mint are taxed almost beyond capacity. Due to this fact, the striking of proof coins will necessarily be delayed for an indefinite period."

Notice will appear in THE NUMISMATIST as soon as it is learned these are again available.

THE BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY

By SHEPARD POND, Boston, Mass.

(This history of the Boston Numismatic Society, written at the request of the Editor of The Numismatist as one of a series of stories on American numismatic organizations, is to a considerable degree necessarily a condensation of the author's article in The Numismatist for July 1935 on the occasion of the Boston Society's seventy-fifth anniversary.—S. P.)

"Eight gentlemen met by invitation on Saturday, February 11, 1860 at the rooms of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, 13 Bromfield Street." Thus began the records, in the handwriting of William S. Appleton, who was elected the Society's first secretary and who filled that office with distinction for the long period of forty-three years.

At that meeting a constitution was presented and a committee of three appointed to "report a list of officers on the first Saturday in March." The next meeting came as scheduled on March 3, 1860, at the same place at four o'clock in the afternoon when the constitution and by-laws were adopted and signed by all present, and the following officers elected: Dr. Winslow Lewis, President; Jeremiah Colburn, Vice President and Curator; Henry Davenport, Treasurer; and William S. Appleton, Secretary.

Meetings were held monthly, and certificates of membership were prepared and presented to members at the meeting of September 7, 1860. Unfortunately none of these original certificates can now be located.

By the time of the first annual meeting the Society was well under way, a start having been made toward forming both a library and a cabinet of coins and medals. Soon thereafter gifts of a cabinet and a "magnifying glass of three lenses" were received.

Civil War Days

The Civil War had now broken out, yet while the national life became more and more absorbed in this protracted struggle it is interesting to see the paucity of allusions to it in the Society's records. The exhibition of some paper currency of the "Southern Confederacy" and a couple of medals comprise the only mention of the war in the Society's records. By the year 1865 the Society's membership list had increased to twenty-five paying dues, from which figure a very slow decline set in, due in part to a too critical standard being set for new members.

At about this time it adopted the scale of the Numismatic Society of Philadelphia for measuring coins: divisions of sixteenths of an inch, a scale much used later by the well remembered Chapman Brothers of Philadelphia, but which in recent years has been more or less superseded by the internationally used millimeter scale.

The first printing of the constitution and by-laws came in 1867, when 100 copies were struck off "in a very elegant little quarto pamphlet with neat head and tail pieces." These pamphlets are now extremely rare.

In 1867 the rooms of the New England Historic Genealogical Society were abandoned for the Society's meetings in favor of the library of the

The 300th anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims coincided with the 60th anniversary of the founding of the Boston Numismatic Society. This medal was struck as a joint commemoration of these two events, the reverse showing the seals of the Plymouth and of the Boston Societies. The artist was Julio Kilenyi of New York, who has produced a considerable number of notable medals.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society on Tremont Street. The interest of members seemed increasing as the records speak several times of better attendance at the meetings and important accessions to the cabinet. At this point came, in the meeting of November 1869, the decision to apply to the Massachusetts Legislature for a charter of incorporation which was granted in 1870, and under which the Society still operates.

The certificate of membership was altered at this time, and in 1873 appeared the Society's first medal bearing its new seal, the piece being issued jointly with the New England Historic Genealogical Society, in which Mr. Appleton was equally interested. The die was cancelled in 1874 after an unknown number of medals were struck in silver, brass and white metal. The piece is now rare.

By 1883 we seem to have reached almost modern times, for in June was shown a medal struck on the opening of the wonderful new Brooklyn bridge. During the next year there appeared an up-to-date booklet containing the constitution, by-laws, and a list of members; while about this time the Society began to vote yearly subsidies to the American Journal of Numismatics which at various times was published under the Society's auspices.

On Thin Ice

Meanwhile the membership continued shrinking gradually, owing principally, as stated, to the exclusive character of the Society, until the paying membership fell to between seven and four with meetings held at irregular intervals. In 1898 in contemplation of a dissolution of the Society most of its property was distributed to other Boston institutions, part of the money and all the coins and medals going to the Museum of Fine Arts, and the books and most of the balance of the cash to the Public Library.

A period of almost utter stagnation, barring the annual subsidy to the Journal, was finally brought to an end by the admission of almost a half dozen younger members in 1906. The renaissance had come, monthly meetings were resumed and the Society, entered upon the present phase of its existence. In 1913 the first dinner meeting was held, it being the 53rd annual meeting, the 50th anniversary having, curiously enough, been passed without any allusion in the records to the event.

The Society's First Medal

The 60th anniversary of the Society happening to fall in 1920, an artistic bronze medal was designed to commemorate the Plymouth Tercentenary as well as the Society's anniversary. A delay in the issuance of this piece however caused a very limited public sale with the result that it is now rather scarce.

The Boston Society having become a corporate member of the American Numismatic Association before the first World War, there arose immediately after the peace the question of entertaining a convention of the Association in Boston. This was done in 1921, the Copley-Plaza Hotel being headquarters, while business sessions and exhibits were held in the magnificent Public Library just across Copley Square.

After the war the Society gained many new members and settled down to a routine of monthly dinner meetings held first at the Harvard Club, later at the Hotel Bellevue and finally, for nearly the last twenty years, at the Boston City Club. At this time annual dues, which had been abolished in 1897, were re-established. This has permitted the Society to cover its reasonable expenses, to issue its 1928 booklet containing a brief history of itself, its constitution and by-laws together with a list of members, and finally to issue in 1935 its 75th anniversary silver medal. This beautiful and rare piece struck to the number of 102 specimens only was given to members in good standing at the time and to a limited number of distinguished Societies in the United States and abroad. None was available for sale.

In these latter years the Society has established closer relations with similar bodies in other cities, being represented by a member, the late Moritz Wormser, at the 100th anniversary of the Royal Numismatic Society of London and by talks given at meetings by leading numismatists from other cities, while Boston members have visited more often than formerly at other clubs. Joint meetings with philatelic groups have taken place and this increasing activity found final expression in the First New England Numismatic Conference held at the Boston City Club by the Boston Numismatic Society in the spring of 1941 and attended by delegates from other clubs in New England and New York City. It is hoped that when conditions become more nearly normal this successful gathering can be repeated.

As for the present condition of the Boston Society the story is best told by the reports of the Secretary and the Treasurer at the 83rd annual meeting held in January 1943; the membership was then at an all time high, and the Treasury in better funds than ever before.

HONOR IN BUSINESS

There is an honor in business that is the fine gold of it; that reckons with every man justly; that loves light; that regards kindness and fairness more highly than goods or prices or profits. It becomes a man more than his furnishings or his house. It speaks for him in the heart of everyone. His friendships are serene and secure.

—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

AN UNKNOWN PORTRAIT MEDAL OF MARTIN LUTHER

By HENRY GRUNTHAL, New York City

Few fields of modern numismatics attracted the attention of collectors so early, or have been studied and published so carefully as the medals and coins relating to Luther and the Reformation. A monograph on the subject in Latin, Vita Mart. Lutheri et Historia Reformationis numis illustrata appeared as early as 1699. Later, Christian Juncker in 1706, and Gottlieb Kreussler in 1818, published standard works on the numismatics of the Reformation in general and Martin Luther in particular. And quite recently Prof. Max Bernhart gave a profound analysis of the contemporary Luther medals in his article "Reformatorenbildnisse auf Medaillen der Renaissance," published in the periodical Numismatik, December 1933. Several special collections, of which the most notable is perhaps that of Ludwig Belli, sold by Sally Rosenberg in 1904, prove the popularity of these historical monuments relating to the greatest religious reformer of modern times.

It is therefore curious that the medal illustrated above seems to have remained unpublished up to the present time, and even more curious that it should have been discovered in the United States. I acquired it from a New York dealer, who had purchased the piece with a large number of other medals which he had recently bought from the estate of an American collector.

The medal is cast and chased, and is the work of a German artist, who did not sign his work, and cannot at present be identified. It may be thus described:

Rx. SALVATOR*MVNDI*CHRISTI*MISERER engraved around a bust of Christ to left, draped in a robe, but bareheaded and without nimbus.

Silver, gilt, 37mm. A loop is attached. The weight is 23.5gr. Probably unique.

Unfortunately we do not know certainly the name of the artist who designed the medal. The irregular spelling of the Reformer's name does not give any clue to the local peculiarities that might point out the place of origin. But fabric and style make it fairly certain that the medal was made in the workshop of Hans Reinhart the Elder. From its similarity to the medal representing Christ reproduced by Habich in Die Deutschen Schaumünzen des 16ten Jahrhunderts, plate 212, no. 2 we may presume that the medal originated about 1546, and was made in commemoration of the death of Luther.

JOSIAH SPRINKLE'S "DOLLARS"

Some weeks ago Henry L. Zander of Galveston, Texas, called our attention to the fact that in the January 23rd, 1943, issue of Collier's appeared a page advertisement of The Travelers, featuring "Josiah Sprinkle's Oversize Dollars," an illustration in color showing the old gentleman at the counter of an old time general store, with a pouch of his "dollars," one of them being examined by the critical proprietor.

This was in the rough hills of Kentucky in the early 1800's, the town that of Washington, the county seat of what was then Bourbon County. His "dollars" bore little resemblance to government coins, having an owl on one side and a six-pointed star on the other. They were of pure silver, somewhat larger than those minted by the Treasury, and worth more in actual bullion value. He would never reveal the source of his silver beyond claiming that he had discovered and worked a rich vein of it many years before.

With this story as a starting point, the advertising agents of The Travelers were asked for the data upon which they based the seemingly fantastic claim. It appears the original account was given in "A Hand Book of Curious Information" by William S. Walsh, published by Lipincott in 1913, but without definite authority. The advertising agency, in checking sources, found a court record of a suit brought against Sprinkle by the Federal Government, apparently on a counterfeiting charge. "The Trial," writes Mr. Robert H. Arthur of The Travelers' publicity department, "proved nothing so decisively as the fact that Sprinkle's dollars were worth more, for their actual silver content, than the current coins represented. He was acquitted and climaxed the proceedings by paying his lawyer, right there before an astonished court, from a full pouch of his own coins. Supposedly, he was never again bothered; he continued to make and spend his coins until he died."

How much fact, and how much romancing were concerned in the whole matter is perhaps not possible to determine at this late date. It is not likely the story is made up wholly without foundation; but if there is an element of truth there why has it remained undiscovered for over a century?

THE DEMAND NOTES

By LOYD GETTYS, Davenport, Iowa

In 1861 at the outbreak of the hostilities between the States, Congress received many measures designed for the raising of money to carry on the war. Consequently a law was passed, the Act of July 17, 1861, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue demand notes bearing no interest, limited in amount to fifty million dollars, and in denominations of not less than ten dollars. A subsequent act dated August 5, 1861, authorized five-dollar denominations and increased the total issue to sixty million dollars.

The demand notes were dated August 10, 1861, and issued in denominations of five, ten, and twenty dollars. They were first used to pay salaries of government officials in Washington and were very reluctantly accepted. These notes were discredited in many quarters; the railroads refused to accept them; in some instances the banks in New York would not take them except for special deposit. A circular was issued by the Secretary of the Treasury at Washington to the Assistant Treasurers of the Sub-Treasuries at Boston, New York, Cincinnati, St. Louis, and Philadelphia that the government would continue to issue demand notes which would be redeemable in coin at their respective sub-treasuries.

On September 3rd, 1861, General Winfield Scott, Commander-in-Chief of the United States Army, issued a circular to the army stating "that the Treasury Department, to meet future payments to the troops, is about to supply, besides coin, Treasury Notes in five, ten and twenty dollar denominations, as good as gold in all banks and government offices throughout the United States, and most convenient for transmission by mail from the officers and men to their families at home."

Although the redemption of these notes was pledged, payable in gold, at times it was difficult to obtain the gold for such repurchase. On December 28, 1861, a little over four months after their issue, specie payments were suspended. The terms of the law did not authorize the redemption of these notes in gold. They were quoted, however, at about the same premium as gold because the notes were authorized before the suspension of specie payments.

Demand notes were the first notes issued as a government legal tender circulating medium. Earlier notes issued by the government were all promissory notes payable at a fixed date, and carried interest, however small. Besides gold and silver, state banknotes issued by State banks were the accepted paper money medium throughout the United States before the Civil War.

Demand notes were designed and printed by the American Bank Note Company, according to the inscription on the notes. They were hastily designed and made ready for circulation. It was expected that they would be signed by both the Register of the Treasury and Treasurer of the United States. This became a physical impossibility and, therefore, a corps of men from the Register's and Treasurer's offices were appointed to sign these notes. It became necessary for these signers to write the words "for the" before the titles "Register of the Treasury" and "Treasurer of the United States," until the time when plates from which the notes were printed could be altered to include these two words. In consequence of this early condition of the plates, the notes bearing "for the" in writing are extremely rare and valuable. All demand notes in any condition are now rare and seldom met with. Of sixty million dollars' worth issued, all have been redeemed with the exception of about $53,000.

Much of this money was paid to soldiers, many of whom did not live or disappeared. It is likely that a considerable sum was lost on the field of battle. Also, many notes probably were destroyed by fires in factories, dwellings, etc. It is doubtful that there is still in existence 5 per cent of the $53,000 reported as outstanding by the Treasury.

On the obverse of the $10.00 demand note appears the portrait of Abraham Lincoln. In the center is the American Eagle and on the right the vignette of a standing female figure holding a painting, brushes, and palette. The border design of this note is of small Xs, which also cover a large part of the reverse.

Only a few collectors have specimens of these notes in their collections. The government collection in Washington contains but five specimens of demand notes. These five specimens are redeemable at the Sub-Treasuries of Boston, Philadelphia, and New York, none is from St. Louis or Cincinnati. It would take at least fifteen notes to obtain a full representation, not to speak of several varieties.

BREVITIES

Through the kindness of Wayte Raymond of New York the editorial office of THE NUMISMATIST is supplied with a set of his publications. Their value as reference material is undisputed, and his generous courtesy is sincerely appreciated.

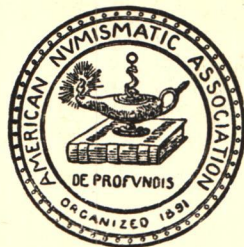

---

A small bit of silver lining on the cloud of priorities lies in the difficulty counterfeiters now experience in securing certain metals that are considered vital war materials, and certain chemicals so necessary to the "note men" for their bleaching processes. Ink, printing materials, zinc, etc., are unavailable.

---

Stack's have announced plans for publishing a new coin collectors' magazine, the Numismatic Review, the first issue to be off the press about May 1st. They state it will not attempt to occupy the field of any other numismatic publication, but will deal with subjects heretofore not found in other journals.

AN AWARD OF THE JENNY LIND MEDAL

The Royal Swedish Academy of Music, Stockholm, has awarded the Jenny Lind Commemorative Medal to Leonidas Westervelt of Douglaston, Long Island, in recognition of his deep interest in the memory of that great singer. Mr. Westervelt (A. N. A. No. 2116) received the medal recently through the American Legation in Washington.

Translating the inscription on the obverse we have: "Jenny Lind Goldschmidt, Born October 6th, 1820, Died November 2nd, 1887." In the field is the name of the designer, Adolf Lindberg.

The inscription on the reverse, above the winged seated figure is "The Spirit of Art;" and in the exergue, "By the Royal Musical Academy." This was struck in 1891 at the Swedish Mint. The artist, Lindberg, was Professor of Drawing at the Official School of Art in Stockholm, and Engraver of Medals to the King.

Simply list the issues wanted and you will be notified promptly whether or not the entire lot can be furnished; you can then remit the correct amount.

LOOKING BACKWARD

THROUGH THE EARLY FILES OF THE NUMISMATIST

FIFTY YEARS AGO

"There are times," wrote Editor Heath, "when Editor and reader should draw near together to lay plans for the furtherance of their mutual interests, and we feel that such a time is now."

A half century later, the present Editor echoes the sentiment expressed, and wishes he might hear from such members of the A. N. A. as give THE NUMISMATIST a thoughtful reading, with a brief and clear cut expression of their preferences as to subjects to be covered in future articles, noting any suggestions for improvement in the magazine as it now appears, making any comment they feel is justified, whether favorable or otherwise. Constructive criticism is always welcome. This is a sincere invitation.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Dr. B. P. Wright of Schenectady, New York (then President), contributes a twenty page article on "The Mark Penny" (Masonic Chapter Pennies), illustrated with a number of plates. Except for a few collectors like William Poillon (whose death occurred this same year), this series was then virtually unknown, but it gradually took its place among other recognized lines of collecting.

A portrait of Thomas L. Elder, with a short biographical sketch, is included in this issue.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

Frank G. Duffield has a brief but well illustrated paper on "The Necessity Pieces of the Siege of Leyden," and Wayte Raymond contributes "An Interesting Roman Denarius," describing, with some historical detail, a piece issued about 54 B. C., probably to celebrate the great victory of the general Aemilius over Perseus, the son of Philip of Macedon. (How clear is the interplay between coinages and history! The study of the latter invests the coins with an atmosphere of living interest, and they themselves are a strong incentive to go with the historian more deeply into the realm of the past).

Dr. Charles E. McGirk begins his extended series of installments under the title of "United States Cents and Die Varieties 1793-1857." This and succeeding articles are evidence of prodigious study and work.

Under "Book Review" by "T. L. C." (undoubtedly T. L. Comparette) the first three volumes of the monumental work sponsored by King Emmanuel III of Italy, "Corpus Nummorum Italicorum," are given a thoughtful write up, with some interesting and informative comments on other royal collectors of an earlier age, such as Cosmo de Medici, Louis XIV, Frederick the Great, Charles I of England, and others.

In the Proceedings of the March meeting of the American Numismatic Society appears in full a valuable paper on "New York Colonial Coinage" by Edgar H. Adams (then Editor of THE NUMISMATIST).

We are sharply reminded of the changes in the numismatic world abroad by the extensive list of foreign sale catalogues then arriving from continental Europe, with their magnificent plates; in these present days, none.

TWENTY FIVE YEARS AGO

H. D. Allen continues his historically important articles on "The Paper Money of the Confederate States," with excellent illustrations.

"Copper and Cannon Plate Coins Struck in Sweden" is a contribution from Julius de Lagerberg, giving what was believed to be a complete list of these pieces struck in Sweden during the 17th and 18th centuries. One of the illustrations is of the 8 daler piece of 1659, under Carl X Gustaf, and weighs 31 pounds. In an additional note the author states that in the Swedish Numismatiska Meddelanden, Parts IX and XII, there are some very interesting old copper plate engravings showing the way the plate money was manufactured, and the implements used in connection therewith.

Mr. Lagerberg made a place for himself in the A. N. A. which will long be remembered. His interest in numismatics, especially medallie art, was deep and constant, and evidence of this is found in the frequent contributions to THE NUMISMATIST over a period of some twenty years. He died in 1936 at Shoreham, L. I., on the evening of his 87th birthday. The writer had known him for several years through sustained correspondence and an occasional personal meeting; the memory of his never failing courtesy and thoughtful consideration, of his willingness to share any numismatic knowledge and to perform any kindly act will always be cherished. Our Association lost one of its finest spirits when death came to this cultured "gentleman of the old school."

THE ORDER OF THE EAGLE EYE

Damon G. Douglas of Caldwell, New Jersey, points out that, contrary to the impression given in Lewis M. Reagan's excellent article in the March NUMISMATIST on "The Sesqui-Centennial of the One Cent Piece," the initial L did not appear on the ribbon of the Indian Head cents of 1859 to 1863, nor on the copper-nickel cents of 1864. That only after a substantial part of the run of bronze cents had been struck in 1864 was the master die redesigned to incorporate the initial on the ribbon, as well as other slight modifications.

Chas. Harpin of Mercedes, Texas, writes that the code used around the rim on the reverse of the 1943 Canadian 5-cent piece (illustrated in the March issue) is not Morse, but International, and Willis J. McKinney of Albany says it is Continental—both right, according to Webster. Anyway, whatever its name, it's still mostly the original Morse.

NEWS AND COMMENTS FROM THE LIBRARY

By TED R. HAMMER, Librarian-Curator

A collector who long has been a member of the A. N. A. borrowed his first books only this month. "If I had known it was so easy, I would have done it long ago," he wrote.

We hope no one else hold off because he thinks there's too much red tape involved. Just look in the library list, then after selecting the books you want, drop us a postal card. The day they go out, we'll mail a postal telling you the amount of insurance, the postage due this office, and when to return the books, which may be kept for two weeks. Extension of time is granted when there are no other current requests for the same items.

One of the books we use regularly is "Catalogue of Coins, Tokens and Medals in the Numismatic Collection of the U. S. Mint at Philadelphia." Many overlook this one in the list, thinking it is only what the title indicates; but it contains more illustrations and descriptions of coins and medals of the world than any single volume we have seen, and everything is indexed. Its number is U-3.

We hear complaints that THE NUMISMATIST INDEX is difficult to use; we haven't found it so, and we are using it once to five times almost every day. We still think THE NUMISMATIST contains more information on all phases of our hobby than many other numismatic publications combined. About one-fourth of all books lent are bound volumes of THE NUMISMATIST.

Incidentally, there has been quite a demand for the Index of The American Journal of Numismatics. We'd like our members to keep this for only a week, or less when possible. We even lend our own copy occasionally because of the demand. The library has a complete set of the AJN. The copies are bulky, and require 11 to 20 cents postage; but each contains two to four volumes.

One borrower complained the other day that we made his postage high because we used so much packing; we found the packing weighed but seven ounces and the books four pounds. In other words, it cost him less than 1½ cents for the packing, which is necessary to protect the shipment.

We suggest that individuals and clubs write their congressmen and senators, requesting that the 1½ cent book rate be restored, at least for books to and from circulating libraries. The difference in rates, however, has not slowed up the loans, which are slightly ahead of last year.

The library installed its own pamphlet bindery material this winter at a cost of less than $10, including enough binders for about 200 books and booklets—and it has already paid for itself. The binders can be cut to exact size.

This office has received a copy of the type set folder now being made by the Whitman Company to retail at 50 cents each. This will not replace the better type boards in which the coins are covered with mica, both sides showing, but it fills a great need, especially among younger collectors who for the most part will not as yet have coins requiring more elaborate attention. One of its best features is its compactness; it can easily be deposited in a desk drawer or placed in a bank safety deposit box. When filled, it can be covered with cellophane or mica, which may be purchased by the foot or yard in stationery stores. With each folder is a booklet containing full information about U. S. types. The library gets an inquiry every week or so about this matter, and there isn't much we can send them; nothing, in fact, which actually lists all types. We hope to obtain several of these booklets to be bound for general circulation. As stated, this will not replace the better cards, such as Wayte Raymond, Inc., issues either separately or in binders, but it will find a big sale. And when you lay one of these folders before the non-collector he knows exactly what it is.

NEW COINS OF MEXICO

Our cordial thanks to L. W. Hoffecker of El Paso, Past President of the A. N. A., who has just sent in specimens of the new copper five centavos of Mexico. The portrait is that of Señora Josefa Oriz de Dominguez, a noted revolutionist. The coins have already been dubbed "Josefas"; in Mexico it is the custom to call various coins by some name, the 50 pesos being called "Centenarios," the 20 pesos "Aztecas," etc. Whether the metallic content of the coin differs from former issues, Mr. Hoffecker does not state.

COIN COLLECTING A STABILIZING INFLUENCE

Profound disturbance in the life of an individual or of a nation is abnormal, and in the course of time must be overcome or disaster is inevitable. The cause of the disturbance, and its justification, if any there be, are secondary to the fact that it does exist and must eventually be dealt with.

An example of this is seen in the avalanche of theories—economic, political, and social—that we, in common with many other countries, have encountered in recent years. The usual defense offered is that a new order in the world is inescapable; we are given to understand that the old is discredited because it is old, and therefore must be abandoned; that the new is demanded if the human race is to be rescued from oblivion, and, since it is new, perforce it must be right. Experiment looks upon experience with an acute distaste, and subtly gives the impression that in time  $2 + 2$  will equal 4 only by accident.

There is a type of mind that looks upon the constant repetition of error as an accumulation of evidence. Incessant reiteration of the claim that nothing will ever again be the same as in pre-war and pre-depression days has led to confused thinking in the minds of those whose tendency is to adopt rather than to form opinions; to them the superficial too easily takes on the cloak of established authority, and principles which for generations have been recognized as fundamental are suddenly discovered to be a menace to national well being. In their enthusiasm to correct real or fancied defects they seem unaware that it is equally vital to preserve that which is sound and good. In these present days life is indeed profoundly disturbed.

Let us consider whether our title is justified. Is coin collecting actually a stabilizing influence—at least potentially—in our mental processes?

Heart action is continuous throughout life, and in a span of even ten years a normal pulse calls for over 378 million heart beats. This could not possibly be sustained for even a few hours except for the fact that the brief interval between beats affords a necessary rest to the heart muscle.

The mind, if taxed severely over an extended period, also needs rest—not merely a complete black-out as in sleep, but through a change of direction, of interest; and the more marked the contrast (provided it is a welcome contrast) the more certain the mental refreshment. It is a clarifying, steadying influence, an influence that tends toward sanity of thought, considered judgment, discrimination, a sense of proportion. In such an atmosphere prejudice and intolerance find small encouragement, and one is more likely to be influenced by reason and existing facts than by emotion and “the sound and fury” of contention.

The collector who can now and then dismiss from his mind the turmoil that has invaded our lives, and spend a satisfying hour with the treasures he has accumulated over the years, can very definitely realize that restful and stabilizing experience. He will need imagination to carry him varying distances into the past, and some knowledge and appreciation to interpret what he finds there; but, given these, “the cares that infest the day” are for the time being forgotten.

His Colonial coppers are telling him of other days when our Republic was in the making, and he remembers the long struggle of arms and of ideas, and senses the sturdy independence of the men who shaped their own and their country's course, asking for nothing they had not earned, but demanding freedom from all forms of tyranny. The crudeness of these pieces is unnoticed, for they are fairly luminous with the history of those years of grim energy and resolute purpose—distant in time, but still a living part of America.

In another drawer lie some silver crowns of that ill fated monarch, Charles I of England; these and a few of his siege pieces are eloquent of a reign that has no parallel in English history. And a silver crown of the great Elizabeth—who remains unique in their annals—is reminiscent of strange contrasts in her character, tragedy often on the one hand and on the other what seems a remarkable prevision of the future possible greatness of her realm. Who has not been touched by the fascination of England's history?

There is not much peace and quiet to be imagined from his Ancient Roman bronzes, yet the day in which they fell from the dies is so remote that it is not disturbing. He may hold in his hand authentic, contemporary portraits of the long procession of emperors and empresses who were alive eighteen—nineteen—centuries ago! What memories they kindle! Here is that First Bronze of Nero with the closed Temple of Janus on the reverse—and he remembers its significance—a rare interval of peace in a turbulent world. Another, a coin of Tiberius commemorating his restoration of certain cities in Asia destroyed in a tremendous earthquake in the year 22 A. D.—an unfamiliar gesture on the part of Roman emperors. Still another, a coin of Vespasian with the Judea Capta reverse—symbolizing an early tragedy visited upon the Jewish people. A silver denarius of Julius Caesar may remind him of his forgotten Latin, or of Mark Antony's great oration. And a sestertius of Marcus Aurelius may send him to his book shelves for a copy of the "Meditations."

One more drawer is opened, and he finds there perhaps the greatest release from the present—his silver coins of Ancient Greece, which were current in their highest perfection while the Roman Republic was still young and, by contrast with the Greeks, barbaric.

In their beauty and serenity they occupy a place apart in all coinage, and to possess the finest of them is to possess an art gallery in miniature.

A small globule of silver of Aegina, a tortoise on the obverse, the reverse showing only a punch mark, takes him back to the dawn of coinage as we know it today—nearly seven centuries B. C.; a tetradrachm of Demetrius Poliorcetes with an obverse that perhaps indicates the position of the missing fragments of the mighty Victory of Samothrace; a four drachma piece of Alexander the Great, struck over twenty-two centuries ago: a "world conquerer" for a brief span of years—then oblivion.

The story of Athens may be read in the long series running from the archaic style, through the period of finest art, down to the time when Rome had begun her conquests. Rome is called "The Eternal City," but Athens deserves the title fully as well, for in a sense she is immortal. In spite of the ruin now visited on her and her unhappy country by the utter savagery of her invaders, peace will finally be realized.

"Another Athens shall arise,
And to remoter time
Bequeath, like sunset to the skies,
The splendour of its prime."

Yes, in these days of profound disturbance, the collector who has chosen his coins for what they may mean to him must have found a real source of inner refreshment and stability; we have suggested only a few avenues, but the principle is as broad as the whole field of numismatic interests, and we commend it to those who may not as yet have realized all its hidden values.

AN APPRECIATED COMMUNICATION FROM THE
ROYAL CANADIAN MINT

Ottawa, March 19th, 1943.

To the Editor:

I wish to express my thanks for the kind reference made in your publication, THE NUMISMATIST, of March to the new Tombac five-cent coin issued by this Mint in the current year.

Perhaps the members of the American Numismatic Association would appreciate a little more detail in connection with the coin and the engraver.

The design was engraved directly on the steel by the Mint Engraver from sketches originating in the Mint and approved by the Minister of Finance, the Honourable J. L. Hilsley.

The Mint Engraver, Mr. Thomas Shingles, was born in Birmingham, England, the home and centre of the Fine Arts, thirty-nine years ago. Educated in the Public School he early showed an aptitude for work of an artistic nature and was soon apprenticed to Geo. Beach, General Die-Sinker, of that city. In his leisure time he further developed his natural talent by attending the Victoria School of Art in Birmingham.

Leaving England in 1922 Mr. Shingles came to Canada and took a position as journey-man engraver and die-sinker with D. R. Dingwall Co., Winnipeg, which position he held until 1933. Moving to Montreal in that year he was employed by Henry Birks and Sons for three years. Toronto made its call upon him when he took up a position with Roden Bros., in whose employ he was when appointed in September 1939 to his present position as Engraver and Die-Sinker in the Royal Canadian Mint at Ottawa.

Excerpts from the official Dominion Government publication, "The Canada Gazette," authorizing the new five-cent coin dated 1942, and also the one dated 1943, read as follows:

(Oct. 10, 1942.) "A new piece of mixed metal, that is to say, an admixture of copper and zinc, shall, in addition to the pure nickel five-cent piece, be coined to the value of five cents of the same design and dimensions as the current five-cent nickel coins.

"Every five-cent coin of mixed metal shall have for the design of the obverse impression: Our Effigy with the inscription 'GEORGIUS VI D: G: REX ET IND: IMP:', and for the reverse impression: A Beaver; above '5 CENTS' between two maple leaves, and below, 'CANADA' and the date of the year. The coin shall have a plain edge having twelve sides."

(Jan. 12, 1943.) "That the description of the reverse impression of the Tombac Five-Cent Coin as authorized by Order in Council P. C. 6935, dated August 5, 1942, be changed to read as follows:

"The character V and Torch conjoined, emblematic of Sacrifice and Victory, between two Maple Leaves, and dividing the date of the year; Canada above, and Cents below; and V also designates the denomination or value of five cents."

My best wishes for the continued success of your Association.

Yours very truly,

H. E. EWARL, Master,
Royal Canadian Mint.

A JOHN PAUL JONES MEDAL

Among the most successful of all the medals designed by the late Victor D. Brenner is that of the immortal naval hero of Revolutionary days—Captain John Paul Jones. It was struck in 1906, the immediate inspiration having been the removal of Jones' remains from a Paris cemetery to the United States in the previous year.

The portrait, studied from the bust modeled from life by the famous French sculptor, Houdon, is one of striking boldness, yet with a finish that reveals Brenner's complete mastery of the medium in which he worked. The expanse of plain surface is gracefully but unobtrusively broken by the spray of laurel, and the whole effect is one of simplicity, strength and balance—a design which invites study, and which fixes itself indelibly in the appreciative memory.

The reverse is likewise of fine distinction. It is said that the artist witnessed the memorable ceremonies attending the event (the date being the exact anniversary of the hero's death) and with rare skill he has given us in enduring bronze this record of an impressive moment in the history of the two nations. With an escort from the American naval squadron which was to bring the remains home, the casket is borne on a gun carriage of the French artillery, decorated with the flags of France and the United States; in the dim background we see the dome of the chapel at Annapolis, his final resting place; and the figure of Fame is no empty symbolism here as it takes a natural place in the design. "America Claims Her Illustrious Dead"—the American Ambassador's words at the time, and perfectly chosen as the inscription.

"Knight of the Seas"

There is a recent study of John Paul (the name of Jones was adopted by him with the permission of one of his American benefactors of the same name) under the title of Knight of the Seas, by Valentine Thomson, which should be read by everyone to whom this fine medal and its historic significance appeals. It departs somewhat from the conventional form, in that our first glimpse of Jones reveals him at Franklin's door in Paris, and, with later brief references to his earlier days in Scotland, the land of his birth, Miss Thomson is mainly concerned with the remaining fourteen incredible years of his life. As one reads again of this amazing career, he brings himself back to reality only by remembering that it is actually history, not the product of a Jules Verne imagination. Benjamin Franklin once said of him that he was not a man, but a Nor'wester.

The Ranger, which Jones commanded as Captain, was the first ship to carry the stars and stripes across the Atlantic. He hoped, with the aid of the French, to attack the English coast, and to oblige the British to draw off some of the ships that were helping to strangle the American nation.

We follow him through his first daring and successful exploit, his return to France, the maddening delay before he is given command of the Duras, which he renamed the Bonhomme Richard, the terrific battle with the English Serapis, whose captain surrendered after Jones had boarded her from his own sinking ship. His thundered "I have just begun to fight" was written in blood that day, and indelibly on the pages of history.

We follow him still further through the wild acclaim later given him in France, the treachery to which he was subjected, interminable delays and broken promises; official jealousy and incompetence on the one hand, and loyal and powerful friends on the other; a later return to the United States for a brief period, to be met here by political stupidity and bad faith, and a failure on the part of Congress to recognize the vital need of a navy for the young Republic regardless of the fact that the war was finally over. Late in 1783 he left again for France, never to return.

In a life crowded to the full with adventure never before nor since duplicated, the strangest of all was his experience in Russia. Hoping to have his ambition for a notable naval career at least partly fulfilled, he offered his services to Catherine the Great, who made him a Rear Admiral and sent him south to the Black Sea. Here, in spite of his superior skill and complete loyalty, he met with treatment from Russian officials which transcended in deceit, injustice, and persecution anything he had ever before experienced, the Empress finally giving him a "two years leave of absence," amounting in fact to banishment. Once more he came back to France, disillusioned and broken in health, dying in Paris on July 18, 1792.

The Final Journey

The United States Minister, Gouverneur Morris, refused (!) to furnish the money necessary to give him a decent funeral; but the generosity of some official friends came to the rescue, and public honors were accorded by the Assembly. He was buried in the Protestant Cemetery in Paris, his body being placed in a leaden coffin to permit subsequent removal to the United States if the nation should so request. More than a century later, General Horace Porter, American ambassador, after an extensive search, advised the government that he had located the grave, and in the summer of that year (1905) the remains were conveyed to Annapolis by an American squadron accompanied by a French cruiser. In 1913 his body was finally placed in the crypt of the chapel of the Naval Academy.

A large part of the source material is used for the first time in this absorbing volume, the author having access to various manuscripts and other records in England, France, Russia, and Holland, which were either unknown or unavailable to earlier biographers.

THE PHILHARMONIC SYMPHONY SOCIETY MEDAL

"The history of the Philharmonic is the history of music in America," wrote J. G. Huneker, which might well be when both quality and age are remembered. This is the first medal ever struck to mark a symphony orchestra centennial, and was issued last year, the original Philharmonic Society of New York having been launched in 1842, and in 1928 incorporating the Symphony Society of the City of New York, which was organized in 1879.

THE COINING PRESS OF THE N. J. COPPERS

By DAMON G. DOUGLAS, Caldwell, N. J.

(Paper Presented Before the Jersey City Coin Club)

There are interesting stories waiting to be pieced together of the early coinage of our State of New Jersey and of the people who organized and engaged in the minting. One of these connects the Elizabeth-Town Mint with the first United States Mint at Philadelphia.

In 1786 Albion Cox, one of the contractors for the New Jersey Coppers, began operations in a room behind the kitchen of Col. Matthias Ogden's home in Elizabeth-Town adjoining the residence of Col. Francis Barber, whose daughter, a Mrs. Chetwood, in 1858 at the age of 76, thru her son, Mr. F. B. Chetwood, gave her recollections of the minting to Mr. John H. Hickcox of Albany, who was preparing his work on American Coinage. She described graphically the coining press which was set in a pit in the center of the room and operated by three men.

The coinage ceased in 1788 and Albion Cox returned to England, having lost money on his American business. There in 1793 he was hired by Thomas Pinckney, our Ambassador, at the request of President Jefferson, to be Chief Assayer for the new Federal Mint being set up at Philadelphia. This interesting correspondence between the President and Pinckney was published in 1924 by Mr. Frank H. Stewart in his "History of the First United States Mint" and establishes the arrival of Cox to take up his duties prior to May 7, 1793.

In the meantime in Elizabeth-Town Co. Matthias Ogden had died intestate March 31, 1791, as recorded on his gravestone in the First Presbyterian Church burying ground. The State Archives record that on July 30, 1791 letters of administration were granted naming as administratrix, Hannah Ogden, his widow. No inventory of the estate, if it was ever prepared, has as yet come to light.

At Philadelphia, Hannah Ogden's old acquaintance and her late husband's tenant, Albion Cox, had struck a snag that was delaying the start of a silver and gold coinage. The Act of Congress establishing the mint and providing for the office of Chief Assayer required the furnishing of surety in the sum of $10,000 before entering upon his duties, and this amount he was unable to provide for. On March 3, 1794, the amount of required surety was sufficiently reduced by Act of Congress so that Cox was able to get a Charles Gilchrist to go his bond for the reduced amount, and the way was thus cleared for minting the precious metals. However, sufficient coining presses were lacking for the required increased production of Cents and Half Cents simultaneously with the new silver Half Dimes, Half Dollars and Dollars, without even attempting a start with gold.

Although this was strictly the problem of Henry Voigt, Superintendent and Chief Coiner, it would be no secret to the Chief Assayer who remembered the old screw press he had used at Elizabeth-Town six years prior. Thus in the records of the Mint appears the following voucher: "June 3, 1794. Paid Hannah Ogden, for a coining press $47.44." Unfortunately there has not come to light any mention of the press from 1788, when its official operation ceased, until the 1794 voucher, so we are left to conjecture that the contractors left it possibly in storage pending a revival of coinage, or in some settlement of rental charges. In the six intervening years there was little use that could legitimately have been made of it, as the new Federal Constitution had banned all state and private minting. However, it does seem certain that the 1794 voucher was to this same Hannah Ogden for this same press. For any individual to have owned a coining press would have been a rare thing, but that two of them should have been owned by two individuals, both women, and of the same name, is of course, incredible.

Thus we may fairly claim for our New Jersey Horse Head Coppers that they provided the first Federal Mint with its first Chief Assayer, and with one of its early coining presses. Whether they had anything to do with the impairment of Mr. Cox's finances and whether that impairment was a contributing factor to the absence of a 1793 silver coinage remains in the realm of conjecture.

NEW BELGIAN COINAGE

When they occupied Belgium, the Germans immediately began to drain the country of its silver, copper and nickel coins for the benefit of their war industry. The Belgian people, however, realizing this, proceeded to hoard their small coins, and all German appeals for them to be put back into circulation failed. To facilitate local trading transactions, the Germans were, therefore, obliged to issue in Brussels a new zinc coinage, consisting of 5, 10 and 25-centime, one-franc and 5-franc pieces, in place of the hoarded money.

In the last few months the minting of these coins has reached the extremely high figure of 210,000,000 pieces, of a nominal value of about 300,000,000 francs.

The new currency was minted as follows: From the end of August 1941, to October 1942, 33,180,000 five-centime pieces were struck, totaling 1,659,000 francs. Ten-centime pieces began to be made in July 1941, and have now reached a total of 45,000,000, representing a value of 4,675,000 francs.

Since April of this year, large quantities of 25-centime coins have been minted daily. They now total 16,400,000, and have a nominal value of 4,100,000 francs. One-franc pieces, to the number of 71,000,000, have been made since October 1941. The minting of 5-franc coins in zinc began at the end of April 1941, and ceased on October 17 of the same year.

It is estimated that 600,000 coins are struck each day, but large numbers of these new coins are hoarded in their turn.

INDEPENDENCE OF SPIRIT

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion. It is easy in solitude to live after our own. But the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd, keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.

P. K. ANDERSON, DISTRICT SECRETARY, RESIGNS

President Ferguson reports the resignation of our District Secretary for Venezuela, P. K. Anderson, who is now a Lieutenant in the U. S. Navy. His present address is Co. A, 5th Special Batt., Camp Peary, Williamsburg, Virginia. He felt because of his service in the armed forces he should retire as District Secretary, but states he is as keenly interested as ever in Spanish coins (his collection of this series being at least one of the largest in the Western Hemisphere), and that he will be glad to answer any questions relating thereto which any member would like to ask.

SOME DEFINITIONS OF HOME

A London magazine asked its readers to submit their definitions of "home"—and received over eight hundred answers. From these, six were selected as the best; here they are:

"Home—A world of strife shut out, and a world of love shut in."

"Home—A place where the small are great, and the great are small."

"Home—The father's kingdom, the mother's world, and the child's paradise."

"Home—The place where we grumble the most and are treated the best."

"Home—The center of our affection, 'round which our heart's best wishes twine."

"Home—The place where our stomachs get three square meals a day, and our hearts a thousand."

THE DEAN OF COLLECTORS

The mystery is as yet unsolved—the identity of the A. N. A. member who has been actively interested over the longest period. This inquiry was made in the March issued of THE NUMISMATIST, confident that at least some information would be forthcoming shortly: here it is.

W. H. Brown of Conneant, Ohio, No. 9038, writes that in March of 1889 he was invited to visit an uncle in Washington, D. C., and attend the inauguration of President Harrison. During the month spent there he became interested in coins, and this marked his actual start as a collector. His chief interests have been U. S. coins, principally proof sets, and paper money. Those 54 years must have afforded a pretty large measure of enjoyment.

Half a century, plus six years, is no small space of time, and this represents the period over which George F. Brown of Pasadena has been collecting, having had his interest aroused back in 1887 by a certain 2-cent piece, and this interest has been steadily maintained ever since. His membership number in the A. N. A. is 1886, and he is Charter Member No. 31 in the Chicago Coin Club.

Comes a letter from Frank C. Ross of Kansas City, Mo., No. 4515, saying that in 1880, at the age of eight, his father presented him with a Trade dollar, and with that as a starter he has been collecting ever since. This adds up to 63 years in the numismatic harness. Member Ross neglected to say whether or not he still possesses the dollar; probably not, for that would have been a touch he is not likely to have overlooked. By the way, he is chairman of the Club Activities Committee for National Coin Week, April 11-17.

But what chance have these two “veterans” against H. E. Deats of Flemington, New Jersey, whose original membership number was 15, his life membership number being 65? He writes that he took up our hobby in 1878, and sold (he does not say why) his first collection in 1892 through the old time New York dealer, Ed. Frossard. He likewise says he is sending a copy of the Frossard catalogue, but unfortunately it has not yet arrived as this is written, and it is to be hoped it has not been lost in these incredibly erratic mails. His collection of encased postage stamps was sold years ago through the well remembered Chicago dealer, Ben G. Green, whose office was in Chicago’s first skyscraper, the Masonic Temple. He is still interested in New Jersey coppers and Masonic medals. He must forgive this mention in spite of implied objection, for after all we set out to find the “Dean of Collectors,” and modesty should give precedence to statistics.

Now who else will qualify for the group of the ten oldest?

CINCINNATI CONVENTION BADGES

Librarian Ted R. Hammer of Burlington, Iowa, wishes again to call attention to the fact that some of the badges of the Cincinnati convention are still available at $1.00 each; and that a few of the (1939) New York convention badges also may be had—the two for $1.75. Receipts will go into the Library book purchase fund.

CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

Attention is especially invited to the report of the March 1st meeting of the Washington Numismatic Society under "Club Meetings," in this issue, dealing with the proposal in the District of Columbia to assess coin and stamp collections for personal property tax. For obvious reasons this will be watched with interest by collectors everywhere.

AKRON COIN CLUB—The February meeting of the Club was held at the Y. M. C. A. Thirteen members and ten visitors were present.

Mrs. Mildred Metz, who was in charge of the program, introduced Mr. Fred C. Pockrandt, who showed a series of colored motion pictures, taken on his trip to Hawaii, just before Pearl Harbor.

Mr. M. B. Fenton displayed a complete series of the coins of Hawaii. Mr. Samuel Rotenberg displayed medals of Lincoln and McKinley, also photographs of early Akron taken in Lincoln's time. Mr. Vance displayed a set of the coins used in New Zealand, sent to him by his brother in the service. Mrs. Metz gave a talk on her paper money collection, and also showed a collection of Presidential autographs including one of Lincoln.

—M. B. Fenton, Secretary.

ALBANY NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—President Sartoris opened the 121st meeting on February 25, with seventeen members and two visitors in attendance.

There was considerable discussion about holding a banquet this spring. Those present were unanimously favorable, and it was decided to seek an expression of opinion from other members at the time of voting for officers for the year beginning in April.

Topics for the evening were Indian cents, and medals pertaining to Washington and Lincoln. Exhibits were varied and interesting, and were made by Messrs. Van Kleeck, McCabe, Kurth, Raymond, Wilbur, Crowther, McKinney, Robertson and Clough.

—Willis J. McKinney,
Secretary-Treasurer.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—Twenty-two members and guests were in attendance at the 180th meeting of the club held on the evening of March 2, 1943. Mr. Peters, a guest, spoke briefly in regard to the Cleveland club to which he formerly belonged, and Mr. R. J. Heller, just returned from a trip covering a large portion of the United States, told of the various coin clubs visited by him including those at Chicago, Detroit and Minneapolis. President Larson announced the sudden death of Rev. E. W. Thwing, who upon several occasions has addressed the club on Chinese coins, having served as a missionary in that country for twenty-eight years.

The purchase of Malcolm Storer's book on "Numismatics of Massachusetts" covering state coinages, medals and tokens, for the club library, was authorized.

Mr. Frank M. Schmidt addressed the club on the subject, "18th Century Tokens of Great Britain," augmenting his talk with a large exhibit of these pieces issued to remedy a scarcity of copper coins. The design of the tokens not only dealt with commerce but with architecture, engineering, portraiture, amusements and animals. St. Paul's Cathedral, Newgate Prison, St. James Palace, the Bank of England, and other famous buildings are portrayed. Shakespeare, the Prince of Wales, and others of note, ran second to the picturization of Lady Godiva and her celebrated Coventry episode. Following Mr. Schmidt's interesting and unusual discourse, a short auction closed the evening.

—Earle K. Stanton, Secretary.

CHICAGO COIN CLUB—The 289th regular monthly meeting of the Club was held at the La Salle Hotel on March 3rd. Fifty-four members and three visitors were in attendance, with President Pennington presiding.

The members then voted their approval of having the auctions precede the regular meeting. Forty-six lots were auctioned by Mr. Rayson, who announced another auction at the April meeting. The last lot was a $10.00 United States certificate with the yellow seal. Mr. Snyder, who donated the premium to the Club, said that this came from Casablanca.

Messrs. Turner, Lasky and Doak were elected to membership. Resignation of Mr. Klindt was regretfully accepted. Mr. Snyder discussed the new Canadian nickel. Mr. Ripstra was thanked for arranging with the Hotel for the present quarters for another year.

Mr. Kopicki read a very interesting paper on the first Colonial mint. Mr. Rayson then gave an account of what happens when anyone in England finds a coin hoard.

OMAHA COIN CLUB—97th meeting called to order on the evening of March 5 by President Blaufuss, with nine members and two guests present.

Secretary Moulton read correspondence from the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Montreal, Canada in regard to obtaining some of the new 1943 octagon five-cent pieces. After some discussion it was decided we should place an order for 100 of the new coins and distribute them to members of the club that desired them.

Mr. Pilmaier, program committee chairman, was reminded that our 100th meeting will occur in June, and that we should have something special for the occasion.

Dr. Judd was on hand with his collection of Patterns and he also had Eastman Kodachrome Color slides of the 1877, 1878 and 1879 Patterns which he projected upon a screen. The Gold and Silver Patterns showed up very good but the Copper ones were not quite as clear and distinct. Along with the pictures he explained in detail the various obverses and reverses and also the rarity of each. After Dr. Judd finished with the slides we were privileged to see his Patterns and also the latest addition to his collection which is the rare Russian platinum 12 roubles. He also showed the 3 and 6 roubles platinum pieces.

—Raymond Moulton, Secretary.

ORANGE COUNTY COIN CLUB—The 46th monthly meeting of the Club was held on the evening of February 16, 1943, at the Church of the Messiah in Santa Ana, with President Harry Hanson in the chair. Thirty members and six guests were present.

Taking his cue from the February issue of The Numismatist, Herbert Bergen, the program chairman, handed out sheets of paper with some twenty questions pertaining to numismatics. The first prize of an uncirculated silver dollar was won by Mr. W. H. Buttram of San Pedro, whose score was 98%. Second prize of an uncirculated half dollar was won by Miss Maurie Hamill of Santa Ana.

One of the visitors, Mrs. Hubert Nall of Santa Ana, wife of our new member, Dr. Hubert Nall, was introduced and gave to the club a most thrilling account of an experience at Williams, Arizona. The account ran something like this: Returning from a visit to her son in Atlanta, who is a dental officer in the U. S. Army, she decided to stop off at the Grand Canyon. It was necessary for her to change trains at Williams, Arizona. She and a group of other passengers sat down and waited for the train which was reported late. Finally at 5:00 in the morning they discovered that their train had come and gone and they were left waiting with no train till evening. In the meantime she had become acquainted with a woman about her own age, who apparently was thoroughly enjoying their predicament. This lady had obtained a room at one of the local hotels and invited Mrs. Nall to share her room with her. She gladly accepted. During the course of time she discovered her new acquaintance was Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, and that she was doing some government work. Mrs. Nall did not realize the significance of this until she returned to California and was told by some coin collectors that she had shared a room with none other than Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Philadelphia Mint. Mrs. Nall said she felt Mrs. Ross was one of the most charming, unaffected, and interesting persons she has ever met.

Adolph Larson again conducted a successful coin auction.

—C. Glenn Curtis, Secretary.

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

The 70th meeting of the Society was held Monday evening, March 8, 1943, at the Benson Hotel in Portland, with 21 members and five guests in attendance.

At the request of President Bibler your Secretary read a letter from Mr. Frank C. Ross, Chairman of National Coin Week, which is sponsored each year by the American Numismatic Association. It will be held this year from April 11 to April 18 inclusive, and each collector is urged to make a display wherever possible. Leonard Trythall was appointed local Chairman by President Bibler; Dr. Firth and George Pipes agreed to assist in obtaining display space.

The displays for the evening brought out some interesting items:

A 250 Rouble Russian Bond, issued by the Provincial Government of Russia under Kronskey. Mr. Gradassoff's translation of the wording of this bond was exceptionally interesting; 5, 7 and 15 Rouble gold coins of Nicholas the Second; several displays of Russian copper coins, also copper coins from Siberia; $5 gold piece of 1810 (U. S.). Many other U. S. coins in fine to proof condition.

Those making displays were: Hugh Davenport, Howard Hughes, Stanley Seabolt, Henry Perry, Stephen Bibler, Geo. McLarty, Ben Cook and Bill Conger.

First prize for the best display of Russian coins went to Hugh Davenport and second prize went to Geo. McLarty. The prizes of wooden nickels were donated by Mr. Beebe of the Beebe Stamp and Coin Co. of Chicago. Felix Baronovich and Merrill Henderson acted as judges.

Bill Conger gave us some interesting points on Russian history which dates back into the early part of the 12th century. He points out that 48 races of people go to make up the population, and that some of its rulers were very cruel and forceful. As to the coins of Russia we find that copper, silver, gold and for a short period of time even platinum was used, and at another only copper coins.

Unless you want Strictly Uncirculated coins, the items in this group should be satisfactory. They are worn only a very small amount, and are really nice. On the Morgan Dimes the word Liberty shows nicely, and some are sharp. I believe that a lot of folks would class the coins in this group as Fine, Very Fine and Extra Fine. Some are very near uncirculated and at least partially brilliant. Don't forget that you can return any or all, for Cash Refund, if you are not entirely satisfied.

COLLECTION OF UNITED STATES FRACTIONAL CURRENCY

This group consists of 41 varieties, all different, and each in crisp new condition. Each bill individually mounted in a cellophane container, and priced. It took the former owner eight years to assemble the group. As a collection, it is worth way over catalog price. We offer the entire lot, however, at less than catalog—only $85. If you would like a representative collection of Fractional Currency, here is your opportunity.

ONE OF THE RAREST ITEMS IN FRACTIONAL CURRENCY!

Number 56 in the Standard Catalog, bust of Spinner, with the autograph signatures of Allison and NEW, is considered one of the rarest pieces. We offer this rarity in perfect crisp condition for only $525.00.

A NEW VIEW OF THE STONER AND SHROYER TOKENS

By MAX M. SCHWARTZ, New York City, N. Y.

In THE NUMISMATIST of January, 1943 there was published an extremely interesting paper on "The Stoner and Shroyer Tokens," which brought me much enjoyment. However, I was greatly intrigued by some of the statements and conclusions, and much against my better nature, I am forced to take issue with some of them.

When Dr. Hetrich and Mr. Julius Gutttag, with the help of Mr. Waldo C. Moore and other recognized numismatists, published in 1924 their work on Civil War Tokens and Cards, they included all types and varieties then known to them. Among these were the Stoner and Shroyer cards, numbered 6400 to 6458 (which I shall hereafter refer to as 'S & S Cards'). Their inclusion in that list is a tacit implication that they were actually in existence in 1861-4. No one has, however, vouched to that extent. Mr. Moore concludes that they were issued during the Civil War period. I question the justification for this conclusion with respect to all types, excepting the Indian Head, contending that all the others were later mulings, probably by the Keys. I realize that my determination is not novel, but perhaps I can point out some new thoughts on the subject, which may put this matter in a new light.

Let us examine some of the known facts with respect to some of these reverse dies. The Keys engraved many Washington dies, and I have in my collection quite a number of specimens struck therefrom. The Keys did not, however, make the die used for Hetrich-Gutttag type 95. That one was made by Charles C. Wright, who died in 1854. (See Baker "Medallie Portraits of Washington," pages 32 and 41.) Baker 76 (illustrated) was undoubtedly the original use of this die. Baker 207 (illustrated) was a muling of this die with the Franklin die that was also used on the S & S cards, as described by Mr. Moore. It follows then conclusively that although this Washington die was in existence during the period 1861-4, it was not in the possession of the original maker.

The Franklin reverse, so well described by Mr. Moore, is attributed to Bale. Although it differs entirely from Baker Nos. 201, 202 and 203 in my possession, which are signed BALE, I assume the attribution to be correct. However, Joseph Bale died in 1851, and the conclusion reached in the preceding paragraph is equally true in this case. It follows also that both of these dies were being used in muling.

Let us now consider the type of reverse with the Grant bust, which is signed by Key. It is significant for the purpose of this discussion to note that the Grant type bust used on the S & S cards, H. G. type 113 is the only type showing his effigy, and so far as I have been able to find, not a single patriotic token in the H. G. series is known from that die. As a matter of fact, the S & S tokens are the only ones alleged to have been struck from that die for use during the period 1861-4. There are, however, many of the patriotic tokens with the bust of McClellan, of which there are not less than 8 types. The query arises, why should an S & S card be struck with a Grant reverse and none with a McClellan reverse? I suggest that the answer to this problem is supplied by the two Grant political tokens, which I am illustrating. One has a reverse reading, "For President, General U. S. Grant," and the other reverse reads "For President, General U. S. Grant 1868." You will note that the obverse of these political tokens is identical with that of H. G. type 113, and similarly signed.

Now, let us consider the supposed "Greeley" type. This is presumably H. G. type 497, illustrated in Mr. Moore's article, labeled "Franklin" and corrected in the February issue to "Greeley." Compare this with my political token of Horatio Seymour, signed by Key with reverse reading "For President Horatio Seymour 1868." One is forced to admit that they are identical. The "mystery" is no longer mysterious. What someone has heretofore erroneously called "Greeley" is now clearly the much-hinted-at but never-seen Seymour type. While it may be true that "It takes a wise father to know his own son," we should concede that a die-maker would know the true name of his model.

Upon further comparison of this Seymour political token with the latter of the Grant exhibits, you will notice that the reverses are identical except for the name. Apparently, the Keys were selling their favors impartially to both political parties in 1868.

Grant was a presidential nominee in 1868 and 1872; Seymour in 1868; Greeley in 1872 and Garfield in 1880. I contend that these facts are more likely the reason their effigies were engraved, rather than the reasons ascribed by Mr. Moore. After all, Seymour was the Governor of only one of many States; Greeley, the editor of only one of many newspapers; and Garfield in 1864 was too inconsequential to be of any notice. Are we to believe that the Keys in 1864 were clairvoyant in picking future Presidents and presidential candidates years in advance? Is it not more logical to hold, in the absence of definite proof to the contrary, that when these persons were honored with the presidential nomination, and the Keys, for commercial purposes, struck political tokens, they did a little muling with the S & S dies? Shall we say, as does Mr. Moore, that it is "an idle thought, just a guess, an empty dream" that such of these combinations with the S & S cards as exist, were prepared in 1868 or thereafter?

We know that the Keys in 1870 muled the Washington die heretofore referred to on cards for Mason & Co. (Baker 559), and muled the Lincoln die for the same customer in 1870 (King 638). We know the Keys were notorious for the manifold uses to which dies in their possession were put.

Finally, why should all three of the descendants of Stoner and Shroyer keep as "treasured keepsakes" exclusively the least artistic and the least interesting one, the Indian Head? If any of the others had been in existence and made for S & S, would not at least one of these others have been retained by at least one of these descendants?

In conclusion, until definite proof is shown to the contrary, I suggest:

- (a) That there are no S & S cards with the Garfield bust;
- (b) That there are no S & S cards with the Greeley bust; and that the ones heretofore so designated are really those of Horatio Seymour; and
- (c) That all of the S & S cards, with the exception of the Indian Head, were struck after 1864 and are therefore not properly a part of this series.

These views have all been communicated to Mr. Moore. He has been gracious enough to agree with me in toto and has authorized me to say so. I realize that my conclusions are based upon a line of "negative" reasoning, usually a weak method of ratiocination, but in the absence of "positive" information, it is the best that I can muster under the circumstances.

THE CHURCH WAR CROSS

(This story recently came to Mr. Shepard Pond of Boston, who has been good enough to relay it to The Numismatist. The facts were furnished by Mrs. James DeWolf Perry, wife of the Episcopal Bishop of Rhode Island, and mother of the Reverend Perry, Jr., mentioned in the last paragraph.—Ed.)

IN 1917 the Episcopal Church War Commission was created to help serve the religious needs of the men of the Episcopal Church who were in the service of their country. Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts was Chairman and Bishop Perry of Rhode Island was Executive Secretary. Headquarters were at 14 Wall Street, New York. On the appointment of Bishop Perry in 1918 as Senior Red Cross Chaplain in France, the Reverend Henry B. Washburn of Cambridge, Massachusetts, became Executive Secretary. The Commission supplied Episcopal Chaplains with portable altars, vestments, prayer books, bibles, hymnals and money for special assistance.

The Crusader spirit was very strong at that time, and the "War to end war" caught the imagination of the soldiers. The feeling of self-sacrifice lifted many a humble man completely out of his usual thoughtless existence. When American men who had landed in England on their way to France marched by the Church of St. Cross in Winchester, they were thrilled to learn that it was the same road taken by the Crusaders eight hundred years ago when they marched to the sea for passage to Palestine.

The War Commission decided that something more personal than service books should be given to these men as a reminder of their religious faith, and the Commission requested Mrs. Perry to obtain designs for a cross or scapula. Mrs. Perry approached the office of Bertram Goodhue, and one of his men made several designs on suggested lines: first, it should be scapula shape to avoid the sharp points; second, the design should be the ancient "Crusader's Cross," which is composed of five crosses symbolizing the five wounds of Christ; third, it should have engraved upon it "Christ died for thee," a quotation from the Liturgy of the Book of Common Prayer. Across the back was to be inscribed "The Church War Cross."

The present design of the War Cross was accepted. It was intended only for the men of the Episcopal Church in active service overseas, men who felt the Crusader spirit, and to mark some special religious experience or when dangerously wounded and in hospital. The eighty Red Cross Chaplains under Bishop Perry served with the hospitals, both Base and the little Mobile Hospitals at the front: they all carried these crosses to give in very particular cases to the soldiers. It was very rarely given under other circumstances. Thousands received it, and many still cherish it.

With the outbreak of this present war, another Church War Commission was at once set up at 1 Joy Street, Boston, with Bishop Sherrill of Massachusetts as Chairman, and the Reverend Henry B. Washburn again as Executive Secretary. It was decided to issue another war cross, using the same design but placing the figure II on the reverse. As there are so many active fronts in this war the cross has been quite generally given to all Episcopal Chaplains, and to the parish clergy of the Episcopal Church to distribute among their men who leave to go into the service. It is not intended for the families of soldiers but only for those in uniform, and many thousands of these War Crosses are now worn by soldiers, sailors and airmen, and possibly front-line nurses.

The specimen illustrated is from the cabinet of the Massachusetts Historical Society to which it was presented by the Reverend James DeWolf Perry, Jr., rector of Saint John's Church, Newtonville, Massachusetts.

BERGEN MONEY

By DAMON G. DOUGLAS, Caldwell, New Jersey

(Paper read before the Bronx Coin Club, March 23, 1943.)

The bog lands of our State of New Jersey have left their numismatic monuments of a century ago in the form of what was then often referred to as "bog money." The employers of the bog workers in the glass works and in the production of iron from the bog ores frequently found an extra profit and a convenience in setting up company stores to supply the needs of their workmen. To make sure that these stores would receive the full patronage of the help and also to eliminate the necessity of tying up real capital for payroll purposes, the practice was widely followed of paying off in privately struck company money, redeemable in goods at the company store. These pieces of private coinage were dubbed variously by their recipients as "bog money," "shinnies" (possibly a combination of shillings and pennies), and in the case of the subject of these remarks, "Bergen money," named for its issuer, the Bergen Iron Works and its store.

In the early 1800's, on the site of the present community of Lakewood, New Jersey, a furnace stack was erected for the reduction of the local bog iron, and dwellings were built to house the working crew. Here cannon balls were cast to supply our forces in the war with Britain in 1812. In 1831, a Mr. J. W. Brick purchased the property and expanded the works for the manufacture of water pipe. The process required upwards of 400,000 bushels of charcoal annually, which was obtained from the surrounding timber lands. However by 1857 both the ore beds and the convenient charcoal timber were nearing exhaustion. Also it was found that iron ores discovered further north in the state could be more economically worked. At this time the furnace operation was discontinued but the manufacturing processes were expanded, shipping in the necessary pig iron. The accompanying wood cut illustration was printed in 1868. It shows part of the buildings of the Bergen Iron Works as they appeared at that time as the central point of the village of Bricksburg, in the township of Brick, both named for the original proprietor. The development of the iron industry close to the coal fields in Pennsylvania contributed to the ultimate closing of the works at Bricksburg. The region's real climatic advantages began to attract visitors and, feeling that a more euphonious name might accelerate the growing resort business, the village fathers adopted for their community its present name of Lakewood.

The "Bergen money" that survives was struck from one reverse and two similar obverse dies, and in copper and brass, making four varieties, numbered by Lyman H. Low, Nos. 142, 143, 144 and 180. On the obverse appears a standing eagle with wings spread, over which is BERGEN IRON WORKS, and below STORE; the reverse bears conventionalized clasped hands, radiate, with BONAE FIDEI SIGNUM over, and 1840 below.

In 1920 when the late Mr. Edgar H. Adams published his able listing of United States Store Cards, he attributed these to the town of Belleville, Newark's neighbor to the north, giving three varieties as N. J. Nos. 1, 2 and 3. Later, Mr. Wayte Raymond, in his "Standard Catalogue of United States Coins and Tokens," followed Mr. Adams' lead and still leaves them assigned to Belleville. The true story is quite convincing as built up in the following references: "Historical Collections of New Jersey," J. W. Barber, New Haven, 1868. "More Forgotten Towns," Henry C. Beck, E. P. Dutton & Co. Proceedings, N. J. Historical Society, January, 1896. As a "BONAE FIDEI SIGNUM," Mr. Raymond in his forthcoming revision will, I hope, see fit to restore the "Bergen Money" to the place of its original issue and use: Bricksburg; or, as it is called today, Lakewood.

AFTER 99 YEARS

(The fascination of browsing through second-hand book stores is strong for a multitude of persons, for there is always the chance of finding some rarity—first edition, author's presentation copy, association volume—that has escaped the watchful eye of the proprietor, and which can be purchased for a moderate sum: later to be prized chiefly for its own sake, but garnished with the recollection of a shrewd (lucky) transaction which secured the treasure. Of course, no sane book lover in these later days expects to discover a First Folio of Shakespeare, but literary finds of lesser magnitude are made now and then, so the search goes on interminably.

But a somewhat different episode is related below by one of our members in Haddonfield, New Jersey. He was in search of information rather than rarities, and in the process found a numismatic item written just 99 years ago which will keenly interest all collectors of U. S. coins; its official flavor makes it all the more significant, even though, in substance, some of the circumstances related are more or less familiar to many.

We thank Mr. Haden for his thoughtful courtesy in sharing the story with his fellow collectors.—Ed.)

Haddonfield, N. J., April 6th, 1943.

To the Editor:

Several weeks ago I stopped in Leary's Book Store in Philadelphia. Leary's is well known in this section for second hand books. The purpose of my visit was to try and find some books dealing with United States Coins. I was unsuccessful, but did notice quite a few books dating back to the eighteenth century dealing with numismatics; these books dealt with European coinage and about half of them were printed in German.

Just by chance I happened to notice a notation on a piece of paper that had been glued in the fly leaf of one of these books. The information it contained I thought might be of interest to other numismatists so I copied it down and am now forwarding it to you, with the thought that perhaps it might be worthy of mention in THE NUMISMATIST.

Following is a copy exactly as it was penned in the book:

Half Disme

Obverse—A head—1792—Liberty Parent of Science and Industry

Reverse—Flying Eagle—Half Disme—United States of America.

In conversation with Mr. Adam Eckfeldt today at the mint, he informed me that the Half Dismes above described were struck at the request of Gen. Washington to the extent of one hundred dollars which sum he deposited in bullion or specie—for that purpose—Mr. Eckfeldt thinks that Gen. Washington distributed them as presents—some were sent to Europe but the greater number of them he believes, were given to acquaintances in Virginia. No more of them were coined except those for Gen. Washington. They were never designed as currency—the mint was not at the time fully ready for going into operation. The coining machinery was in the cellar of Mr. Harper's sawmaker at the corner of Cherry and Sixth Streets, at which place these pieces were struck.

April 9, 1844.

I. McAllister.

I do not have any knowledge who Mr. McAllister might have been, or how the notation happened to be there. I just happened to see it and thought, as I said before, that other numismatists might like to know about the Half Dismes.

—EDWARD B. HADEN.

THE AMERICAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY

By SAWYER McA. MOSSER, Librarian, New York City

Eighty-five years ago on April 6, 1858, twelve men interested in coins met at the home of Augustus B. Sage, 121 Essex Street, New York City, to organize a society devoted to numismatics. Officers were elected and a constitution adopted stating the Society's object to be "the collection and preservation of coins and medals, with an investigation into their history, and other subjects connected therewith." Such was the simple beginning of the American Numismatic Society whose Museum and publications are so widely known today both in our own land and abroad. This original group continued holding regular meetings for a year and a half until the disturbing conditions of the Civil War brought about a lapse in their activities. There is no record of any meeting for nearly five years after that of October 20, 1859. At a meeting on February 5, 1864, a reorganization appears to have taken place. A new constitution was adopted in which the name of the Society is given as "The American Numismatic and Archaeological Society," an indication that study of archaeology was to be coupled with that of coins. Since this reorganization the Society has remained active to the present day, regularly holding meetings and putting into print the proceedings of its Annual Meetings.

Laying the Foundation

The founders of the Society were an enthusiastic and active group and no time was lost by them in striving to fulfill the objects outlined in their constitution. From the beginning they seem to have aimed at eventually becoming a solidly founded institution which would enable numismatic knowledge in this country to take a recognized place alongside other serious studies. No records reveal the reason for the choice of the design of the Society's seal in 1864. Yet the reason must be implied in the design itself, a three-leaved oak twig with acorns, which calls to mind the old saying, "Great oaks from little acorns grow."

During the first year a beginning was made in the foundation of a collection and a library. At the meeting of August 24, 1858, the Librarian was authorized to subscribe for copies of Dickeson's "American Numismatic Manual" and Hickox's "Historical Account of American Coinage." Gifts of coins, medals, tokens, books, and pamphlets are regularly recorded in the minutes of early meetings. Strikingly, many of these donations came from interested collectors throughout the country. Early provision was made for honorary and corresponding members. Those named to these classes of membership were the outstanding numismatists both abroad and in America. Contact with both these classes was maintained through correspondence, with the result that the Society's meetings were considerably enlivened by letters and papers submitted on numismatic topics from a wide geographical range.

The assassination of President Lincoln impelled the Society to embark on its first ambitious venture, which proved to be a discouraging one. At a meeting of May 11, 1865, a committee was appointed to take in charge the striking of a medal in memory of Lincoln. Circulars were issued seeking subscribers. Although there was a good response, it was not sufficient to pay for the cost of issuing the medal. Early in the spring after sixteen bronze medals had been struck and a few in white metal, the dies cracked. New dies were cut by the artist, Emil Sigel, at considerable expense to the Society, beyond all possibility of the return from sale of the medals. Because of this unfortunate experience no attempt was made to issue another medal for nearly twenty years.

Early Leadership

Throughout its history the Society has been fortunate in having foresighted and intelligent leaders and a co-operative and loyal membership. In 1867, Charles E. Anthon was elected President, the first of a series of able Presidents. Altogether he served twelve years in the office, the last ten consecutively. During his presidency the Society took on added vigor. Though slow, the growth of the library and collection was steady. A room was rented at Mott Memorial Hall where the library and collection were installed and meetings held. Dr. Anthon was a professor at the College of the City of New York, and has been described as a distinguished classical scholar—one whose genial personality and enthusiasm for coins inspired others to greater interest in the study and development of their collections. During the first years of the American Journal of Numismatics he served as its editor and contributed much of the material contained in the first four volumes. His articles and presidential addresses were written in the best style and reflect the finest scholarship of his day. Late in life his collection, which in size and variety ranked among the best, was put to auction. The catalogues of the first three of the five sales in which it was sold were prepared by Dr. Anthon himself and could well serve as a model for the preparation of coin catalogues today. At the death of Dr. Anthon in 1883, Daniel Parish, Jr., was elected President and continued in that office through reelection for thirteen years. During his presidency the Society continued steadily to increase in size and prosperity, and the growth of the collections and library was due in great degree to the generosity of Mr. Parish himself. Andrew C. Zabriskie was elected President in 1896 and retained the office until 1904. During the period of his incumbency the membership and funds continued to grow, and intensive interest developed in medals, decorations, and insignia. At this time the Society also sponsored a die-cutting school which operated with some success under the direction of Victor D. Brenner for nearly five years.

Shifting Headquarters

Up to the year 1905 an ever recurring problem had been the securing of satisfactory rooms in which to house the collection and hold meetings. Each new move was made for the purpose of securing more commodious quarters. In 1891, when another move became necessary, a committee was appointed to raise a building and endowment fund with a view to the Society owning its building. The matter was brought to the attention of the entire membership, but without success. Then began the Society's longest and most satisfactory occupancy, that of a room leased in the building of the New York Academy of Medicine on West 43rd Street. In order to avoid taxation, it was necessary in 1902 for the Academy of Medicine to ask for relinquishment of the room. No place could be found which was sufficiently fireproof and free from the danger of burglary, and still within the means of the treasury. Members and others with the intention of donating their collections hesitated giving them to an organization without safe and permanent quarters. As a solution it was proposed that a merger be made with the New York Historical Society whose new building had recently been erected.

THE SOCIETY'S FIRST HOME

The Problem Solved

However, after much discussion the membership decided to make another attempt to secure a building of their own. The result was the erection of the Museum now occupied by the Society in upper Manhattan at Broadway and 156th Street. The ground upon which the building rests was the gift of Archer M. Huntington, who was elected President in January, 1905, and under whose direction funds were raised for the building, and an endowment for its maintenance.

Mr. Huntington's presidency was one of transition from an organization having characteristics of a local club into a learned society sponsoring the activities of the only museum devoted entirely to numismatics. At the annual meeting of 1907 the constitution was amended to restore the original name, "The American Numismatic Society," and decision made to eliminate archeology from the organization's interest. Edward T. Newell and John Reilly, Jr., were persuaded by the President to house their collections of ancient and Far Eastern coins in the Museum. Both of these famous collectors were given space in which they willingly installed their collections and shared their knowledge with members and all others interested in their fields. Mr. Huntington relinquished the presidency in 1909, at which time a new constitution was adopted abolishing the office of President and placing the Society's administration in the hands of a Board of Governors.

Mr. Newell Becomes President

In 1916 the office of President was restored. Mr. Edward T. Newell was then chosen President, in which office he served continuously until his death in January, 1941. Under his wise direction of its policies, the Society developed into an American counterpart of both the British Museum and the Royal Numismatic Society of England. The collections of the Society prospered through donations, bequests and purchases to such an extent that in 1929 an addition to the Museum building was necessary to accommodate them and provide room for future growth. Mr. Newell is recognized as the greatest numismatic scholar produced by America. His field of interest was ancient coins, but his knowledge of other series was more than that of the average specialist. Early in life he became interested in the coinages of Alexander the Great and his publications of the famous Demanhur hoard established the groundwork for the scientific attribution of the mass of Alexander's coins to their mints. Later his studies extended to include the coinages of the Hellenistic dynasties, culminating in the two massive studies on the Eastern and Western Seleucid Mints of the first seven of the Seleucid kings.

Aside from his studies and publications, Mr. Newell's other activities in the service of numismatics were many. As America's foremost authority on ancient coins, his services were constantly called upon by archeologists and specialists in all fields when their investigations involved a numismatic problem. The coin trade, the extensive and the average collector, all with any sort of interest in coins, frequently called upon him for advice. He willingly and genially gave much of his time, showing portions of his collection to both the advanced student and collector and the humble beginner, and always truly observed the motto of the Society: Parva ne Pereant, "Let not little things perish."

Mr. Newell's Tribute to Howland Wood

Associated with Mr. Newell during his twenty-five years as President were Howland Wood as Curator, and Sydney P. Noe as Secretary and Librarian. Before assuming the curatorship, Mr. Wood was well known for his activities in the American Numismatic Association and for his editorship of THE NUMISMATIST for a brief period. At the time of his death, in January, 1938, President Newell said regarding him: "Howland Wood was one of those rare geniuses who combined an inherited urge to collect and insatiable curiosity as to the 'why' and the 'wherefore,' and an orderly mind which could not brook obvious gaps or disorderly arrangement. In addition, he possessed a keen, artistic sense of style and of the fitness of things which made him undoubtedly the most accurate numismatic forgery-detector in America. While in certain series Howland Wood had made himself the leading authority, his numismatic interests were actually world-wide. Of most fields he had astoundingly accurate and comprehensive knowledge which at all times he was ready to impart generously to the earnest inquirer. With these qualities at his disposal, Mr. Wood proved himself the ideal curator for a rapidly growing collection such as that of the American Numismatic Society. Under his able management and devoted care this collection has grown from 50,000 to 200,000 items, and is today in the very front rank of the great public collections of the world. His many valuable papers and monographs, too numerous to mention in detail, cover such widely separate fields as China, Siam, Ceylon, the Tughra on Mohammedan coins, the coinages of the West Indies, of Revolutionary Mexico, the United States commemorative coins, 'Blacksmiths,' and a splendid catalogue of United States and Colonial coins. The gap which he leaves, not only in this Society but in the nation-wide fraternity of those devoted to numismatic pursuits and pleasures, is great indeed. That it can never be really filled is patent."

Following the death of Mr. Wood in 1938, Mr. Noe was appointed Curator. Mr. Stephen H. P. Pell was named to fill the vacancy in the office of President caused by the sudden death of Mr. Newell. He consented to serve only until another could be found willing to assume the burdens of the office. In January, 1942, Dr. Herbert E. Ives was chosen President and was re-elected for the year of 1943. The record of activities during this, the present, phase of the Society can be found in the officers' and committee reports printed in the current Proceedings.

The Society's Publications

Probably the best known of the Society's contributions to the advancement of numismatic knowledge are its publications. Its first venture in this field was the initiation of the American Journal of Numismatics in May, 1866. Published monthly, this periodical continued under the sponsorship of the Society for four years. During most of this time, Prof. Charles A. Anthon was its editor. Beginning with the fifth volume the Journal became a quarterly, with the Boston Numismatic Society assuming financial responsibility for its publication. Some financial support still was supplied by the American Numismatic Society, and articles continued to be contributed by its members. In 1891 control of the Journal passed into the hands of William T. R. Marvin, a printer in Boston and an ardent numismatist. After the Society had moved into its building it again assumed the publication of the Journal, beginning with Volume XLII and continuing until the periodical ceased with Volume LIII. During this period, from 1907 to 1923, there were published scholarly articles the like of which had not previously appeared in our country. Among these were Mr. Newell's "Reattribution of Certain Tetradrachms of Alexander the Great" and "The Seleucid Mint of Antioch"; Edgar H. Adams' "Private Gold Coinage of the United States"; Harry F. Williams' "The Gold Coinage of Latin America"; Miss Agnes Baldwin's "The Electrum and Silver Coins of Chios"; Howland Wood's "Coinage of the West Indies"; Bauman L. Belden's "War Medals of the Confederacy," and "United States War Medals"; Albert R. Frey's "Dictionary of Numismatic Names"; Farran Zerbe's "The Leshers or Referendum Pieces"; and Miller and Ryder's article on the State Coinages of New England. Because of the lack of a fund properly to support its publication, it was found necessary to suspend the Journal in 1924, thus bringing to an end the first American numismatic periodical of note. Perusal of its file produces a history of the steady progress and improving standards of numismatic knowledge and coin collecting in the United States.

The Proceedings of the Society were published in the American Journal of Numismatics until 1878, when it was decided to issue them in separately printed form. This practice has continued with a few exceptions until the present day. From 1886 to 1907 papers which had been read before the Society were published at the rear of the Proceedings. These papers, often short, contain interesting information not published elsewhere. Among them are Bauman L. Belden's articles on the Insignia of American Military and Patriotic Societies; those by Frank W. Doughty on tokens; that by H. R. Drowne on fractional currency; those by J. Sanford Saltus on European orders and decorations, and flags and insignia of the Confederate States of America; Andrew C. Zabriskie's "Medallie History of Abraham Lincoln," and "Reminiscences of Some Old New York Die Cutters."

"Numismatic Notes and Monographs"

As a result of President Newell's efforts to establish a publication fund, an anonymous donor placed a generous sum at the disposal of the Society in 1920, with certain stipulations concerning its use. These included a provision that the funds were not to be used for a periodical but for separately issued publications of a conveniently small size—that of the present series of Numismatic Notes and Monographs. A second requirement was that the subject matter to be accepted for the new series must ever be of real scientific value and interest, and that under no circumstances were the proceeds of the fund to be used for the publication of material of a merely popular or very general interest. Through this fund the series of Numismatic Notes and Monographs originated and has now reached one hundred issues, covering various fields of interest, from the pens of Edward T. Newell, Agnes Baldwin Brett, Howland Wood, Harrold E. Gillingham, A. F. Pradeau, Sydney P. Noe, Alfred R. Bellinger and George C. Miles, all prominent American numismatists; also such European scholars as R. B. Whitehead, M. P. Vlasto, Oscar Ravel, George F. Hill, J. G. Milne, John Walker and Harold Mattingly.

Because long and extended studies could not be published in the small form of the monograph size, a new series of larger format was initiated in 1938, known as "Numismatic Studies." To date, four numbers have been published in this series, two being Mr. Newell's monumental works on the "Coinage of the Eastern and Western Seleucid Mints"; one by Alfred R. Bellinger on "The Syrian Tetradrachms of Caracalla and Macrinus"; and that by George C. Miles on "The Numismatic History of Rayy."

Some Important Bequests

During the last decade the Society's cabinet has been considerably enriched through the gifts of large and important specialized collections. The collection and library of John Reilly, Jr., devoted to Far Eastern numismatics, and unsurpassed in this field, was presented to the Society through a deed of gift by his daughter, Mrs. Eric N. Baynes. Mr. Robert J. Eidlitz bequeathed his collection of medals, which was especially strong in those relating to architects and architecture. The Italian series was greatly improved through the bequest by Herbert Scoville of his excellent collection. Details concerning all these and many other acquisitions and gifts to the Society have been described in a series of articles by Mr. Noe in the Coin Collector's Journal for 1939 and 1940, in which an excellent comprehensive survey of the contents of the Society's cabinet is given.

Medals Struck by the Society

The lack of success with the Lincoln medal in 1866 discouraged further attempts at striking medals for a long period. The next one issued was the Washington medal in 1883 to commemorate the centennial celebration of the evacuation of New York by the British. On this medal is reproduced the familiar statue of Washington erected at that time on the steps of the sub-treasury building in Wall Street. Succeeding medals honor two of the Society's Presidents: the Anthon medal in 1884 and the Parish medal in 1890.

Two medals were struck in connection with the Society's fiftieth anniversary. One of these, designed by Victor D. Brenner, reproduced the seal of the Society suspended from a clasp, in the form of an oak leaf with two acorns. This was issued for distribution to members and to guests at the anniversary meeting. The other medal, commemorating the fiftieth anniversary, was the Archer M. Huntington medal designed by Emil Fuchs. Its establishment provided that copies in silver were to be awarded from time to time in recognition of outstanding achievement in numismatic literature. The first such award was made in 1918 to Edward T. Newell in recognition of his publications on the coinages of Alexander the Great. Since then awards have been made almost annually, honoring outstanding numismatic scholars throughout the world. Another medal of award was provided for in November 1913 by a fund presented by J. Sanford Saltus. This, the J. Sanford Saltus medal, is awarded for outstanding achievement in medallic design. Since its first award in 1919 to James E. Fraser, nine other awards have been made, the last being that to Lee Lawrie in 1937.

The greatest period of activity in the issuance of medals occurred during the years immediately following World War I. Among these were the Prince of Wales medal, the Joan of Arc medal, and the Treaty of Peace medal, all in 1919; the Marshal Foch medal, 1921; the Paul Revere Sesqui-centennial medal, 1925; and the medal commemorating the tercentenary of the purchase of Manhattan Island, 1926. The latest medal issued by the Society was that commemorating the sesqui-centennial of Washington's inauguration, 1939.

Notable Exhibitions

Since the founding of the Museum, numerous exhibitions have been presented, some of them of considerable size and importance. In 1910 the International Exhibition of Contemporary Medals brought together for display medals of all living artists of this country and Europe. In 1914 a comprehensive exhibition of the coins of the United States and of the original colonies was arranged from specimens in both the Society's own collection and those lent by private collectors. To commemorate the bi-millennial of Augustus, the first Emperor of Rome, a special exhibition was held in the spring of 1938, in which an educational survey of the coinages of the founder of the empire was presented.

From March 2nd to April 14th, 1942, there was held an exhibition of the earliest American coinages: New England and Spanish-American issues. Through the cooperation of members and friends in lending their collections, there was displayed in this exhibit as great an array of the early Massachusetts issue as has ever been gathered. Supplementing the New England coinages there was a display of the Spanish-American pieces which circulated at their side. An outgrowth of this exhibition has been the publication of a monograph on "The Castine Deposit: an American Hoard," issued late last year, and additional monographs on the Willow, Oak and Pine Tree issues, based on data compiled from the coins in this exhibition, are now in preparation.

FROM A CORRESPONDENT

IN THE AMERICAN JOURNAL OF NUMISMATICS, JUNE, 1868

"I was interested in the concluding paragraph of the Numismatic Journal for February, viz., that the artists of the Academy of Design were engaged in making drawings for the gold and silver coins. During the administration of John Quincy Adams, a few lovers of art were at Michael Paff's, where the Astor House now stands, and were discussing the uninteresting appearance of our coins, and whether it were possible to improve them. After deliberation, it was resolved to raise a sufficient amount of money, and to employ a competent artist to make drawings of various designs, the subjects to be named by those who furnished the means. The drawings were forwarded to President Adams, and disapproved by him, because they were of too monarchical a character. On the obverse were the heads of the Presidents; and, on the reverse, important events in the history of each administration, the series being intended to commence with Washington and continue to the end. What an interesting one it would have been, when handed down for a thousand years! And what have we? A nondescript head, farcically labelled 'Liberty,' and a thing supposed to be an eagle. The old Romans (those grand old fellows in such respects) adopted the eagle as a mark of the consecration of a deceased emperor. We hope our ancestors did not foreshadow by it the death of the Republic."

AN UNPUBLISHED DUCAT OF TRIER, 1757

By HENRY GRUNTHAL, New York City

Recently I acquired a ducat of the archbishopric of Trier, which seems to have escaped the researches of earlier students, and which it seems desirable to publish. It may be thus described:

TRIER. John Philip von Walderdorff, Archbishop, 1756-1768. Obv. IOAN. PHILIP. D. G. AR. EP. & EL. TREVIR. AD. PR. PP. and below V. LON. The bust of the archbishop draped in an ermine robe, and with a large cross on his breast, to right. Rev. PRO DEO AC CHARA MEA PLEBE TREVIRENSI. A flaming heart on an altar; a triangle (symbol of the Holy Trinity) surrounded by rays, above. Gold ducat, 21mm 3.45 gr.

The obverse inscription gives in abbreviated Latin form the titles: John Philip, by the grace of God, Archbishop of Trier, Administrator of Pruem, Father of his Country. The letters below the bust are the signature of Franz Anton von Lon, who was an engraver of copperplates and of dies for the mint. He worked in Ehrenbreitstein, Bonn, and Cologne.

The reverse inscription is a Latin motto meaning "For God, and my beloved people of Trier." (The spelling 'charus' for carus was not unusual in the 18th Century, though not perhaps strictly correct.) This motto is incidentally a chronogram, and a correct one, for the letters which have numerical value in the Latin system, and which are cut larger in the die are to be added up MDCCLVII or 1757. The coin probably was struck at the time, and in commemoration of the enthronement of the archbishop on February 27, 1757, and presumably a very small quantity issued from the mint.

Although no specimen of the ducat itself has been recorded, strikes in silver from the dies do exist, which may be called proofs, or medals. And from the existence of these Bohl, in his book "Die Trierischen Muenzen," p. 260, No. 114, anticipated the probable existence of the gold coin, remarking, "The dies of this pretty little silver medal were apparently intended for the coinage of ducats." Compare also von Schroetter, 1231. It is pleasant to be able to confirm this conjecture of Bohl as correct.

LOOKING BACKWARD

THROUGH THE EARLY FILES OF THE NUMISMATIST

FIFTY YEARS AGO

The question of an Exchange Department of the A. N. A. was a live one in May of 1893. The Committee on Revision of Constitution and By-laws submitted two plans: one for actual circulation of the coins among members, the other providing for furnishing lists of coins available, these to be sent to all members who might so request: full conditions under which either plan could be operated were prepared.

The Constitution and By-laws as they would appear under the proposed revisions are given in full, and as might be supposed, they have little in common with those now existing. One requirement was that the Board of Trustees should "prepare a Black List of individuals who have dealt in counterfeit coins or who have been engaged in questionable transactions with collectors, and also a list of bad debtors, and furnish a copy of either list to any member upon payment of a fee of twenty-five cents."

A wholesome amount of attention was paid to the Library, then in its infancy—yet the Librarian reports cash on hand amounting to $103.59, while the Secretary's balance was only $5.50.

Another World's Fair item: "With the New South Wales exhibit for the World's Fair came an unsealed box weighing fifty pounds, labeled 'Stuffed Australian Rats.' The box, however, contained a rare and valuable collection of coins from the Mint, besides some ancient coins. The box was not disturbed in transit." Evidently small interest in taxidermy along the shipping lines.

FORTY YEARS AGO

One of the most interesting news items came from the Philadelphia Public Ledger, giving an account of the finding of the cornerstone of the extension of the original Mint (the latter established in 1792, under President Washington), this having been laid on July 4, 1829, Andrew Jackson then being President, J. C. Calhoun, Vice President, Martin Van Buren, Secretary of State, and John H. Eaton, Secretary of War. (The Eaton affair during Jackson's administration grew to be pretty much of a war in itself.) As Coiner, Adam Eckfeldt's name is familiar to U. S. collectors.

In this 300-pound stone was an old fashioned candy jar containing "three coins and two newspapers, the former consisting of a dime of 1829." (The dime must have been leading a triple life!)

Wayte Raymond, then at South Norwalk, Connecticut, was advertising for half cents and Hard Times tokens; and W. F. Dunham was still looking for an 1822 gold Half Eagle.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

The buffalo nickel had just made its appearance and, as is always the case upon the advent of a new coinage design, there were divided opinions. One is tempted to think, from the quality of some of these criticisms (of any new design), that the critics take the opportunity to find fault (as the common expression has it, though if there be no fault, how can one be found?) for the appearance it may give them of having a discerning eye and discriminating taste; when as a matter of fact all they possess is an aptitude for ridicule—clever, perhaps, but unconvincing. No doubt Cimon of ancient Syracuse had his self appointed critics—but Cimon is immortal, and his critics (if any existed) are merely somewhere (as Stevenson phrased it) in “the derisive silence of eternity.”

This is not to say that all such criticism of fresh coinage designs is invalid; that would be childish. But to have every change in new types assailed is as unreasonable as to go to the other extreme and claim that the artist can do no wrong.

In any event Fraser gave us a truly American piece, both obverse and reverse: not the America of television, the airplane, and of radium, but, nevertheless, American; and it will be a grave misfortune if we ever forget the pioneer days, and, far back of them, our Colonial times; they are a part of our national foundation and of our inheritance.

In this issue of May, 1913, appears a notable paper by Mr. Henry Russell Drowne, then a member of the Council of the American Numismatic Society, entitled “Coins That Make History.” This was read at the New York Numismatic Club dinner earlier in the year, and deals almost entirely with ancient Greek and Roman pieces that were struck to commemorate events that stand out—some more, some less—in the long career of these once great countries of antiquity. Mr. Drowne’s paper would be a revelation to many who have felt little or no interest in the coinage of Greece and Rome.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Probably the two most important articles in this issue were Dr. Malcolm Storer’s “Numismatic Bibliography of the United States,” the first of a series which was to run through four issues; and an exhaustive paper by George R. Ross on “Classification of New Jersey Cents.” Both of these are still of outstanding value.

MEXICO TO SELL GOLD

According to “The New York Times” of April 16, the Banco di Mexico will soon allow the free purchase of gold in an attempt to check the inflationary tendency, it was stated officially today. Gold will be sold in exchange for silver coins and bank notes.

To economize on the cost of transportation of silver, the bank will issue one-peso bank notes. The smallest bank note now in circulation is of 5 pesos. At the same time an additional 50,000,000 one-peso silver coins will be put in circulation.

The gold coins will contain 37.5 grams of pure gold. In order to satisfy the demand which it is foreseen will follow the sale of gold, the bank has withdrawn considerable of its metallic reserve from New York, including the ancient 10, 20 and 50 peso gold coins, according to the statement.

THE SEARCH GOES ON

Letters received from one coast to the other have convinced the Editor that the original idea of discovering the oldest collector (in point of actual years of active interest) should be modified, or rather expanded, to the end of finding the group whose members could at least qualify for a 50-year medal (even in the absence of the medal); otherwise a number of interesting reminiscences would go unrecorded.

Speaking of medals, we suggest a motto for the reverse of this imaginary award: FOR OLD TIMES' SAKE. The rest of the design will no doubt crystallize gradually. The obverse might depict Old Father Time as completely baffled, his shoulders drooping in discouragement and his scythe lying neglected at his feet—helpless against the age-defying spirit of these seasoned collectors—

With snows of winter on their heads,
But spring forever in their hearts.

One guess as to what keeps them young in spirit.

A letter from Edward L. Weikert, Jr., of Washington, D. C., claims he is now in his 50th year as a collector, the start being the finding of a gold dollar on the battlefield of Gettysburg, near which he was born—and he still has that gold dollar. It was a lucky piece, for it marked the beginning of an unflagging interest in numismatics, his tastes ranging widely from ancient Greek and Roman through modern coins of the world, paying especial attention to those of the United States, with a representative accumulation of large sized bills of all denominations up to and including the $100. Medals have by no means been neglected, and "for the good of the order" he has prepared many papers and has given a number of radio talks on numismatic subjects. His A. N. A. number is 5688.

In the early days a gallon of West India rum cost only 25 cents F. O. B. Matapoisett, Massachusetts; on one occasion a certain buyer received in change a Danish West India shilling of 1767, which later he gave to his son, and this son subsequently became the step-father of E. S. Lombard, who found the shilling among the former's effects back in 1879, when a boy of 15; about the same time an old gentleman gave him another coin, and with these two the latent instinct for collecting was kindled, and for 64 years has steadily persisted. His preference is for U. S. coins, but the first two of long ago still hold their unique place apart from all the rest.

Mr. Lombard, who lives in Minneapolis, has membership number 5343, and is also affiliated with the Northwest Coin Club of that city.

IF YOUR NUMISMATIST IS LATE

Under normal conditions in the postal service this magazine should reach members and subscribers with reasonable promptness after mailing. For several months there have been what may be assumed as unavoidable delays, and, in common with other publications, we counsel patience on the part of our readers.

It must be admitted, however, that patience has worn exceedingly thin in some sections of the country, for these delays have at times seemed beyond reason even under present handicaps. As much as 30 days have elapsed between mailing and arrival at no greater distance than New England from Federalsburg, Maryland, the location of our publisher. Some December copies spent as much as six weeks enroute to the Southwest. These are extreme cases, fortunately, but at best there are complaints from many directions.

Will those who are tempted to claim non-delivery please take into consideration the foregoing before concluding their copy is lost in transit, for they nearly always turn up eventually. The situation is especially regrettable when these late arrivals carry desired offerings from dealers, and an order reaches its destination after the coin or coins have been sold to someone in another section whose Numismatist was delivered some days earlier.

We try to equalize delivery as far as possible by mailing those for the far west on, say, the 1st; those for the middle section on the 3rd; and those for the eastern zone on the 5th. But we have no control over the shipments after they are accepted by the Post Office. Perhaps some of our members who may be in the postal service can justify these erratic schedules.

A FEW OBSERVATIONS ON MONEY

They who are of the opinion that money will do everything, may very well be suspected to do everything for money.

—Lord Halifax.

The plainest print cannot be read through a gold eagle.

—Abraham Lincoln.

He was naturally subject to a kind of disease, which at that time they called lack of money.

—Rabelais.

Money is never spent to so much advantage as when you have been cheated out of it: for at one stroke you have purchased prudence.

—Schopenhauer.

NUMISMATICS IN NEW ZEALAND

We have received from Mr. Allan Sutherland, Hon. Secretary of the New Zealand Numismatic Society, reports of their 81st and 82nd meetings held at Wellington in October and November of last year. These mimeographed reports, besides being extremely interesting, are models of neatness and are typographically perfect. They show New Zealand collectors as taking their hobby seriously, and one would judge their meetings to be definitely valuable.

Some extracts from the proceedings of the October meeting follow:

“FIJI CURRENCY. At the end of 1940 the currency of Fiji was in special notes for £1, 10s., and 5s., and coins (but silver 2s., 1s.6p., and nickel pennies and half pennies) but the establishment of troops there created an unprecedented demand for coins, resulting in the rationing of coins and the use of postage stamps for small change. In June, 1942, the Government issued 1s. and 2s. notes (legal tender to £2) and in the following month it was stated that in certain sugar districts a premium of 3s. in the £ was still offered for pennies. Later, traders and hotel-keepers issued paper and cardboard penny tokens which circulated extensively. To correct the position, the Government issued a penny note which bears the replica of the nickel Fiji penny.”

“JAPANESE INVASION CURRENCY. The Hon. Secretary tabled press extracts (Press Sep. 22, 1942 and Post Sep. 24, 1942) indicating that a large number of bank-notes, printed in Japan, had been seized in the South-west Pacific area, and that these notes (£1, 10s., 1s., and 6d.) were printed in English with the words, “Japanese Government” top centre, and a small panel of Japanese printing at bottom centre. The sizes of the £1 and 10s. notes are similar to those of New Zealand. The 10s. is brown in colour and the £1 bright green. The Sydney message reporting the matter stated that ‘the indications were that the notes were intended for use either in Australia or New Zealand.’ Japanese currency notes taken from Japanese soldiers (10 yen and 50 sen) were exhibited by Mr. M. Hornblow, who stated that he had been informed that Japanese in the Coral Sea battle were found to possess currency notes printed in English, including, on one series, ‘Payable in New Zealand,’ and on another, ‘Payable in Australia.’ ”

“Mr. Johannes Andersen said that the issue was reminiscent of Napoleon’s action in striking a medal to commemorate his invasion of England—which did not eventuate.”

“CORROSION OF BRONZE COINS. Mr. J. de Rouffignac submitted a clipping and illustration from the ‘Rotarian,’ April, 1940, indicating that recent studies of bronze coins of ancient Greece have given metallurgists new data on which to plan modern alloys. The conclusion is that after the test of 20 centuries, ‘Bronzes with low tin content and low to moderate amounts of lead are thus shown to be superior to others on the long pull.’ ”

The November meeting also deserves notice:

“The 82nd meeting of the Society was held on 30th November, 1942. Mr. Johannes Andersen, M. B. E., President, occupied the chair. In anticipation of the presence of interested American members of the Armed Forces, a paper was prepared [by Mr. Andersen] dealing with Pacific Island Red Feather currency, but at the last moment the visitors could not attend."

The paper mentioned was an extensive one—approximately 4,000 words—and was incorporated in the report of the meeting. Well written and informative, it should prove a notable contribution to the Society's records. The Hon. Secretary, Mr. Allan Sutherland, is a member of the A. N. A., his number being 4382. Our thanks to him for his thoughtfulness, and our hearty good wishes to the Society he serves.

BREVITIES

We are informed by Mr. H. E. Ewart, Master of the Royal Canadian Mint at Ottawa, that coin is not issued direct to the general public by the Mint. All requests for coin should be addressed to the Chief of the Currency Division, Bank of Canada, Ottawa.

---

Mr. Sydney V. Hagley, A. N. A. No. 8820, of Renmark, South Australia, writes that the Australian 2 shillings, sixpence and threepence values of 1942 were struck at the San Francisco Mint, mint mark S, and the threepence of the same year also at the Denver Mint, indicated by the usual D.

---

The A. N. A. District Secretary for Eastern Michigan, Mr. R. Stehfest of Detroit, sends us a card issued by the Hudson Company of that city to its 2,500 employees, upon which are mounted two of our new zinc coated cents, obverse and reverse showing, with a printed warning to guard against mistaking them for dimes or "nickels," because of their similarity in color and size—rather an easy thing to do, in the pressure of business, for one unfamiliar with this new coinage. The store calls it the "Victory Penny."

---

Robert H. Lloyd of Buffalo sends in the following, clipped from a recent issue of the Buffalo News:

"The appeal to be patriotic and put pennies back into circulation—even if you have to break open sonny's porcelain piggy bank—certainly has been heeded.

"The Buffalo branch of the New York Federal Reserve Bank has received 12,000,000 pennies from member banks in this district and the coins still are flowing in faster than they can be paid out. Clerks are four months behind in counting them, a tedious job here because bags of pennies have to be combed for Canadian pennies before the coins can go through counting machines.

"Last year there were times when the Buffalo bank had less than $200 worth of pennies and these had to be allotted.

"The Buffalo branch has been trying to get rid of its surplus, but so far has been unsuccessful. There was talk once of sending them to the Canal Zone, where they were believed to be needed."

EDITORIAL COMMENT

CHANGELESS IN A CHANGING WORLD

Every thoughtful collector of several years' experience must have asked himself now and then what there is about the science of numismatics that seems to give it an indestructible vitality.

The popularity of different countries and periods may vary from time to time, but this is superficial when compared with the great, underlying force, shall we say, that keeps alive in the minds of thousands that deep and continuing interest in some phase of numismatics; just what that phase may be for each is of little moment in dealing with the greater fact that it does exist.

This of course contemplates the group as a whole—the persisting group, regardless of individual units which come and go, their entrance and exit being purely incidental to the principle we shall venture to suggest.

It is all the more remarkable when we reflect that in this changing world so many things that formerly were recognized as established for all time have been modified, or developed, or replaced entirely. In the realm of medicine and surgery, for example, much that is accepted today without question would have been derided or actively opposed fifty years ago. In human relationships (in times of peace) vast changes have come about—changes that were undreamed of in even the most “enlightened” nations in the days of Washington and Franklin.

But perhaps the most striking examples—and their number is legion—are to be found in the broad fields of science. The fantastic of yesterday (in a manner of speaking) is the commonplace of today; that which was “impossible” has been accomplished; and discoveries formerly beyond the horizon of our imagination are steadily being made in the great laboratories of research. In transportation, in agriculture, in industry—what giant strides have been taken in the last two or three generations!

But in our pride, justifiable though it be, let us not forget certain great things of the past that have kept their greatness through the centuries. When we stand, uncovered, on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, let us remember the Parthenon; as we look with reverence upon the finest of our modern sculpture, Phidias should not be forgotten, nor, much nearer across the gulf of time, yet far in the past, Michelangelo; the canvases of Raphael and Rembrandt, and of a host of others of their day, are still supreme; and, as a feat of ancient engineering, does not the Great Pyramid of Gizeh rank well with our own incredible structures?

Thus certain things—these and a multitude of others—have lived on, while nations have disintegrated and peoples have disappeared; while the map of the world has been remade, and new concepts of human life have been formed. Some things remain steadfast, even in a changing world, and it would seem the intangible values have the greatest tenacity of life. Is it not then possible that the appeal of numismatics, which must be nearly as old as coinage itself, has persisted because fundamentally it deals with certain intangibles? These are neither unreal nor obscure.

Let us reason it out negatively. If we take from our collecting instinct all feeling for history—all interest in the course of our own nation from its very beginning—all interest in the past and present of other nations—all the appeal of ancient coinages, of mythology, of heraldry, of the art of the die engraver, and of the lives and influence of the rulers whose portraits have been thus given us; and, at least equal to any other consideration, the appeal and appreciation of whatever beauty may here and there be found: with all these lacking, what would be left? Rarity, no doubt, though it is hard to imagine a great collecting fraternity based upon this one point of interest alone, especially when it could apply to only a minority of existing pieces, and then in varying degree.

Perhaps our analysis is incomplete, and perhaps unsound. But it would seem reasonable, at least, to conclude that the urge to collect—the collecting instinct, which one either has or has not—survives all changes because it is based upon values which are intangible: an affair of the mind—even of the spirit—and which at the same time are genuinely worthy. Such values are in themselves indestructible, and life is richer because of their enduring and refining influence.

NEWS AND COMMENTS FROM THE LIBRARY

By TED R. HAMMER, Librarian-Curator

For some reason beyond the comprehension of the Librarian, March continues to be the biggest month of the year in A. N. A. library circulation. Maybe the members spent all their money for income taxes and had nothing to do but sit home and read—but we were glad to ship out nearly 100 books in March. Nationally, public libraries report a decline in circulation.

Our request for priced catalogues was answered by two members—Fred E. Durin of Steward, Ill., and Mrs. J. M. Henderson of Columbus, Ohio, widow of the late past President and prominent leader in the A. N. A. Some of these went into circulation even before we got them catalogued because they supplied the answers to queries about foreign coins. And, incidentally, since we have the Jenks sale (1921) catalogue priced (with the aid of the American Numismatic Society), we've had only one request for it, although we used to get one nearly every month. That's the way it goes.

Kenneth E. Crouch of Roanoke, Va., scheduled to enter military service about the time this goes to press, sent the library a comprehensive work on "Awards of Honor in the United States." Typewritten, this article is well illustrated and the only work of its kind so far as we know. Mr. Crouch spent months of research in preparing and illustrating this compilation, which deals with medals for boy scouts, girl scouts, the military, sports, 4-H clubs, medals given American Indians, Future Farmers of America, and those given Negroes. There also is an illustrated section on the Collier aviation trophy, listing those who have received it. It will be necessary to send this article out first class at a cost of 25 to 30 cents to those requesting it, but we hope to see it published eventually.

We regret having had to let some library mail pile up for a few days in early April, due to illness. We went home with the mumps the day before we were to meet with our third Naval Procurement Board, and now are getting over the extraction of three infected teeth which we think caused the "mumps," although two medical doctors didn't agree with us. Mrs. Hammer answered our mail when not busy with us or the new baby—and we thank those who waited without anger over the delays.

BOOK REVIEW

BROOKGREEN GARDENS. By Beatrice Gilman Proske. By Order of the Trustees. Brookgreen, S. C. 1943.

In Georgetown County, South Carolina, in a small tract of land running from the Waccamaw River to the sea, is a beautiful garden, unlike any other (we hazard the statement) in the world. It is landscaped with rare skill for the purpose it serves—that of a marvelous display of sculpture—some one hundred twenty pieces—all of which find their natural setting out of doors. Its total area approximates 32,000 square yards. The collection is representative of the history of sculpture in America from the nineteenth century; and while many of the pieces are reductions from the originals, usually in bronze (though here and there in marble), some of them are of life size or larger.

There are excellent half tone cuts of the figures, accompanied by description, interpretation, notes and references, and by brief biographical sketches of the artists. The Introduction to this 500-page volume is a finely conceived essay on the beginnings and development of sculpture in America, to which is appended a bibliography filling several pages, comprising within itself a list which represents a considerable library on American sculptors and their work.

The most widely known are of course represented in the Garden—Augustus Saint-Gaudens, Lorado Taft, Daniel Chester French, Frederick William Mac Monnies, George Gray Barnard, James Earle Fraser, Adolph A. Weinman, Frederick Remington, to mention only a few—and some of these names should be familiar to numismatists because of their connection with coinage designs, and with medals. But there are many others whose work entitles them to a high place among the artists of America, the selection as a whole being of amazing richness—not only in what it contains, but equal credit perhaps is found in what it excludes. Sanity and beauty are dominant notes in this garden by the sea. The book itself is a marvel of condensation; with little effort (comparatively) it could have been expanded to half a dozen volumes. Sent to us for review, it will be available shortly from the A. N. A. Library.

AUSTRALIA CALLS

Will all American friends who have written me and received no acknowledgement of the receipt of their letters kindly re-communicate with me? Many of the mails are not, unfortunately, arriving here.

I would likewise appreciate receiving any information from owners of unusual and rare Australian coins and tokens; and I would be interested in securing copies of booklets, programs and membership lists issued by numismatic societies and clubs in America and elsewhere.

National Gallery,
Adelaide, South Australia.

TWO COMMUNICATIONS

5120 Trans Island Blvd., Montreal.

To the Editor:

An issue of some magnitude to the numismatic world has been revived by a resolution offered by the Rochester Numismatic Association condemning the practice of manufacturing and trading of electrotypes (the reproduction of rare and often valuable coins).

The problem is as grave to the veteran numismatist as it is to the beginner.

Let it be known that no reflection on the intentions or characters of the originators or traders of same is intended by anybody, as they include many of the most respected and honored numismatists. I'm also confident that among them there are a number who are in sympathy with the resolution.

Can it be denied that an electrotype . . . often reflects discredit on our revered genuine coins by the confusion often occasioned by it? The practice is a negation of the art of numismatics which rates highest on its factual merits. Each coin and medal is vested with an actual historical value, and is a true coin-of-the-realm. We, the trustees, should act as their safeguards.

Warner, N. H., Mch. 30, 1943.

To the Editor:

Some time ago there came into my possession what seems to me to be a very rare and unusual item which may be of some interest to others of the "faithful," namely a $3 bill on the Warner (N. H.) Bank. No one among the dealers and collectors so far as I can find has any record of a $3 Warner bill, but I have one. The signatures of Pres. J. H. Ames, Cashier Geo. Jones, dated Jan. 1, 1857, and the No. 387 are all handwritten. The signatures are vouched for by several persons now living: one being Jones' niece, and also by the present manager of the branch bank here.

I have been collecting U. S. coins for 45 years, so am not exactly a novice; therefore I have no idea that the market value is very great, but I have certainly stirred up a lot of local interest with it (and had a lot of fun).

DISTRICT SECRETARY HONORED

At the last meeting of the Pacific Coast Numismatic Society, Mr. Ralph A. Mitchell, District Secretary of the A. N. A. for Northern California, and Past Secretary of the Society, was elected a Fellow of the Society and was presented with an engraved Fellowship certificate. In a very appropriate presentation speech by the President he was praised for his great activities in promoting interesting programs and bringing this numismatic hobby of ours to a higher standard.

"CALL FOR NOMINATIONS"

"In keeping with Article 4 Section 2 of our By-Laws, at this time I have the official privilege of calling for the nominations of our Officers for our coming year. Nominations for any office may be made by any member or by a corporate member. All nominations shall be sent to the General Secretary who shall immediately write the nominees, notifying them of their nomination and requesting their acceptance in writing. If the nominee does not accept the nomination in writing, such a nomination shall not be placed upon the official ballot."

—J. D. FERGUSON, President.

We understand the Michael F. Higgy Collection has been purchased by the Numismatic Gallery, 42 East 50th Street, New York City. Mr. Higgy is President of the Ohio State Numismatic Society, an association of all the local clubs in the state of Ohio.

The collection includes complete series of half cents, large and small cents, and all other denominations up to and including silver dollars; it is rich in U. S. gold, including the stella and $50, and much foreign gold will also be noted, along with our colonials, fractional currency, and patterns. Replete in rarities, the collection is reported as valued at $20,000 and will be catalogued and offered to the public by Mr. A. Kosoff of the Numismatic Gallery.

Stack's sale of March 27 consisted of Part IX of the David Proskey collection, and of the Raymond L. Caldwell numismatic library, the latter with 340 listings. These sold well generally. A complete set of the American Journal of Numismatics, finely bound, brought $200; a complete set of THE NUMISMATIST, unbound, $105. Crosby's "Early Coins of America," $38. The priced catalogue of the Jenks sale was bid in at $16. In the extensive series of ancient Greek and Roman gold and silver, the gem of the sale was lot 463, a decadrachm of Syracuse, by Euainetos, in extremely fine condition; it brought $825. Prices realized for many other lots in this section of the sale indicated an increasing interest in ancient coinages.

DEATH OF WILLIAM E. SURFACE

A victim of a heart attack, William E. Surface of Decatur, Illinois, died on the morning of March 9 at his home two miles south of the city. Had he lived until the 24th of the same month he would have reached his 80th birthday. He had been a resident of that section of the state for 60 years, active in business and civic affairs, and was held in highest esteem in the community. He was formerly a member of the A. N. A. for several years, and a long time advertiser in THE NUMISMATIST, dealing principally in commemorative coins. His death will be sincerely regretted by his many numismatic friends.

CURRENCY PROBLEM WORRIES JAPANESE

President Ferguson has sent the following extract from a Melbourne dispatch; even under the date line of March 22 it is still of interest as the present situation probably shows little change.

After a year of occupation the Japanese authorities in the Netherlands East Indies still are making strenuous efforts to lighten their hold on the financial system of the islands, the Netherlands Indies News Agency reports, but have not made appreciable headway in bringing the Indies economy into line with their so-called "Asiatic co-prosperity sphere."

The Japanese have issued a series of measures aimed at replacing Netherlands currency with their own issues and controlling credits but they have run into resistance by the population, which is hoarding Dutch currency and seeking to invest in tangible property as a hedge against Japanese inflationary currency measures, Aneta says.

Indicative of this trend, the Tokyo radio announced this week that all real estate transactions would be suspended on April 1 by order of the military authorities to "prevent the war situation from causing a panic and speculation."

The Japanese have been seeking to attract funds into savings banks but apparently with little success. Last month the bankers association of Malaya and Sumatra announced an increase in interest rates "in order to encourage savings."

In an effort to centralize currency control the Japanese have ordered liquidation of nearly all important banks in the Indies, except Japanese institutions—the Yokohama Specie Bank in Batavia, the Bank of Taiwan in Batavia, Semarang and Surabaya, the Mitsui Bank in Surabaya, and a small bank in Semarang—and these institutions have been designated by the military authorities as the sole exchange banks.

At present three types of currency are circulating in the Indies—the pre-invasion Netherlands banknotes, Japanese military scrip and so-called "guilder notes" printed in Japan and distributed, without any backing, by the occupation forces in large quantities.

The Japanese aim to force Netherlands currency out of circulation but last month Tokyo radio admitted that "local monies" were still in use and that a changeover to use of military scrip exclusively would have to be made "gradually."

Netherlands financial experts here as quoted by the news agency, say the reasons for the failure of the Japanese to outlaw pre-war currency are threefold.

1. The Japanese have attempted to enforce an artificial value of one yen a guilder, compared with the pre-war valuation of the yen at 44 Netherlands cents.

2. Netherlands authorities encouraged individuals and companies to lay in supplies of currency during the year before the war, in anticipation of some eventuality such as invasion, and it will take time for the Japanese to call in these large amounts of currency which are being hoarded or circulating in regions where the Japanese military forces have not penetrated.

3. Since the population expects liberation in the not-too-distant future it puts greater faith in the original currency than in the Japanese issues, which have no real backing.

THE SOURCE OF LIBERTY

Liberty has never come from the government. Liberty has always come from the subjects of it. The history of liberty is a history of resistance. The history of liberty is a history of limitations of governmental power, not the increase of it.

CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

ALBANY NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—President Sartoris presided, with twenty members present; 124th meeting.

The Storage Cabinet Committee reported installation complete, including our name lettered on the cabinet, also four extra keys at a total cost of $40.89. Keys were distributed to the President, the Librarian, and the Secretary.

The Banquet committee reported arrangements complete for our seventh annual banquet to be held at the Hendrick Hudson Hotel in Troy on May 15th. There will be a guest speaker, a turkey dinner, door prizes, and special entertainment for the ladies. Mr. and Mrs. Williamson will exhibit souvenirs from a trip through the Republic of Panama, and will show color films taken on their trip. The total assessment was set at $2.00 per plate. Mr. Clarence E. Wilber was duly elected to full membership, being the 100th collector to join our society since 1936.

A raffle of a Philippine Commemorative set donated by Mr. Reynolds was held for the benefit of the storage cabinet fund. Proceeds were $10.25. This amount plus numerous voluntary contributions paid for the cabinet in full without recourse to the general funds.

This being the annual meeting, election of officers was held. The following were chosen to serve until April, 1944: President, R. E. Reynolds of Troy; 1st Vice Pres., C. W. Schermerhorn of Albany; 2nd Vice Pres., E. D. Larkin of Round Lake; Sec'y-Treas., W. J. McKinney of Albany.

—Willis J. McKinney, Secretary.

ATLANTA COIN CLUB—April 7. The regular meeting was called to order by President Todd with sixteen members and two visitors present.

Topics for the evening's discussion were Pan-American and Allied Nations' Coins, and National Coin Week.

Mr. Church, of Rich's department store, invited the Club to assist with a coin and paper money exhibit to be held at the store some time in May. It was suggested that coins from all Allied Nations be featured in the display. Mr. Church added that Rich's would give proper display and good publicity to the exhibit.

Exhibits were as follows:

Mr. Johns: 1941 and 1942 proof sets. A large board of uncirculated coins of the world.

Four frames of Pan-American coins made up by Mr. Johns and Mr. Johnson for use by the Club. These frames will be presented to the Carnegie Library during Coin Week and will be part of a permanent exhibit to be maintained there.

It became necessary for our President to appoint an Acting Secretary to carry on in place of Mr. Prickett who has entered the Armed Forces. All present expressed the hope that Mr. Prickett would soon return to carry on the work that he has so ably done as Secretary.

Hopkins and Mr. Robinson had charge of these two projects.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—The 181st regular meeting of the Club was held at Hotel Stowell April 6, 1943, President Adolph Larson, Jr., presiding. Members and guests numbering 30 were present. Announcement was made of the death of Mr. W. E. Surface, a member well known in numismatic circles, and of Mr. Nathan W. Stowell, an aged collector who founded the Stowell Hotel where the club meetings are held.

The club listened to a most interesting and informative address by Vice President Wallace Todd on the coins of Tarentum and Athens. His opening statement that the ancient Greeks possessed the first "One-Man Submarine" was borne out of his fine exhibit of Tarentum coins, depicting Taras riding on a dolphin furnished by his father Neptune for the purpose of rescuing Taras from a shipwreck in the year 708 B. C. The combined physical and spiritual nature of Taras resulted in his founding of the present city of Tarento in Southern Italy, according to ancient legend. The Athenian coins exhibited included some fine examples of the tetradrachm, drachm, obol and almost microscopical divisions of the obol, which latter coins the ancient Greeks were in the habit of carrying in their mouths, a practice referred to by Aristophanes in his play, "Wasps." The Athenian jurors were paid a fee of three obols for their services.

The auction conducted by Pres. Larson was of particular importance since it consisted largely of items taken from the club collection, and Chinese coins from the collection of the late Rev. Edward Thwing.

—Earle K. Stanton, Secretary.

CHICAGO COIN CLUB—The 290th regular monthly meeting of the Club was held at the La Salle Hotel on April 7th. Seventy members and six guests were present, with President Pennington presiding.

President Pennington spoke on National Coin Week. Mr. Rutz told of his visit at the Washington Coin Club meeting and of the scarcity of the new cents in the east. Mr. Powells promised a paper on the Rhodesian coinage for the May meeting.

Dr. Reich then called on the exhibitors to speak on their displays, several responding with very interesting talks.

CINCINNATI NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—The Association held its regular monthly meeting at the Netherland Plaza Hotel, Tuesday evening, April 13, 1943.

This meeting witnessed an interesting double feature consisting first of a talk and exhibition by Mr. Willis Crosswhite, one of the prominent stamp and coin collectors of Cincinnati, and an auction of 156 lots contributed by the members.

Mr. Crosswhite lectured on and exhibited fractional currency, beginning with the 1862 postal currency in both perforated and imperforate condition, and the four issues of imperforate fractional currency running up to 1876. Many tints of paper and various colors of ink, also interesting autographs were included in the exhibit. Mr. Crosswhite also exhibited the suppressed third issue bearing the likenesses of Grant and Sherman, and had his currency mounted in such a way that both the fronts and backs were visible.

The second part of his exhibit was the complete Panama Pacific set of 50 cents silver, $1.00 and $2.50 gold, and the two $50.00 gold slugs, round and octagonal, in brilliant uncirculated condition.

The auction was a very lively one and proved itself to be a feature extremely interesting to the members, and more of them will be held in the future.

ORANGE COUNTY COIN CLUB—

The 47th meeting of the Club was called to order by President Harry Hanson at the Church of the Messiah in Santa Ana. Fifty-seven guests and members were present.

President Hanson announced the closing of the business meeting and in stating that the feature of the evening would take place, requested that the large audience conform itself into the Orientalism of the occasion, thus to more enjoy the treat that was in store. Suddenly, to our amazement and delight came a tall, handsome Chinese, clothed in full Mandarin regalia, bowing to right and left with hands in sleeves, approached the rostrum, and with no facial display of emotion, seated himself amid the plaudits of the members.

Mr. Howard Robinson, acting chairman of the program committee then proceeded to introduce, in well-chosen words of praise, the eminent professor Hi Lung Lee, noted Chinese scholar.

Professor Lee carried with him a number of Chinese works of art depicting life in the Orient, ancient life in the Chinese Empire, illustrating the same with the paintings; followed by modern conditions before the war, and finally came the old treadmill scene showing the primitive method of minting coins. Each statement was translated for us by President Hanson in terse and concise English, and caused no end of surprise and humor.

Among the many interesting statements Professor Lee made was the fact that for over 2500 years the Chinese had used the same term "cash," on their coins, and while they were circular in form, as are the modern, yet throughout all these centuries the square hole in the center of the coin was found. This, he stated, was a symbol of honesty and fair dealing, and emphasized this as being a national trait.

Professor Lee displayed a most interesting and valuable collection of Chinese coins from the "Buckle-money" of 2000 B. C. down through the key, knife, fork, and bridge money, including the beautiful commemorative silver dollars and other of their modern coins.

After a most instructive and entertaining half hour, questions were thrown at Professor Lee, all being translated by President Hanson, which were in true Chinese form carefully answered, but when he was asked if any of the artistic paintings were for sale, he replied in the negative. However, a furor arose and upon a semblance of order was had, President Hanson succeeded in procuring the willingness of Professor Lee to say that, considering the enthusiasm shown, he would donate the entire collection, to be sold, and the proceeds to be given the China-Relief and Red Cross. Professor Lee then proceeded to auction these treasures, and there never was a more spirited bidding in any coin club. Professor Lee's Chinese-English was greatly enjoyed.

Old time collectors stated that they had never experienced a more novel and entertaining evening, and as such great credit should be given the Orange County Coin Club for the treat so much enjoyed.

—C. Glen Curtis, Secretary.

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

The 71st meeting of the Society was held Monday evening, April 12, 1943, at the Benson Hotel in Portland, with 22 members and two guests in attendance, President Bibler presiding.

Among the correspondence received by members during the past month was a most interesting letter addressed to Geo. Pipes from Mr. J. Hunt Deacon of Adelaide, South Australia. Mr. Deacon has been an active numismatist for many years and is at present District Secretary of the A. N. A. for Australia. Those present were much interested when this letter was read. It seems Mr. Deacon speaks the same numismatic language we all do, and this coupled with a friendly desire to become better acquainted, should provide the common meeting ground on which to build a pleasant and lasting friendship.

President Bibler told those present not to forget to check the coins that daily come into our possession. Ben Cook, our fellow member, is the latest to make a "find," a 1918 over 1917 S Quarter.

Dr. Firth next gave an interesting talk on Chinese coins, quoting at some length from J. Stewart Lockhart. Of particular interest were the classifications of Chinese coins made at the time of the Sun Dynasty. According to Dr. Firth the Chinese had money as early as 2953 B. C. and as early as 2838 B. C. a central mart for the purpose of bartering silk, metal, grain, jade, pearls, etc. It would seem that for the most part trade was carried on by barter and only in times of great emergency, such as a drought, did metallic money circulate. Possibly the best known, today, of this early Chinese money is the knife money used as early as 2898 B. C. In connection with National Coin Week, Dr. Firth's display of Chinese money at one of our local banks has aroused much interest.

Hugh Davenport's story of the esteem in which the Chinese hold General and Madame Chiang Kai-shek and those Americans who are helping to fight the Japs was enlightening. Another interesting point is that no hard money is being circulated in China: it is all paper.

Hugh Davenport's display of the Chinese collection of his son, Captain Dean Davenport, was adjudged the most interesting of the evening. The outstanding items were a set of hand wrought silverware engraved with Chinese characters, and a silk historical banner which is awarded to those who have rendered China outstanding service; the Chinese wording on the banner giving the date, the name of the person and the service rendered.

Other members having displays were: Henry Perry—with many new uncirculated U. S. coins—came in for second prize, while Bill Conger's Chinese Money drew honorable mention. Geo. Pipes, Felix Baronovich, Leonard Trythall and Stanley Seabolt all had varied and interesting items on display.

An outstanding display was also made by Steve Bibler for Mr. J. C. McDermott of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, who very generously sent his collection of U. S. Cents to be shown at our meeting; a fine collection and most complete.

The meeting was then adjourned for an auction, with Hugh Davenport conducting.

—John R. Slusher, Secretary.

PACIFIC COAST NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—227th meeting, with 31 members and eight guests present; President M. M. Morris, Jr., presiding.

The Secretary read a letter from Mr. James Hunt Deacon, Adelaide, South Australia, in which he stated that the communications notifying their election to Honorary and Associate membership respectively were not received and that he was afraid the mail was lost through enemy action. The Secretary was instructed to act in this matter.

A letter was read from Roy Hill, Counselor of the S. F. Junior Coin Collectors, in which he stated that the activities of the Junior Club have practically ceased as all the officers and most of their members have entered the armed forces of the U. S. He also reported that their former Secretary, 2nd Lt. Salz, was killed in action in Africa. A silent tribute was offered and the Secretary was instructed to write a letter to that effect to Mrs. Salz. A motion was made to invite the Junior Coin Collectors to our meetings for the duration.

The program of the evening consisted of a talk by E. A. Parker on the nickel issues of the U. S. Mr. Morris gave an actual demonstration of Coin Rejectors in different slot machines. Mr. Wilson talked on Augsburg Medals, and Mr. Kraft on Siege pieces of Germany. The Secretary outlined the history of the German Empire and Republic and talked on the coinage of German money, especially on the commemorative issues. Mr. Lenker remarked on the New Canadian 5 cent piece, followed by another talk by the Secretary on German porcelain money.

The displays of the evening consisted of U. S. nickels by E. A. Parker, Augsburg medals by Mr. Wilson, siege pieces of Germany by Mr. Werling, a most complete collection of the 20th century issues of Germany and an elaborate collection of about 500 pieces of German porcelain tokens by Mr. Mitchell, and many smaller displays by different members.

—Edward Fogler, Secretary.

PHILADELPHIA COIN CLUB—The 94th meeting of the Club began with our Semi-Annual Banquet in the Garden Terrace of The Benjamin Franklin Hotel. We were entertained following the dinner by an interesting show, The Ice Parade of 1943, on real ice.

The regular meeting was called to order by President Havens with 42 members and guests present.

Mr. Reed, the curator, announced that as a part of our contribution to the commemoration of the Sesqui-Centennial of the cent, Judge Gaskill will exhibit in his store case eleven very choice 1793 cents.

The exhibits of the evening were as follows:

Mr. Enburg: A medal of David Ritzenhouse, the first director of the U. S. Mint in Philadelphia.

Mr. Vanderwende: A book table of English silver coins dated 1745; two medals of President Roosevelt's 3rd term inaugural. He also displayed the April, 1941, issue of The Numismatist in which appeared an article on this medal.

Mr. Reed: A choice collection of large cents, including excellent specimens of the 1799 and 1804 issues.

Mr. Bechtel: Assay medals of various types.

Mr. Vanderwende's exhibits won the vote of the evening.

Mr. Ballard had the Secretary read several letters commenting on our News Letter; one from A. H. Leatherman who has been ill, and one from Corp. G. W. Magee, Jr., from somewhere in Africa. Mr. Wismer had sent in a letter enclosing two bills to be auctioned for the benefit of the Club.

President Havens appointed the following committee to select some book of numismatic value each month for the Free Library of Philadelphia to purchase: Messrs. Farley, Ballard and Sipe.

Mr. Vanderwende furnished them a copy of the list of numismatic books available in the Congressional Library at Washington.

Judge Gaskill presented a very interesting and informative paper on some recent research work done regarding the first U. S. Mint in Philadelphia, and the 1793 cents.

An auction closed the meeting.

RACINE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—

The Sixty-first meeting, April 9th, 1943, Vice President Arthur E. Jones presiding, held at the Y. M. C. A.

Fifteen members and one visitor were present.

The Banquet committee, headed by co-chairmen John Carls and Rev. A. G. Weiler, announced that all plans were completed for the annual dinner at the Knights of Columbus Hall. The date set is Thursday April 29th at 7:00 P. M. An important feature of the affair is to be an afternoon exhibit of coins, open to the general public. The banquet is to be considered as a part of the Society's participation in the National Coin Week program.

R. S. Yeoman gave a brief account of the Solomon Islands Occupational Currency and displayed notes of half shilling, one shilling, ten shilling and one pound denominations. An interesting five franc note, Bank of Indo-China, acquired from captured Japanese on Guadalcanal, was included in the exhibit.

Louis Wilczynski exhibited gold pieces as follows: 1756 ½ Rouble, Elizabeth, 1779 Rouble, Catherine II, 1777 ½ Rouble, Catherine II, Russian gold; 1839 2 Zloty, 30 Kopecka, Russian; Polish piece.

An auction was held following adjournment.

—R. S. Yeoman, Secretary.

RICHMOND COIN CLUB—

The twenty-sixth meeting of the Club was held on Wednesday, April 14, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Lewis, with President Howe presiding. There were 10 members present.

Miss Campbell reported on the meeting of the Byrd Park Club Association and told of the improvements to be made, suggesting that we get together books for one of the shelves in order to create some further interest in Numismatics among the other Clubs and members of the armed forces who use the Club House.

Attention was called to the fact that the Public Library here is practically devoid of books on Numismatics. It was decided the Club will present one of the Wayne Raymond publications to start a shelf, and ask for others to be placed by the Library and individuals.

Mr. Howe presented each member present with one of the new 1943 D Lincoln Cents, which were received with appreciation.

The meeting was then turned over to Mr. Lewis, who displayed a valuable and comprehensive collection of English crowns from Edward VI to the present; gold, and smaller denominations represented by types; crown size coins of a number of colonies and dominions. North, Central and South American countries represented by dollar size coinage, besides many other overseas nations. In addition, there were some ancient Greek and Roman, with a substantial number of silver and bronze medals.

—Mrs. Helen G. Lewis, Secretary.

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—

The 80th meeting was called to order by Pres. Worth in the Y. M. C. A. Bldg., on March 25, 1943, with 10 members and 5 visitors present.

The subject of coin auctions was taken up and discussed at considerable length, with a view of promoting more interest among both old and prospective members, in our meetings. A short auction of four lots, donated by various members, was a surprise event and well received. The Club then took action to hold an auction of six donated lots next meeting, with the intention soon of having auctions as a regular part of the evening's program. Mr. Glickert was elected auctioneer.

Owing to the absence of the main speaker of the evening, short discourses were made by various members, highlighted by unusually good extemporaneous talks by Mr. Wagner and Mr. LaMore.

These exhibits were shown:

Mr. Wagner and Mr. Saeman: Unusually nice displays of Colonial pieces, and a fine assortment of Lincoln and Washington medals.

Mr. Glickert: Set of Liberty Head nickels in Unc. and Proof condition.

Type sets and pieces are to be the main attraction at the next meeting. —Henry H. Zeckser, Secretary.

WASHINGTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The Society held its monthly meeting at the Women's City Club, 736 Jackson Place N. W., Washington, D. C., on Monday evening, April 5, 1943, with 14 members and five guests present.

The program included an auction sale, with Mr. McCormick assisting as auctioneer. Mr. John Zug and Mr. Frank Petrlik, of the auction committee, were in charge. Sales totaled $38.95. The Society realized a commission of $1.85. A door prize, two small coins presented by Mr. Douglass, was awarded to Mr. McCormick.

A short report on the investigation of the effort being made by the District of Columbia tax authorities to levy a personal property tax on coin and stamp collections was made by Mr. Permoda and Mr. Leachman. Mr. Leachman said he had been in touch with philatelic organizations and that they were ready to cooperate in a move to meet the tax threat. He also read a letter from Representative Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, in which the Congressman suggested that it was a reasonable tax and that stamp collections, as a rule, are subject to taxation throughout the United States. Commenting on the letter, several members expressed the opinion that the Congressman was in error. Mr. Leachman said his committee would arrange a joint meeting with philatelists and try to obtain a further hearing before Representative Randolph. Mr. Permoda suggested that a letter on the matter also be written to Senator McCarran, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

President Leachman reported that a meeting of the Board of Governors had been called to consider a proposal to join with a number of Washington philatelic organizations in obtaining a permanent meeting place. A report on this will be made at the next meeting.

Capt. Joseph Moss exhibited two interesting Tunisian gold coins. Several notes used by the U. S. forces in Hawaii and North Africa were shown by Mr. Leachman.

—N. Key Hart, Secretary.

ORIGIN OF MOTTO "IN GOD WE TRUST"

We have received from Horace M. Grant (A. N. A. No. 2239) of Providence, R. I., a clipping from The Evening Bulletin of March 23, which will be of interest to collectors. Strangely enough, there seems to have been little discussion of the origin of this motto in former issues of The Numismatist, although the date of its adoption, its temporary omission from the Saint-Gaudens gold of 1907, etc., have had a good bit of attention. The partial extract follows:

"Did you know that the United States Government adopted Brown University's motto for the inscription on its coins and not vice-versa, and if you did, Miss Maude B. Nichols of 72 Kenyon Avenue, Wakefield, will challenge you to relate how it happened.

"In doing background research for her coin collection, Miss Nichols came across that bit of knowledge which she considers a valuable addendum to her hobby. Miss Nichols, recorder at Rhode Island State College, was especially interested in the fact since she is a graduate of Pembroke College.

"Credit for the adoption of the coin inscription 'In God We Trust' goes to Salmon P. Chase, famous Secretary of the Treasury during the Lincoln Administration. In paying a visit to his father-in-law, Civil War Governor Sprague of Rhode Island, Chase noticed the Latin version of the motto and the university seal on an honorary M. A. degree awarded by Brown to the Governor.

"It appealed to him as particularly appropriate and in 1864 its use on coins was legalized. Spurning the academic Latin, Chase proposed its English translation for a coin inscription."

Last Month—

I published here a letter from Mrs. Voetter in which she stated that:—

"I am more than pleased with the result of the Sale. It brought more than my highest expectations,"--

And now, here is the gist of a letter from Mr. Elrod, whose Collection I sold in March:—

"Your report of the Sale came in some days earlier than I expected it.

I could hardly believe my eyes when I saw the size of your check! So it is needless for me to say that I am more than pleased with the results of your efforts to pull off a successful Sale for me."

For forty-three years I have been rendering just such successful service to the Collectors of America. The same profitable service is at your command. Don't you think I deserve—and that you owe it to yourself—to write me before you place your Collection for Sale?

ELECTION MEDALS OF THE CAMPAIGN OF 1844

By DOYLE DeWITT, Bloomfield, Connecticut

Today as we are engaged in a mighty war effort for the preservation of our country and its institutions, is it not incumbent upon us to carefully calculate the real worth of the prize for which we are fighting? For can there be any doubt that our recognition of the true value of what we would lose, would in itself clearly and completely establish the necessity for victory? In any such calculation it becomes apparent immediately that our most cherished possession is the framework of political rights and privileges under which we live. But in our evaluation of these rights, what is their inherent quality that makes them so precious? Is it not the quality of experience, of evolution? Is it not the fact that we recognize that the benefits we are privileged to enjoy and have come to expect were not created full blown but rather are the product of decades of political struggle, conflict, compromise and achievement? The greater our recognition and appreciation of this fact, the greater our resolve not to lose them. Thus, it seems to me to be particularly timely and appropriate that we attempt through the medium of our common interest in Numismatics to review or re-enact some of the colorful events from our history pages that have contributed to the present political structure we seek to perpetuate.

For several years it has been my fascinating quest to collect the ephemeral emblems of our political campaigns. The tokens, medals, ribbands, badges, buttons and such are the remaining tangible evidence of the weapons used by the warriors of the conflicts. It has ever been my aim to attempt to inform myself as to the particular significance or purpose of publication of each such piece. Thus, throughout the years, I have accumulated various memoranda and notes concerning pieces in my collection and such other pieces as have come to my attention. While these notes have been compiled for my own edification and pleasure, I am glad to present to you those covering one of the many important political struggles in our history.

So, in this year of war, as we approach the time for our next presidential canvass, let us turn back the pages of history to a century ago and review the colorful and, in many respects, unique campaign of 1844.

The Issues of the Campaign

To begin with, the issue which won the campaign was to embroil the country in war before the victor relinquished the presidential chair.

And it was in this campaign that the first "dark horse" candidate emerged on the political horizon. The novelty of such a phenomenon was equalled only by its seeming absurdity. A virtual unknown was to vie with one of the most famous public men in all history for the presidential prize. Yet when the ballots were counted, the "long shot" crossed the finish line ahead of the "favorite" and—history raced onward!

And in this campaign, still another man carved his tiny but unique notch in the American political log by being the first to refuse the accredited nomination of his party for a place on the national ticket.

And curiously enough, three of the four national conventions were held in the same city, and two of them on the same day. And the proceedings of one was reported for the first time by the new electric telegraph.

But in order that we may more clearly comprehend the struggle as it is portrayed by the tokens, it is necessary that we sketch its outline and the role of the principal contestants.

John Tyler

John Tyler was in the "President's House"—the first Vice President to succeed to the presidency by the death of an American president. With a boisterous and mighty effort the Whigs had overthrown Jacksonian democracy in 1840. "Tippecanoe and Tyler Too." Alas, recollection of that inspiring battle cry of 1840 now filled many an ardent Whig with remorse and bitter indignation. Old "Tippecanoe" had succumbed thirty-one days after his inauguration and Tyler after coming to power, had been "false to his country, false to his friends, false to himself" and had been anything but a Whig president. Hadn't he greeted the new Whig congress, "eager for reform," with a "shower of vetoes?" Hadn't practically all of Harrison's Whig cabinet resigned in a body declaring that "all political connection between them and John Tyler was at an end from that day forth?" Whig indignation meetings and burnings in effigy of Tyler were the order of the day. Yes, unquestionably he was eliminated as a Whig candidate in 1844, and the Democrats had a famous candidate of their own. However, in Baltimore on May 27, 1844, while the Democrats were assembled in convention in another part of the city, an abortive convention composed mostly of Whig and Democratic officeholders did meet and "with extraordinary unanimity" nominate Tyler for the presidency. He accepted their nomination but soon withdrew and threw his support to the Democratic ticket. Thus one of the important pre-convention figures fades from the scene.

So far as I know, there were no tokens struck in connection with his "candidacy" in 1844.

Henry Clay

But the apostasy of Tyler did not leave the Whigs without a candidate. Far from it. At Lexington, Kentucky, the venerable but imperious Clay was eager for the race. Yea verily, here was a tried and true Whig! Unsuccessful candidate in the contest of 1824 whereby he became the "victim" of slanderous charges that he had "struck a bargain" with Adams; again, the intrepid but unavailing standard bearer who had challenged the mighty Jackson in 1832; again, "jockeyed" out of the nomination by Harrison's managers in 1840; author of more legislation than any living man; now at 67, the idol of the Whig masses was to receive the prize. Indeed, this was a matter of "justice to Henry Clay." Too impatient to wait for the call of a national convention, various Whig state delegations brought forth his name as early as April of 1842. At Dayton, Ohio, one hundred thousand people assembled at a Whig gathering to hear him speak and to adopt resolutions naming him as the Whig candidate for president.

When finally the Whig National Convention met at the old Universalist Church on Calvert Street in Baltimore on May 1, 1844, the nomination of Clay required no ballot. It was made by the thunderous acclamation of the delegates—"Men of snow-white heads, mounted on chairs on which they had been seated, to aid the chorus, and wave their hats and kerchiefs, and then sat down to weep, while stouter hearts sustained the long-protracted shout." Every Baltimore street was "alive with people, hurrying to and from the depots, crowding the sidewalks, clustering around the hotels, chattering, laughing, huzzaing. Clay badges hang conspicuously at all buttonholes; Clay portraits, Clay banners, Clay ribands, Clay songs, Clay quicksteps, Clay marches, Clay caricatures, meet the eye in all directions."

After nominating Theodore Frelinghuysen, chancellor of the University of New York, for vice president, the convention adjourned until the next day, May 2nd, for the "ratifying exercises" of the Young Men's Whig Convention and to witness and participate in the "greatest procession of the age."

As the campaign progressed and probably to a great extent because of the connections of Frelinghuysen, the Native American party which had been reorganized in New York in 1843 and was to spread to New Jersey and Pennsylvania during the campaign, allied itself to the Whig ticket. Frelinghuysen, "The Christian Statesman," was an alleged rabid anti-Catholic. Of him the following was published by a Catholic editor during the campaign: "Mr. Frelinghuysen is not only a Whig in the worst sense of the term, but he is also the very impersonation of narrow-minded, ignorant, conceited bigotry * * *. He concentrates in himself the whole spirit of 'Native Americanism' and 'No Popery' which displayed itself so brilliantly in the recent burnings of Catholic dwellings, seminaries and churches, in the City of Philadelphia."

Throughout the campaign, Clay was greeted with extravagant demonstrations of affection. Practically every known device was utilized to further his cause. Thus his campaign of 1844 provides one of the most prolific sources for collectors of political tokens.

Martin Van Buren

After the Log Cabin and Hard Cider Campaign of 1840, Van Buren attributed his defeat to having been "lied down, drunk down, sung down." However, as the 1844 campaign approached, "The Little Magician" was far from "down" and was the logical and destined candidate of the Democratic party. An ex-president, seeking vindication for his 1840 defeat, he was probably the greatest available exponent of Jacksonian democracy alive. But it was not to be! His public letter questioning the constitutionality of annexing Texas by treaty cost him the nomination. The ardent annexionists of whom there were many in the Democratic party wanted a president who would "go to the extreme in insuring the acquisition of Texas."

When the Democratic National Convention met in the Odd Fellows Lodge Hall in Baltimore on May 27, 1844, a majority of the delegates were pledged to Van Buren. On the first ballot he had twelve more than a majority, but his cause was futile. The convention, following the practice of Democratic conventions from Jackson to Franklin Roosevelt, was operating under the two-thirds rule and he lacked and was never to get the twenty-six votes necessary to constitute the two-thirds and the convention passed on to another man. Thus "The Red Fox" ran second to a "dark horse." Inasmuch as his campaign did not progress beyond the convention, there were no tokens struck for him in the 1844 campaign, so far as I have knowledge.

James K. Polk

"Who is Polk?" was the derisive cry of the Whigs after the choice of the Democratic Convention had become known. Although Polk had held public office for the greater part of twenty years, he was a virtual unknown in 1844, due in great part to two successive defeats in 1841 and 1843 for the governorship of Tennessee. His personality and views were mysteries to the public. His "availability" for the vice presidential nomination had been intimated at the convention in 1840 and was asserted again in 1844.

After the eighth ballot had been taken at the Democratic Convention with no result, considerable hard feeling was developing between the supporters of Van Buren and his chief competitor, General Lewis Cass of Michigan. At that instant an unheard of event occurred. Whether it was spontaneous or prearranged has been the subject of controversy ever since. A delegate instructed for Van Buren arose and switched his vote to Polk with the shout that Polk was "the bosom friend of General Jackson, and a pure, whole-hogged Democrat." The first convention stampede soon began to move. At the conclusion of the ninth ballot every vote was recorded for Polk and the first "dark horse" was the winner.

In the balloting that followed, Senator Silas Wright of New York was given second place on the ticket which he peremptorily declined because of what he felt was shabby treatment of Van Buren. The convention then nominated George M. Dallas of Pennsylvania for vice president.

As if not satisfied with the unique and unanticipated results of their efforts in the selection of the ticket, the delegates reached an all time peak of platform incongruity by adopting the following plank expressing their sentiments concerning their defeat in the medallically rich Log Cabin and Hard Cider Campaign of 1840: "Resolved, that the American Democracy place their trust, not in factitious symbols, not in displays and appeals insulting to the judgment and subversive of the intellect of the people, but in a clear reliance upon the intelligence, patriotism and the discriminating justice of the American people."

As anticipated by the delegates who refused Van Buren, Polk promptly declared himself in favor of the annexation of Texas. It was his principal campaign issue but paradoxically enough it was practically accomplished by President Tyler before inauguration day. Polk carried the pivotal states of New York and Pennsylvania but lost his home state of Tennessee to the great consternation of the dying Jackson.

Despite the lack of trust "in factitious symbols" expressed by the platform, a number of election tokens, ribands and banners were issued in behalf of Polk and Dallas.

James G. Birney

"The abolition vote lost you the election," wrote Ambrose Spencer of New York to Clay after election, "as three-fourths of them were firm Whigs converted into Abolitionists." In August 1843, the Abolitionists, who had formed the Liberty party, assembled in "national" convention at Buffalo. Only one hundred and forty-eight delegates were present, from twelve states. They nominated James Gillespie Birney of New York for president and Thomas Morris of Ohio for vice president. Birney, born in Kentucky, was a conscientious anti-slaver who had emancipated his own slaves. Publisher of an anti-slavery newspaper in Kentucky and Ohio, his presses had been destroyed by mobs. As secretary of the American Anti-Slavery Society, his goal was to build a political party solely on that issue. Following Clay's ill-fated "Alabama" letters straddling the Texas question, written during the summer of 1844, Whig managers in New York reported serious defections of anti-slavery Whigs to the Liberty party. Again and again, Clay tried to explain away the effect of his letters but the damage had been done. When the New York votes were counted, Birney had received 15,812 and Polk had a majority over Clay of only 5,080 votes. Thus Birney's candidacy was to change the result of the election and have its effect upon the course of history for decades.

In retrospect, appropriate as it would seem that Birney's cause in 1844 should have been commemorated with an election token, none has ever been reported to my knowledge.

Explanatory Note: In the classification of election or political tokens, the list (incomplete as it is) most commonly referred to is that of Alfred H. Satterlee of New York, contained in a pamphlet he published in 1862 entitled "An Arrangement of Medals and Tokens Struck in Honor of the Presidents of the United States and of the Presidential Candidates from the Administration of John Adams to that of Abraham Lincoln—Inclusive." So, wherever possible, I have indicated the number given to the token by Satterlee.

The sizes I have indicated in millimeters. If the token is in my collection, I have given its size, although I have occasionally found this size at variance with the size of another copy of the same token reported from other sources. If the token is not in my collection, I have designated the size as seems to be mostly commonly reported, although again there exists the same variance in some instances.

One of the most perplexing and difficult tasks for the student of these tokens is the attempt to attribute them to the proper campaign or period, when they are undated and when the candidate participated in more than one campaign, such as Clay who was involved in several. To those who are interested, I have appended a list of the few Clay election tokens listed by Satterlee that I have attributed to other campaigns, together with a short statement of my reasons therefor.

"MIND YOUR BUSINESS"

Being a Story of the First Authorized American Coin, the "Fugio" Cent

By RAYMOND B. COX, Boston, Mass.

(The origin of this brief article is interesting. Some years ago Mr. Cox, who is President of the Webster and Atlas National Bank of Boston, casting about for a novel idea for Christmas gifts, secured a number of specimens of the famous Fugio cent and forwarded them, with the accompanying sketch, to certain of his friends. He believes (rightly) that it might supplement Mr. Reagan's fine article in the March issue of The Numismatist.—Ed.)

At every turn in our daily life we can, if we look, find evidences of the foresight, wisdom and soundness of the founders of this Republic. When we see how our leaders today are groping around, and when we realize the chaotic conditions existing at the close of the Revolutionary War, the task of the leaders of that day appears stupendous. It is almost inconceivable that they should have seen through the maze and the obscure future so clearly and keenly, as many of their monuments indicate. We just take for granted the principles which they established as foundation stones in our social and economic life, but it is these very foundations which are still our main support.

Little is known of the earnestness and enegery with which they tackled their problems. The leaders not only had to work out the best form of government and national policies, but they had to educate a widely scattered, untutored, loosely allied people, along the lines in which they were endeavoring to develop the new country. There are many evidences of their ingenuity and resourcefulness in these activities. The tactics of some of the modern publicity and advertising specialists are not as new as they may appear to be.

After the Revolution, monetary conditions were chaotic. Some of the states had currency and coinage of their own. It became necessary to establish a national medium of exchange, and it was highly important to relieve the citizens of the pressing necessity of an ample supply of small coin (a few cents in those days would purchase something), eliminating from circulation the vast amount of light weight or spurious coppers then current.

On April 21, 1787, a congressional committee made a report in favor of the coinage of copper, and accordingly, a contract was entered into with a Mr. James Jarvis to coin for the national treasury three hundred tons of copper. The committee immediately conceived that this coinage also might be an excellent means of education, and it was decided to imprint upon the coins one or more messages which would be helpful to the people. One can imagine the extensive deliberations and discussions which must have centered around the choice of those messages.

Their final selection is most interesting and impressive, and conveyed three thoughts which, to some extent, have been lost sight of, but which all public and private citizens could well have in mind today. The three thoughts are, first, as a nation "We Are One"; second, Fugio, or "Time Is Flying" and, therefore, should not be wasted; and third, the most conspicuous of all, printed in bold English on the bottom of the coin:

"MIND YOUR BUSINESS."

The official specifications of the coin were as follows: "On one side of which piece * * * thirteen circles linked together, a small circle in the middle, with the words 'United States' around it; and in the center 'We Are One'; on the other side of the same piece the following device, viz., a dial with the hours expressed on the face of it; a meridian sun above, on one side of which is to be the word 'Fugio' and on the other the year '1787'; below the dial, the words 'Mind Your Business.'"

The committee probably considered the expression "Mind Your Own Business," but abbreviated because of lack of space on the coin. How helpful it would be if we still had as a national motto this century-old adage, which is as important today as it ever was, and which was used by the very founders of the Republic as one of the policies to be emphasized in developing the new country.

PRICELESS INGREDIENTS

By singleness of purpose, by steadfastness of conduct, by tenacity and endurance such as we have so far displayed—by these and only by these can we discharge our duty to the future of the world and to the destiny of man.

CHATEAU DE RAMEZAY—MONTREAL

THE ANTIQUARIAN AND NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF MONTREAL

By VICTOR MORIN, LL.D., its President
Member of the American Numismatic Association

Three friends interested in numismatics used to meet at their respective residences in Montreal eighty odd years ago in order to talk of their hobby and to communicate to one another their recent acquisitions.

They were: Adelard J. Boucher, music editor and merchant, residing at No. 360 Lagauchetiere Street; Stanley C. Bagg, land owner, residing at No. 87 Sherbrooke Street; and Joseph A. Manseau, a clerk at Mr. Boucher's store, living with him on Lagauchetiere Street. It was customary, at that time, for employers to give their employees board and shelter in their houses as a portion of their salaries, and this afforded to Boucher and Manseau numerous occasions of talking numismatics. The names of these three pioneers have been preserved as founders of The Antiquarian and Numismatic Society of Montreal on a bronze coin struck in 1887 in commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the foundation of that society; it is catalogued under No. 1613 in Leroux's Canadian Coin Cabinet.

The Foundation

They naturally spoke of their pursuits with other friends, and, having interested a certain number of them to attend their meetings, they decided to form an association, which was founded with twenty charter members on the 9th of December 1862, under the name of "Société Numismatique de Montreal." They immediately adopted as a seal the Canadian piece of one cent bearing the head of Queen Victoria, and the inscription "Victoria, Dei Gratia, Regina, Canada," surrounded with a band bearing the name of the Society.

FIRST SEAL

SECOND SEAL

The first aim of the Association as constituted was not only the study of numismatics, but also to assemble a numismatic collection and a library for the use of its members. The Constitution was printed in French and English, providing for annual dues of $1.00 per member, or a unique fee of $10 to qualify as Life Member. Ten years later, the classification of Life Governor was created, requiring the payment of a fee of $100, and last year we decided to inscribe the names of our Benefactors on a memorial tablet erected in the hall of the Society's building, the qualification thereof being a gift of $1000 or more.

Archaeological Studies Added

It was soon found however, that the activities of the Society could be better served by enlarging its field into archaeological studies, and, as early as 1866, a new Constitution was adopted stating that: "Henceforth the Society will bear the name of "The Numismatic and Antiquarian Society of Montreal," and a new seal was adopted representing an Indian tomahawk and a calumet crossed in saltire with a Roman lamp in chief; a Greek coin on the dexter side, a Canadian coin on the sinister and a beaver in point. In the course of the years, archaeological researches commanded more importance than numismatics, and the name was again changed, to that of "The Antiquarian and Numismatic Society of Montreal," which it bears up to this time.

Publication of a Magazine

In order to extend to the general public the knowledge of the activities of the Society, an official organ was founded in 1872 under the name of The Canadian Antiquarian and Numismatic Journal. This publication proved to be one of the most interesting in archaeological history and numismatic science, but unfortunately the financial resources of the Society caused its suspension at different intervals, to be resumed later when its budget so permitted, so that the complete file includes four series: the first one extending from 1872 to 1886; the second series starting in 1889 and continuing until 1894; the third one commencing in 1897 and continuing to 1916, when it suspended owing to the necessities of the World War; the fourth series began in 1930 but was suspended in 1933, and the Society has been unable to resume its publication since. Shall we ever be able to revive it after the present war? God only knows, and He knows also that poverty is no sin!

Exhibitions

One of the earliest and most important activities outside of this publication was manifested in 1877 when the Society organized the celebration of the Fourth Centenary of the Art of Printing in England by William Caxton. An interesting exhibition of incunabula, manuscripts and other documents connected with the Printing Art took place during four days, exhibiting 2500 documents and rare books loaned by the public; a catalogue thereof was printed, and is eagerly sought by book collectors.

MEDAL COMMEMORATING THE SOCIETY'S 25TH ANNIVERSARY

Ten years later, on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the Society, an exhibition of historical portraits loaned by citizens of Montreal was organized in the Natural History Society's Museum, and lasted from the 16th to the 22nd of December, 1887. Its success gave rise to the idea of getting together a permanent gallery of historical portraits, which was realized later as part of the Society's Museum in the Chateau de Ramezay; its inauguration was held on the 17th of April, 1894.

Historical Celebrations

On the occasion of the 250th anniversary of the foundation of Montreal, The Antiquarian and Numismatic Society took the lead of the erection of a monument to Paul de Chomedey de Maisonneuve, the founder of Montreal, which now stands as a landmark of honor in the center of Place d'Armes Square, in the heart of the financial district of our city. La Société Historique de Montréal did its part on this occasion by erecting an obelisk on Place Royale that recalls the foundation of the city the 18th of May, 1642, and pays a deserved tribute of gratitude to the 53 pioneers, men and women, who shared with Maisonneuve and Jeanne Mance the honor of being the founders of the metropolis of Canada.

Another important initiative was created by the Society in installing, on the historical spots of Montreal, marble tablets subscribed by eminent citizens in order to recall the historical facts connected with the development of the city. These tablets are to be seen principally in the older portion of the city where the first events of its career took place.

Installation in the Chateau de Ramezay

But up to that time, The Antiquarian and Numismatic Society had no definite place of meeting. It received alternately the hospitality of Mechanic's Hall and of the Natural History Society's Museum until 1893, when the Government of the Province of Quebec, which owned the historic building erected in 1705 by Claude de Ramezay, a Governor of this city under the French regime, decided to sell it at auction after having made a subdivision thereof in building lots, which would have entailed the demolition of that characteristic old building. The Antiquarian and Numismatic Society organized meetings of protest and petitions to the City Council, and finally decided later to buy the noble property and to give a lease thereof to the Society for a nominal rental on the condition that a Museum of Canadian History be installed therein.

This occupation as a tenant continued until 1929, when the City Council was induced to grant a free title thereof to The Antiquarian and Numismatic Society in view of providing for the maintenance of the Historical Museum therein contained. Immediately we caused the Chateau de Ramezay to be "classed" by the Historical Monuments Commission as a "national relic" of Canadian interest, so that it is now out of the reach of those who were anxious, at repeated intervals, to "rip down that ugly old fashioned house" without any respect for its historical associations.

One of the Benefactors of the Society, Mr. Henry G. Tiffin, had made it a gift of valuable books, paintings, medals, documents and other works of art as a start for a public library, conveyed by deed of gift dated the 15th of October, 1897. As there was no civic library at that time, and whereas the Municipal Library was founded later in 1915 by the City Council, the Society placed the Tiffin library at its disposal to be used by the public, in harmony with the purpose of the donor, in part exchange for the gift of the Chateau de Ramezay.

Our Numismatic Collection

Another most important feature is the numismatic collection displayed by the Society in its Coin Room. It was started by our founders and gradually increased until 1922, when it was considerably enlarged by the purchase, at a favorable price, of the precious numismatic collection assembled by Robert W. McLachlan during a lifetime, as appears by a deed dated the 19th of October, 1922. This collection, as it stands today, is reputed to be the most important collection of "Canadiana" in existence.

Collectors interested in Canadian numismatics will surely be pleased to learn that it possesses amongst its treasures:

(a) A complete collection of Canadian coins and medals as described in Leroux and Breton's numismatic catalogues;

(b) A complete collection of Indian Chiefs' and of Indian Treaties medals as described in Morin's catalogues of these subjects, except the Spanish and American pieces;

(c) An unusually large collection of active and broken Canadian Bank bills, including the denominations of $1.00 up to $7.00 that such banks were authorized to issue at one time but which were later discontinued;

(d) An almost complete collection of Military War medals of Canadian interest;

(e) A very large collection of historical medals and tablets struck to commemorate Canadian events;

(f) A very large number of religious and temperance medals issued in Canada;

(g) As many Communion tokens and Chapter pennies as could be procured;

(h) And generally, Greek and Roman coins, and historical medals galore.

In addition to all this there is an important numismatic library for the study of the science.

The Ladies' Auxiliary

But the activities of the Society would have been incomplete without the participation of the better half of humanity. A Women's Branch was established with headquarters in the Chateau de Ramezay, and it meets monthly in the historical portraits gallery; the usual program of their meetings provides for a lecture by some person of high attainment in the literary, scientific or artistic world, followed by a musical entertainment and a cup of tea—each member supplying his or her own tea bag and sugar, since Mr. Hitler has compelled us to restrict these social commodities.

The co-operation of ladies has further enabled the Society to organize two historical balls with gorgeous costumes, one in 1898 under the distinguished patronage of Lord Aberdeen, Governor General of Canada, and of Lady Aberdeen; and the other on the occasion of the 75th birthday of its foundation, the proceeds thereof having helped its finances in a goodly measure. The costumes recalled all countries and times, but particularly the history of Canada under the French regime.

A similar evocation of olden times memories was made in 1930 when the officers of the Society, in the garb of chateaux of 1715 received as guests in the Chateau de Ramezay a few eminent citizens of modern Montreal, ministers, senators, presidents of financial institutions, consuls and other prominent officials whom they entertained at an "operetta dinner."

The libretto had been written by the president of the Society, describing the dishes presented by lyric artists, costumed as cooks and maids, singing the words of presentation set to popular operatic selections. The contrast of the gorgeous costumes of two centuries ago with the gloomy dinner jackets of 1930 added to the mirth of the evening.

The Museum

The Museum of the Chateau de Ramezay, maintained by The Anti-quarian and Numismatic Society of Montreal, consists of a gallery of historical portraits, of a numismatic collection, of documents and keepsakes recalling the names of people connected with the history of this country, as well as Indian curiosities and implements exhibiting the domestic life of our forefathers. As it stands within its limited space, it exhibits in a most vivid manner the mode of life and the characteristics of a span of three centuries of history. It is, in fact, constantly being visited by thousands of tourists, and by all those who are interested in Canadian and American history.

The Building

The building of the Chateau is a curiosity in itself, being erected upon walls of masonry, of a thickness of over three feet, with a center wall so thick and strong that a baking oven has been installed within. Monumental chimneys are preserved all over the building, as well as its stone floor, five inches thick, exhibiting the strong manner in which buildings were erected in those days.

A Bit of History

At the time of the American invasion, the Chateau was occupied by Generals Montgomery, Arnold, and Wooster, and also by Benjamin Franklin, Samuel Chase and Charles Carroll of Carrollton, who were sent by the American Congress in 1776; the first three to conquer Canada, and the last three to induce Canadians to join their rebellion against English rule. The trace of the dais which was erected in the Grand Salon upon which the American Envoys were to receive the homage of Canadians has been preserved on the walls of that room, whilst a postern of the manor of Samuel de Champlain in France, the bell of the fortress of Louisburg destroyed by the English, the flag of the Insurrectionists of 1837-1838, and other historical curiosities are distributed in the several other rooms.

The Management

The collections are under the custody of a Board of Trustees who look after their preservation, and the Society is managed by a Council of twenty members, composed equally of citizens of French and English origins, speaking both official languages of the country. Eleven presidents have successively occupied the chair and presided over the deliberations of the Board of Trustees and of the Council of the Society, their names being as follows: 1. Adelard J. Boucher, 1862-1864; 2. James Ferrier, 1864-1866; 3. Stanley C. Bagg, 1866-1867; 4. Joshua L. Bronsdon, 1867-1869; 5. William Blackburn, 1869-1870; 6. Henry Mott, 1870-1878; 7. Hon. P. J. O. Chauveau, 1878-1884; 8. Hon. George Baby, 1884-1906; 9. L. W. Sicotte, 1906-1912; 10. W. D. Lighthall, 1912-1927; 11. Victor

Morin, since 1927. L. A. Renaud, the well known authority on Canadian numismatics, is Curator, and the worthy president of the American Numismatic Association, J. Douglas Ferguson, is a member of the Council.

The Future

The history of such a noteworthy institution having been thus briefly recalled, we may wonder by what means it has been enabled to carry on during four score years and whether it will be able to endure. The devotedness and enthusiasm of its members permit us to answer in the affirmative, though it has hardly any other source of revenues than their yearly subscriptions and a small admission fee to the Museum. It is a private society, and the public bodies hardly come to the rescue. Still, the Trustees and Council of the Society have been able to make both ends meet up to this time, and it is expected that the general public will not allow such a commendable effort on behalf of our national welfare to become a thing of the past.

SPRING CONVENTION OF THE IOWA NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION

On Saturday and Sunday, May 15 and 16, the semi-annual convention of the I. N. A. was held at Waterloo, with the local coin club as host. The registrations were somewhat in excess of one hundred, the exhibits of high quality and of considerable volume, the program varied and interesting, the arrangement of space at the Hotel President (head-quarters) ideal, and the success of the whole affair unmistakable. A number of coins were donated from various sources and were auctioned at the banquet Sunday, the proceeds going into the Treasury. A substantial number of prizes, all of them of value, and generously given by more than a dozen dealers, were drawn at the banquet, and following this was an auction of 200 lots of well selected coins, which in the main brought satisfactory prices. Past President V. Leon Belt of Waterloo was general chairman of arrangements.

M. A. Radke of Des Moines was re-elected President, Loyd Gettys of Davenport, elected First Vice President, C. David Pierce of Ottumwa, Second Vice President, and Lester S. Wright of Davenport, Secretary-Treasurer.

DEATHS

Dr. Edwin A. Hyatt of St. Albans, Vermont, passed away on the evening of February 14, after a long illness from heart ailment. His coin and stamp collections are reported to have been a great source of comfort to him after his condition made retirement from active practice necessary. His membership in the A. N. A. extended over a long period.

The death of L. B. Knighton of Richmond, Virginia, occurred on April 20, caused by a boiler explosion in the paper mill on the James River, where he was employed as assistant superintendent. He was killed instantly. Mr. Knighton was a member of the Association, number 8196, and was also actively interested in the Richmond Coin Club.

THE THALERS TALK OF THEIR HOME TOWNS

By DUDLEY BUTLER, New York City

Our coin collector received in his morning mail the catalog of a coin sale. He opened it eagerly to see if it contained any items of his pet series, the coins of Principalities and Bishopries. His eye travelled down the long list of items and lighted upon lot 127: "Augsburg 1600. Portrait. Reverse, Arms. Good." He was thoroughly familiar with the piece. The portrait of the ruler, holding a great sword, and on the reverse the simple and dignified pine cone, the arms of Augsburg.

Here is a collector to whom a coin is not only a treasured possession, but also a living symbol of the place where it was struck. His imagination loves to flash back to the history he has read of the various Principalities whose names appear on the coins. To him they are not merely shadowy titles, but as real as the city in which he lives. To him every one of these cities has a special personality. The appearance and personality of their rulers are as real to him as the appearance and personality of the mayor of his own town, and the citizens are as familiar to him as his own neighbors. Like Miniver Cheevy, he "... loved the days of old

When swords were bright and steeds were prancing."

"Augsburg 1600. Portrait." The words are a bell that summons his imagination.

The portrait, the ruler of Augsburg, comes to life, steps down from the coin, and invites him to join him in a walk through the city. They walk along the main street, which in 1600 was undoubtedly the most beautiful in all Europe. In the morning sun the copper roofs—and in those days only Augsburg houses could boast of copper roofs—shone brightly. The front doors of most of the houses are open, inviting passersby to look in and admire the beautifully polished brass and copper treasures, the sideboards with rows upon rows of costly pewter. And there, on a hill overlooking the city, is the magnificent mansion of the Fugger family, one of the largest and most powerful financial houses in Europe. Beyond the residential districts he sees great numbers of armourer's workshops, proudly producing the finest armour and weapons in all Europe. Toledo alone could compete with them. Here too are made the finest wheel-lock pistols. Here are manufactured elaborate iron bound treasure chests stamped with the armourer's mark, which corresponds to the "sterling" on silver. No one would dream of having a strong box that did not bear the mark of an Augsburg maker.

The ruler of Augsburg was a practical and progressive man, very proud of the "modern conveniences" he planned for the happiness and comfort of his people. He was proudest of all of his city's water supply and explained to our Mr. Coin Collector that it was indeed unequalled in all Europe. Truly a progressive ruler. Truly a beautiful and progressive and economically sound Augsburg, this principality of more than three centuries ago.

Mr. Coin Collector's eye travels still further down the dealer's list. Oh yes! Vlm. He has a specimen of the coinage of that city also. And suppose that as at Augsburg the ruler steps down from his coin and most courteously invites him to take a stroll around the city. Can he not hear the ruler saying, "Oh yes, as you say, Augsburg has a very fine water supply. But do you know that the plans for those very works were drawn up here at Vlm? The idea was really ours for we make a specialty of this kind of thing, in fact we had it before they did. And now, my friend, let me take you to the market place where I will show you the latest thing in transportation, for we are a progressive people and pride ourselves on being up to date. We make a speciality of building wagons for the trade. And I must tell you of our latest achievement. We have just established a daily wagon service between Augsburg and Nuremberg. Just think of that! A daily wagon service for passengers and small freight. Why, it is unheard of; no one has ever given such a service before."

Shortly after this Mr. Coin Collector has an opportunity of walking through Hamburg under the same circumstances as at Augsburg and Vlm, but his experiences during this walk are not so pleasant as in the other places. It seemed to him there was a gibbet at every street corner.

"You see," explains the ruler, "we are very strict with our inhabitants. The slightest infraction of the law calls for the death penalty. But our real specialty," he continues, "is breaking on the wheel. After a man is 'broken' his body remains chained to the wheel for an indefinite period as a warning to other evil doers." During his walk Mr. Collector counts no less than eighty-four of these horrible sights, and so, after taking a polite leave of his host, he returns to a further perusal of his catalog.

His eye next lights upon an item from Saxony, and the ruler John-George makes him welcome to the beautiful city of Dresden.

"In the first place, I must show you our armory," says John-George; "it is without exception the finest collection of weapons in Europe. We take a great interest in ancient weapons, those of the earliest times down to the present. It is most interesting to note the gradual improvement in weapons, down to our latest 1600 model of the wheel-lock."

John-George now conducts Mr. Collector to the stables, which seemed to him to be endless. "We are great horsemen," continues John-George, "and these stables which contain thousands of Saxon horses are superior to those you will see anywhere else. But we especially pride ourselves on our stables for "foreign" horses, that is to say, those of Arab, English, and other breeds, of which we have two hundred and thirty-six.

For each of these a stall is provided, with a glass window, a red blanket, an iron rack, a copper manger, and a brass shower bath. Each saddle has a closet of its own. In fact very few of the citizens of the town are housed in such luxury or receive such care as do these horses.

The next item to catch the eye of Mr. Collector is a coin of Regensburg. The coins of that city have always been his special favorites. They seem to be almost always well "struck up." Models of the die sinker's art. Their "city views" were perfect as to detail. He loves the simple and dignified arms, the great crossed keys. The portraits of the rulers appear to him to be exceptionally fine, and he is overjoyed to find that one of these will now step down from his "planchet" and bid him welcome. He is greatly surprised at the number of people in the streets who are obviously strangers, and inquires of his host the reason for this influx. "Oh," replied his guide, "it is a pilgrimage. You see, the Shrine of our Lady of Regensburg is a great pilgrim center. In fact it is a matter of record that in 1599 the average daily attendance was over six hundred, but on some great Saint's days it would run far higher than that. Of course to one who we might say was 'pilgrimage minded' it does not compare with a pilgrimage to the Holy Land; but the trip to Jerusalem and back requires from a year to eighteen months, so they make the best of a substitute. And besides, of those who make the Pilgrimage to Jerusalem about thirty per cent never return." Mr. Collector was also greatly impressed with the great number of huge banners, each bearing a portrait of Our Lady of Regensburg, with the arms of Regensburg at her feet.

The final item on the list is a coin of Tubeck, and Mr. Collector has an opportunity of seeing that city under the same auspices as the others, for by this time almost all the Princely rulers had become old friends of his, or at least acquaintances.

Tubeck, he finds, makes a specialty of elaborate reception for strangers. That is to say, if they pay for it. To descend to the vernacular, Tubeck is the place to visit if you want to "make whoopee." It has the best inns, the best restaurants, beer halls, dance halls and theatrical performances of any place in Europe. And so, having made a round of the "night clubs" with his companion, Mr. Collector decides it is time for him to close his coin sale catalog and start for his office.

Author's note: A very large proportion of the statements made in this article is from the letters of Fynes Moryson, written between 1590 and 1612, who visited all these cities.

1943 AUCTION PRICES OF U. S. COINS

A most useful and informative record, consisting of 170 pages of prices of all U. S. coins realized at recent auctions, has just been published by James B. Johnson of Cincinnati.

The average price of the coin at more than thirty outstanding mail auctions in 1942 is given in parentheses immediately after the abbreviation of the condition, which ranges from brilliant proof down through gradations, including mention of color (olive, steel, brown, etc.), to poor; the prices following that in parentheses are those from 25 later mail auctions, in chronological order. Die varieties are clearly indicated, and typographically the book is most commendable.

Prices realized in 1942-3 are also quoted on numismatic books, magazines, noted sale catalogues, etc., and the coinages of the various mints from their establishment to and including 1942 add much to an already valuable mass of numismatic statistics.

An immense amount of labor was obviously necessary to compile the foregoing facts and figures, and Mr. Johnson and his associates have performed a service impossible for any individual collector to duplicate for himself. To the extent that auction prices reflect current values, he is enabled to appraise fairly his own holdings, and to bid intelligently on offerings in coming sales.

IS NUMISMATICS LEGITIMATELY CALLED A SCIENCE?

Recently there came to the Editor's desk a letter from a member of the A. N. A., questioning by inference the propriety of alluding to numismatics as a science. It is frequently designated as such, and in the more serious related articles, essays and reference works the classification has for many decades been a familiar one. Just when or by whom numismatics was first given this badge of dignity would be difficult, if not impossible, to establish. But it does have the authority of long usage, a claim by no means light, and its common acceptance today is evidence that it has stood the critical test of time. The term "science" is no border line label; it must justify its own application or eventually be discarded as unworthy. Even by negative reasoning we might thus claim the right to its use, for it seems more firmly established today than ever before.

However, one need not be content to stop here; there are other and positive means for arriving at the same conclusion. The starting point must logically be that of acceptance of a valid definition of the term "science." No analysis of the question is possible without such understanding, otherwise neither the one who questions nor the one who defends could be certain he was dealing with the same thing as his opponent. Such a discussion would be as pointless as for the prosecution to charge the defendant with forgery and the latter's lawyer to reply by denying that his client had robbed a bank.

So, it might be helpful to define the term "science." The best authorities give it a broader meaning than that relating to the common or text book variety of the natural sciences—geology, chemistry, astronomy, mathematics, biology, metallurgy, and the like—by such statements as these: "Science is systematized knowledge considered in reference to the study or understanding of truth." "Any branch or department of systematized knowledge." "Accumulated and accepted knowledge systematized and formulated with reference to the discovery of general truths or the operation of general laws; classified knowledge." Many others could be quoted, but in substance all agree with the foregoing.

A review of the bibliography of any branch of numismatics definitely establishes its claim to be classified as a science, for the enormous extent of the "accumulated and accepted knowledge systematized and formulated with reference to the discovery of general truths" is an unanswerable argument. The writings of a host of life long students of the various phases of coinages, from the slight monograph to the monumental work of many volumes, are the result of a genuine scientific approach to their subjects, and the record of their work is conclusive evidence of a scholarly, unselfish and untiring research in their chosen field. Here the superficial finds no welcome; mere surmise does not pose as a conclusion; but "the study or understanding of truth" was the sole and sustaining motive which made possible the vast authentic literature in the libraries of our numismatic societies both here and abroad.

By any reasonable definition these may be classed as scientific works; if their authors studied, investigated and wrote for the love of their pursuit, their findings are none the less valuable; and if their appreciative readers take advantage of the authors' work because of the fascination of our so-called "hobby," such work loses nothing of its authority and dignity.

To many collectors the scientific aspect will not appeal—will not even be discovered by some; they enjoy the relaxation, the play of imagination inspired by a piece of historical significance, the satisfaction of possessing a coin in exceptional condition or of exceptional rarity, the pleasure of examining the collections of others and of displaying their own: but back of all this, visible or not, is the scientific nature of genuine numismatics, waiting to be recognized and appreciated and employed, to the end that the maximum enjoyment and understanding of our coins may be realized by those who will not be content with less.

LOOKING BACKWARD

THROUGH THE EARLY FILES OF THE NUMISMATIST

FIFTY YEARS AGO

The most interesting item in the June number was the announcement that the study of mint marks on the silver and gold coinage at the U. S. Branch Mints by A. G. Heaton of Washington, D. C., was just off the press and was being offered to the coin collecting public at one dollar per copy. It was the first comprehensive work of its kind, and for a half century it has held its reputation as a standard authority.

Mr. Heaton was a man of many talents, but particularly as an artist. He was born in Philadelphia, April 28, 1844, studied art in Paris; among his well known paintings are "The Recall of Columbus," from which was engraved the central design of the 50-cent Columbian stamp (1893), and "Hardships of Immigration," pictured on the 10-cent value of the Trans-Mississippi issue of 1898. He was one of the early members of the A. N. A. and was elected its third President in 1894, serving two years. His death occurred in Washington on October 11, 1930.

FORTY YEARS AGO

These are days when we speak of "billions" with a sophistication born of devastating experience throughout the last unforgettable decade. But the present century was barely on its way when one of our number with a Jules Verne imagination proposed the striking of a billion dollar gold piece, along with other interesting trifles in paper money and stamps, the same to be exhibited at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis, then in process of preparation.

The size of such a gold piece (said the Pittsburgh Times of March 11) was estimated at about forty feet in diameter, and thirty inches thick. It was hinted the design might resemble that of the then current $20 gold piece. The problems of minting, transportation and housing were treated with much reticence; one might conclude, however, that protection was no problem at all, for, as in the case of the Washington monument, little apprehension need have been felt over possible theft by even the most enterprising of burglars. The size might have offered no great obstacle, for these gentry have even been known to steal—among other sizeable articles—a church; but the weight would have been discouraging, to say nothing of the suspicion sure to be aroused whenever they attempted to exchange it for bills of smaller denomination.

The next time we see Farran Zerbe (for, according to the account, he was deeply involved in the plot) we shall hope to have the straight of the whole matter. Romancing reporters existed forty years ago (as today), and felt as much at ease in the realm of fancy as in the realm of fact—even preferred it at times; this may have been one of the times. But Editor Heath gives the article more than a full page and heads it "A Novel Scheme."

THIRTY YEARS AGO

Edgar H. Adams contributes a valuable paper on Dr. Lewis Feuchtwanger and his connection with Hard Times tokens, with especial reference to the metallic composition of the store cards and tokens issued by him and by others using the "Feuchtwanger composition," or German silver. He petitioned Congress in 1837 to adopt his metal as a substitute for copper for minor coinage, but was not successful.

The 50th anniversary of the founding of the Antiquarian and Numismatic Society of Montreal (the history of which we have the privilege of presenting in this issue, from the able pen of its President, Victor Morin) is given prominent notice, including an interesting paper by R. W. McLachlan, long an active figure in Canadian numismatics, and for many years a member of the A. N. A., serving as 2nd Vice President in 1911.

A bronze sestertius of the Roman Emperor Claudius (41-54 A. D.) is illustrated, the reverse inscription being SPES (Hope) AUGUSTA. The owner is Claudius Hope—then a member of the A. N. A. Ripley finally caught up with this item and it appeared in his "corner" a few weeks ago—no doubt noticed by not a few collectors. Good publicity for numismatics in general, and for ancient Roman in particular.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

H. D. Allen continues his notable series of well illustrated articles on "The Paper Money of the Confederate States," and Dr. Malcolm Storer also furnishes another installment of his "Numismatic Bibliography of the United States," an extremely useful study to anyone seriously interested in U. S. coins, paper money and medals. It is regrettable that in many instances he has given only the year, and not the month, in which various magazines and journals appeared; however, this is not serious, as bound volumes in various libraries, public and private, can be consulted and the articles easily located.

In the list of ten new members admitted June 1st occurs the name of Alden Scott Boyer of Chicago, who later (1932) became President of the Association.

A. N. A. TREASURER HONORED

At the 116th meeting of the New Jersey Numismatic Society held on May 13th a most gracious honor was paid George H. Blake of Jersey City, long the Treasurer of the Association, on the occasion of his birthday. A number of his New York numismatic friends of many years were also present.

An Honorary Life membership was presented Mr. Blake by James M. Wade, on behalf of the Society, and a letter of good wishes, signed by the members and guests present, was read and given him. A gift from the Bronx Coin Club was presented also, by Martin Kortjohn, all of which left the guest of honor in no doubt as to the respect and affection in which he is held by his fellow collectors; his appreciation was clearly evident in his response. The traditional birthday cake was then cut and served, the whole incident being a happy interlude in the Club's activities.

NEWS AND COMMENTS FROM THE LIBRARY

By TED R. HAMMER, Librarian-Curator

Recent additions to the Library include:

S-106: "Sycee Silver," by Phares O. Sigler (ANS).

C-53: Kenneth Crouch, typewritten manuscript on awards of honor in the United States.

M-67: "The Romance of the Pioneers," catalogue (priced) of the Mehl sale of May 5, 1925: the Judge Charles W. Slack collection of gold.

M-68: Catalogue (priced) of the Mehl sale of April 17, 1923, of coins of the world including a long list of medals of World War I.

M-69: Catalogue (priced) of the Mehl sale Nov. 23, 1920, of Swedish coins.

M-66: "Bibliography of Histories of Specific Banks," by John Muscalus.

The numbers in the foregoing list are those by which the works are listed in the A. N. A. Library; in ordering, it is sufficient to use the number alone. Mr. Muscalus' work in the paper money field is known far and wide, and we're happy to report that he has borrowed more books than any other individual during the current fiscal year with the exception of the Librarian, who uses on the average of 3.7 books per day during the year without showing them as loans or listing them as such. But collectors of uncurrent notes wishing data about banks of which they have bills will find this an easy, worthwhile checking list.

The three Mehl priced catalogues, M-67, M-68 and M-69, were given the Library by Fred E. Durin of Steward, Illinois. M-69 will be of much value to the Library because so many of the works on Swedish coins are in Swedish rather than English. Although not illustrated, it has excellent descriptions. M-68 would be just another catalogue except for the fine descriptions of medals, and particularly the nearly 200 lots of war medals. There are also some numismatic books listed therein. M-67 will be out a lot, we believe, because of the interest in territorial gold. The few books we have on this subject are not only out 15 to 18 times a year, but borrowers are often on the waiting list. Kenneth Lee of Glendale, Calif., has promised another work along this line, and we'll describe it here next month.

The Whitman handbook of type collecting is the one given with each type collection board the firm makes.

Kenneth Crouch's research on United States awards of honor was described last month. This work, being typed, will cost 30 cents first class postage each way—but would be well worth it to anyone interested in this specialty. We also added the 1942 American Numismatic Society Proceedings, No. A-59, last month.

"Sycee Silver," by Phares O. Sigler is No. 99 of the American Numismatic Society's "Numismatic Notes and Monographs." Author Sigler wrote in his preface: "The task which confronts the person who has the temerity to try to understand the history of any one of China's many interesting types of currency is stupendous. The silver, slipper-shaped pieces of money called Sycee, which would seem such a simple form of currency, is not an exception." It is well illustrated and will prove interesting to beginners and experienced alike in this field.

Sometimes we get requests such as, "Send me something on Africa as I have to make a report before our club next week." We'd hate to try to cover Africa—a continent—in that short a time, even merely skimming the surface numismatically. But we're glad to have a letter mentioning the lines along which a member is interested, when he failed to find exactly what he wanted in the Library list. Even a comprehensive list could give but a brief description of the books and their contents, and to expand this would be costly in time and money.

Several have mentioned they enjoyed the "Library Notes" in THE NUMISMATIST, and since we seldom fail to receive immediate requests for books listed there, we know it's read. "May I take this opportunity to say how much I have enjoyed your book reviews in the 'new' NUMISMATIST. This is a feature that is very helpful and I do hope you and the Editor will be able to keep the department going." Thus wrote Donald A. Hickok, Santa Barbara. Well, Friend Hickok, Editor Saxton promised to publish it, and all we have to do is get it to him by the 15th of the month. Edward B. Haden of Haddonfield, N. J., a regular patron of the Library, wrote, "I would like to express my appreciation at this time for the use of the books I have occasionally borrowed from the Library. I feel that the Library is a great help to anyone seriously studying U. S. coinages . . . and I feel that with the use of these books my knowledge is rapidly broadening in scope and details."

We frequently receive queries about the cost of books and where to buy them. We are happy to look up prices realized in recent sales, but can only refer these writers to regular advertisers for the balance of the information. We also have been asked to suggest books which should be on public library shelves. One city plans to buy a book a month, and wanted suggestions.

SOUNDS REASONABLE

To the Editor:

Am wondering if it might not be in order to correct a misconception prevalent among many collectors regarding the cleaning of coins.

It seems to me that dirty coins in a collection have no more justification than soiled linen in the bureau drawer.

Of course it would be almost criminal to apply an artificial polish to proofs and uncirculated coins which have acquired a natural patina and mellowness with age, but the removal of just plain dirt, blemishes and germs attained through constant circulation is a different matter. Surely a clean coin is more sightly, more pleasant to handle and more revealing of the true merit of the coin than one discolored and filthy.

However, maybe I'm wrong. Just what is the expert opinion on the subject? I believe that your readers would welcome enlightenment on the matter.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON AWARDS

The committee on awards met on May 5th, 1943, to review the reports submitted by the various participants in activities during National Coin Week, which was celebrated this year between April 11th and 17th. Many such reports were rendered both by individual collectors and by numismatic clubs. Several reports were sent in by groups of collectors who made joint exhibits of outstanding excellence. Since the committee could not apportion the credit in these joint exhibits to the several individuals, nor in the exhibits of clubs, we may have done an injustice in not giving them specific awards. Much thought and discussion took place before making the awards, and the committee feels that it has judged as fairly as possible without seeing each individual exhibit.

Numismatic displays were not as numerous this year as in the past, due mostly to the entry of many collectors into military service, and to the engagement of many others in war activities. Exhibits of coins during the period of the Second War Loan drive brought out many appeals for the purchase of war bonds and stamps, and numismatics is proud to have been of service to the country in this respect. Several unusual methods of gaining publicity were adopted, among them being the spending of old U. S. coins and the linking of dates on coins with historical events.

Awards were made as follows:

Coin Clubs

First prize to the New Jersey Numismatic Society. This club had an active participation by about fifteen of its members in exhibits at two museums, a library, three banks and three stores. Publicity was given in newspapers and over radio station WPAT to the science of numismatics and to the various local exhibits. Several illustrated lectures were given to clubs and associations. Awarded first prize blue club banner, and Wayte Raymond's "Silver Dollars of North and South America" and "Coins of North and South America."

Second prize to the Boston Numismatic Society. This club had excellent exhibits in four Boston banks and two stores, one of which is at Boston's busiest corner. Awarded second prize club banner and Wayte Raymond's "Gold Coins of North and South America," and Lee's "California Gold."

Honorable mention: New Castle Coin Club—Milford Coin Club—Heart of America Numismatic Association—Muncie Coin Club.

Individual Members

First prize to Philip S. Justice of Beaumont, Texas. Extensive exhibits of U. S., ancient and American colonial coins and numismatic publications were made at two stores and at a public library. Publicity was through the medium of articles in the Beaumont Journal and over radio stations KFDM and KRIC. Part of the publicity included a newspaper account of a spending spree in which old U. S. coins were spent at their face value. Awarded first prize blue ribbon and a set of Providence half dollars.

Second prize to William D. Morrill of Swampscott, Mass. This collector prepared an exhibit at the Public Library telling a story linking the dates on coins with historical events from 600 B. C. right up to April 1943. This exhibit was carefully thought out and well prepared. Publicity was given in the local newspaper. Awarded ribbon and a purchase order for $5 on Pittsburgh Coin Exchange, and Wayte Raymond's "Spanish-American Gold Coins."

Third prize to David Starr Bingham of Westfield, N. J. He is a member of the A. N. A., although he is under 21 years of age. His activities consisted of exhibits at two schools and at an information center, delivering seven short talks to Boy Scout troops, school classes and school club meetings. He also sponsored a collectors' club meeting, distributed numismatic literature and wrote a short article on coins for his school paper. Awarded ribbon and Wayte Raymond's "Ancient Coins," and the "Gutttag Collection of Latin-American Coins."

Fourth prize to H. Melvin Black of New Castle, Pa., who had a fine exhibit of U. S. coins, Civil War tokens, fractional currency and large size U. S. bills, which took up twelve feet of the jewelry store window in which it was displayed. He also contributed his efforts to making those of the New Castle Coin Club a success. Awarded ribbon and the "Gutttag Collection of Latin-American Coins."

Honorable mention: Ray M. Janda and Wm. A. Knapp of Kansas City, Mo. Evan Basinger, William Edwards and Robert W. Benroth of Bluffton, Ohio.

Junior Numismatists

First prize to Richard L. Castner, fifteen, of Portland, Me. A general exhibit was made at Deering High School, and coins of the U. S. were shown at the Portland Savings Bank. Publicity was obtained through his school paper and through the Portland Press Herald. The newspaper showed his picture and gave the story of his numismatic life beginning at the tender age of four, beside telling of his two exhibits. Awarded blue ribbon, a purchase order on Lee's Stamp & Coin Shop for $2.50 and Wayte Raymond's "U. S. Commemorative Coins."

Second prize to Robert Delancy, fourteen, of New Castle, Pa. He is a constant visitor at the New Castle Coin Club, and made an exhibit at a New Castle store as a part of the several exhibits of the Club. Awarded ribbon and National Coin Albums for Indian Head and Lincoln cents.

Women Numismatists

First prize to Mrs. Damon G. Douglas of Caldwell, N. J. A display of medals featuring Grover Cleveland, who was born in Caldwell, and of a type collection of U. S. coins was made in a Caldwell hobby shop. Mrs. Douglas participated in the activities of the New Jersey Numismatic Society. Awarded blue ribbon and Newell's "Royal Greek Portrait Coins."

Second prize to Mrs. V. Black for her participation in a unique exhibit of American money used by American soldiers from the time of the Revolution to 1943. Mrs. Black's activities were also included with those of the New Jersey Numismatic Society. Awarded ribbon and the "Guttag Collection of Latin-American Coins."

The ribbons and banners awarded to the prize winners are individually inscribed with their names, and tell of the event for which they were awarded. The committee believes these prizes will be treasured by their winners for many years to come. Other participants will be awarded ribbons for their efforts, but the latter will not be inscribed with their names.

A LETTER FROM PAST PRESIDENT MOORE

To the Editor:

Our attention has been called to the Stoner and Shroyer article appearing in the January issue of THE NUMISMATIST. We wish to correct and make explanation. After further investigation and study we desire to state that undoubtedly the entire listed types of this token should be classed as mulings with but perhaps one exception—the Indian Head type. Neither Stoner nor Shroyer in our latest finding had anything to do with the circulation of these mulings or even knew anything of the striking of same. An Indian Head token comes to light occasionally in Muskingum county, so we are informed.

As to the token described as picturing the Greeley likeness and illustrated in the article as that of Franklin (which error was corrected in the February issue of THE NUMISMATIST) we wish to state that the likeness is no other than that of Horatio Seymour. The tokens listed as Greeley as being in the collections of Joseph Barnet, George R. Hetrich, M.D., and Waldo C. Moore undoubtedly are all Seymour likenesses. As to those listed as Greeley in the American Numismatic Society and the Buffalo Historical Society we cannot vouch, since our information was gained only through correspondence.

We are grievously pained to have caused any inconvenience through our blundering. Our apologies were forwarded Mr. King, also our thanks to Mr. Schwartz for calling our attention to this matter.

Sincerely and Numismatically,

Lewisburg, Ohio,

WALDO C. MOORE.

CONCERNING MEMBERS WITH THE ARMED FORCES

In conformity with recently announced government regulations, publishing of the rank or location of those in the service will be discontinued for the duration of the war.

The General Secretary, however, should be kept posted as to the correct address of those who are receiving THE NUMISMATIST.

BURIED TREASURE

By L. B. HANDLEY, Judge Tenth Judicial District
Hodgenville, Kentucky

(This interesting account of an unusual discovery of U. S. gold amounting to $960 in $10 and $20 pieces, was kindly sent in at the Editor's request, following a letter from Judge Handley written some weeks ago. He states that the dates of the gold ranged all the way from 1850 to 1911; also that it has been disposed of.—Ed.)

W. H. Cooper, a resident of Hodgenville, Ky., died in October, 1932, leaving a wife, Josephine Cooper, who died in 1937. Mr. Cooper for many years lived at Hodgenville and enjoyed a lucrative business. In 1898 he bought a house and lot there, which he occupied continuously from that date until his death.

He was a splendid citizen, but eccentric: what we would term a peculiar man. He did not confide in anybody and kept his business strictly to himself. He left a will in which he provided that no inventory should be made of his estate, leaving his property to his wife for her life, and at her death to be equally divided between her people and his people.

Following the death of Mrs. Cooper in 1937 the writer was appointed administrator of her estate and also administrator of the estate of her deceased (Administrator de bonis non).

We found in the Cooper home over $600 in gold and about $1800 in gold certificates. Following Mr. Cooper's death, his widow was not satisfied with the money in the local bank, and a search was instituted; about $3500 was found in a bank in an adjoining town, and a further search located several thousand dollars on deposit in a bank in Louisville. Mrs. Cooper knew nothing about this money in the banks as her husband did not tell her.

Mr. Cooper was 70 years of age at the time of his death. He had been in a feeble state of health both mentally and physically for several months prior, and his memory had failed him.

Mr. Cooper retired from active business in 1923 and spent practically all of his time at his home. He was a great lover of game chickens and spent much of his time with them. My reason for referring to this is that the $960 in gold, found in May 1942, was hidden on the site of the chicken house.

Following the death of Mrs. Cooper this property was sold to a man by the name of Hubbard, who lived there continuously until the gold was discovered with the exception of four months, when an Army officer from West Va., stationed at Fort Knox, lived there. Hubbard testified in the case and said the gold was not his.

Mrs. Cooper shortly after her husband's death had the old chicken house torn down. She never collected gold, and it was wholly unbelievable that she would have buried this gold on the site where a chicken house once stood.

The finder of the gold was Otis Enlow. He had been employed by a man by the name of Routt to break his garden, and for the first time a plow went over the site of the chicken house. He struck this gold and became very greatly excited, telling one of the neighbors what he had found. He gathered up $600 in ten and twenty-dollar gold pieces and the neighbor $360. They carried the money to Lincoln National Bank, and by reason of the fact that I had been the personal representative of William H. Cooper I filed suit at once and caught the gold in the hands of the bank.

Much evidence was taken by the writer as it was incumbent upon him to convince the trial judge that the gold was put there by, or belonged to Mr. Cooper. This was done to the satisfaction of the Hon. Ballard Clark, Lagrange, Ky., the trial judge.

One bit of evidence playing an important part was the date of 1911 on one of the coins: conclusive evidence that it was hidden there after that date. The coins were in no container. If ever in a container it had rotted.

The owner of the house and lot at the date of finding the gold had not moved to the premises. He had no claim, although a party to the suit, the contest being between the heirs of the owner of the gold and the finder.

DOUBLE EAGLES AGAIN ON THE WING

C. T. Hunter, of Eufaula, Alabama, has thoughtfully sent in a clipping from the Geneva County Reaper of May 13, and we are quoting it herewith. By coincidence two similar stories of buried treasure—gold coins in each case—appear in this issue. It would be interesting to know what was done with this particular “find” after it reached the bank: whether it was piously turned over to the soulless U. S. Treasury for eventual melting and final deposit in Fort Knox, or will collectors be given a chance to secure what they need—incidentally at a good margin over face. Perhaps Mr. Hunter can enlighten us on this point.

Pearlie Knight, a 30-year old tenant farmer, and Miss Ellen Blount, his landlady, will tell you of a certainty that there is gold in this Geneva county soil. Gold! That is exactly what was plowed up by Knight Friday morning of last week on the farm of Miss Blount near the Whittaker Church south of Slocumb—yes sir, $2,540 worth of the stuff in nice shiny twenty-dollar gold pieces.

Even though the gold was plowed to the surface by Knight Friday morning it was not discovered until Monday morning of this week after two rains which made the shiny metal noticeable to the eye.

Knight was plowing under the site of an old farm house that had been torn down a year ago when his plow point struck a tin can that was in the last stages of deterioration. The contents of the can, however, were just as good as ever. Knight counted 127 twenty-dollar gold pieces.

The new-found treasure was brought by Knight to Sheriff W. C. Register and Judge of Probate P. C. Black, of whom he sought advice. The money later found its way to The Citizens Bank at Geneva.

By mutual agreement between Knight and Miss Blount the money was divided equally between them.

The money was believed to have been buried under the old house a generation or so ago. The dates on the coins ranged from 1850 to 1894. From these dates it is indicated that the gold had been buried for something like fifty years.

Knight is now shopping around with his half of the fortune for a farm of his own.

CLUB MEETINGS

SECRETARIES PLEASE NOTE: Reports should be made promptly. Copy must be received by the 15th of the month to insure insertion in the following month's issue. As a usual thing a copy of the minutes is sent in, and almost invariably a number of items of local concern only must be cancelled. The justification for publishing these accounts lies in the numismatic information—and encouragement—to be derived by collectors generally, regardless of location. On this basis we feel it advisable to revise and condense, and, incidentally, the by-product of this course is conservation of valuable space.

BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The regular monthly meeting of the Society was held in the Conference Room of the Boston City Club on Monday evening April 26, with President Pond in the chair, and 15 members and one invited guest present.

Mr. Schuhmacher then read his final report on his efforts on the displays made by members of the Society during National Coin Week, just closed. After reading the report, the members voted unanimously on motion that the thanks of the Society be given Mr. Schuhmacher.

At this time the question of a meeting place for our next and future meetings was brought up. Owing to the fact of the Government having taken most of the space at the Boston City Club, the Society found it rather hard to locate suitable quarters for future meetings.

It was decided to postpone selection of the next meeting date until after arrangements had been made with either some hotel or club to take care of the Society's meetings.

Exhibits were made by Messrs. Chell-Frost, Lowenstam and Hanley.

—Ernest R. Shackford, Secretary.

CANTON (OHIO) COIN CLUB—The 93rd meeting of the Club was called to order by Vice-President V. L. Stover, Monday, May 3rd, at the Belden Hotel, with 10 members and one guest present.

Mr. Welch read a paper on "Hard Times Tokens" which, together with "Half Cents," constituted the topics for display, discussion and exchange.

Mr. Kabealo followed with an informative talk on the science of auction sales and their benefits to both buyers and sellers.

The usual door prize collection was taken up from the proceeds of which several pieces of fractional currency were purchased and awarded.

Exhibits were by:

Mr. Bruce: Hard Times tokens and Half Cents.

Mr. Duryee: Half Dollars and commemorative gold.

Mr. Stover: Medium Bronze of Cleopatra.

Mr. Welch: Hard Times tokens and Half Cents.

—Charles T. Bolas, Secretary.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—The 182nd meeting of the Club was held on the evening of May 4, at our new meeting place, namely, the Hayward Hotel, located at Sixth and Springs streets, Los Angeles, where future meetings will take place. Thirty members and guests were present, and the Club welcomed back several members who had long been absent. Mr. Efker invited the club to attend the annual hobby show of the Orange County Coin Club, to be held at Brea, California, on May 18th.

The speaker of the evening was President Adolph Larson, Jr., who addressed the club on the subject, "The Origin of Oriental Coinage." Mr. Larson traced the evolution of money and coins from the earliest times, and stressed the point that a collector is not a true numismatologist unless he studies the history and habitat of his coins. Creating the atmosphere of a court room in which the Secretary was forced to impersonate the judge and the audience played the part of a jury, President Larson presented a clear cut case, developing the hypothesis that the earliest Greek coinage of about the seventh century before Christ had been antedated by Chinese coins two or three hundred years earlier, and that the idea of coinage had probably been brought to Greece from China by travelers. The address proved to be most interesting and unusual.

The usual auction was held.

—Earle K. Stanton, Secretary.

CHARLOTTE COIN CLUB—The May meeting of the Club was held on the 3rd, with President C. Y. Conder presiding. Seven members and visitors were present.

An extremely interesting display was made by Dr. Conway A. Bolt, North Carolina District Secretary of the A. N. A. The display consisted of a complete set of gold dollars, two sets of Charlotte dollars, one set of Charlotte quarter eagles, one set of Charlotte half eagles, one set of commemorative gold dollars and quarter eagles, complete set of half dimes including the rare 1802, set of twenty cent pieces, and a complete set of three cent silver. The coins in the majority were uncirculated, with the remainder in extra fine condition.

Dr. Bolt led a very interesting discussion on the coins, giving a brief history of each type.

For the next meeting to be held June 7, Mr. George Walton is to conduct a Numismatic Quiz. His questions will be taken from the 1942 Standard Catalog of United States Coins and Tokens, and from the last four issues of The Numismatist and the Numismatic Scrapbook. Numismatic prizes will be awarded on each question to the person who gives the correct answer.

—Kay J. Jennell, Secretary.

CHICAGO COIN CLUB—The 291st regular meeting of the Club was held on May 5th at the La Salle Hotel. Fifty-five members and four guests were present, with Vice President Barger presiding. A fifty-two lot auction preceded the meeting, with proceeds of the final lot donated the Club by Mr. Frank Wilson.

Mr. Rutz reported that the Calumet Numismatic Society had an exhibit during National Coin Week at the Gary State Bank. Mr. Charles Green spoke of his visit to the Racine Club and gave a very interesting talk on numismatic literature.

Mr. Lee Hewitt advised that an over-date dime, 1942 over 1941, has been found and this has been confirmed by Mr. Sinnock of the Philadelphia Mint. Mr. Jonas suggested that the Club mark the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Columbian Exposition, by exhibiting these items at the June meeting. Approved. Mr. Powells presented the exhibits in the absence of Dr. Reich.

Displays were made by members Keefer, Jonas, Powells, Henry, Leonard, Lind, Rutz and Beckman.

—Clifford Lindall, Secretary.

CINCINNATI NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—The Association held its regular monthly meeting at the Netherland Plaza Hotel, Tuesday, May 11, 1943.

Mr. Von Seggern, Curator, announced that the club library, medals and other possessions were now available to members at his office, 18 East 4th St.

On April 26th, the Association lost one of its most beloved members, Mr. Charles H. Thul. "Uncle Charlie," as we knew him, was Secretary for several years and will long be remembered for his efforts in building up our club, his wide knowledge of numismatics and his willingness to help everyone. Mr. Kaplan read a tribute prepared by Mr. Melish, and it was unanimously adopted as a resolution by the members to be spread upon the minutes and a copy sent to his surviving widow and son.

Mr. George D. Parvin displayed his collection of half dollars, and gave a talk on the identification of varieties, explaining methods used by Hazeltine, Beistle and Geis.

Mr. James B. Johnson showed us a copy of his new auction record book and explained the improvements and additions.

—G. D. Parvin, Secretary.

MILWAUKEE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The 103rd monthly meeting of the Society was held at the Plankinton House on April 30; President Culver presided.

Our attendance at meetings has been increasing, perhaps due to the sizeable displays of numismatic material by members. Thirty-five members and three visitors were in attendance.

National Coin Week displays were discussed, and it was found that eleven of our members had made displays at banks, schools, stores and other public places. It was pointed out that these displays attracted greater public interest than in former years.

After adjournment an auction of about 35 lots was held.

—N. J. Hoffman, Secretary.

NEW JERSEY NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The 116th meeting of the Society was held at the Newark Athletic Club on May 13; fifteen members and eight guests were present. President Brookes presided.

Mr. O. T. Sghia informed the Club that five delegates from The New York Numismatic Club had attended the New Jersey Numismatic Club meeting held on May 13th. In celebration of Mr. George H. Blake's 85th birthday, the New Jersey Numismatic Club made Mr. Blake an Honorary Life Member.

The Executive Committee suggested as the topics for the June meeting: Coins of Vespasian and Titus; Coins of Syracuse; United States Dimes; Paper Money of Brazil; and four coins in your collection of any country of which not over two are known of each.

Mr. Boyd reported that he had seen Mr. Farran Zerbe two weeks ago, and although he was unable to come to the meetings, he was still very actively interested in numismatics.

The Secretary announced that Mr. George H. Blake had just passed his 85th birthday, and all of the members rose to pay honor to Mr. Blake. Mr. Blake told the members of his proposed trip West, mentioning the cities he expected to visit and the people he intended to see while in those cities.

ORANGE COUNTY COIN CLUB

—The Club met at the Church of the Messiah in Santa Ana on April 20, 1943, with twenty-seven members and guests present.

It was then announced that this meeting was held in Santa Ana instead of Brea because Army officers were inspecting Brea's Civilian Defense setup on Tuesday night and most of the Brea members of the Orange County Coin Club had an active part in the Civilian Defense program and could not attend both meetings. However, it was decided that the regular meeting of the Club would be held in Brea on May 18. This meeting will take the form of a hobby show.

Mr. Herbert Bergen, program chairman, brought in several items of interest and called on Mr. Goodge who spoke regarding an 1838 half dollar. He showed one of these half dollars and they appear larger than the regular coin.

Sam Koepfel gave a report of his activities during the National Coin Meeting and discussed his display of Spanish pieces of eight.

Refreshments were served, and Adolph Larson then conducted another successful auction.

The meeting adjourned at 11:30 P. M. to meet again the third Tuesday evening in May at the Woman's Club House in Brea.

—C. Glenn Curtis, Secretary.

OREGON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY

—On Monday evening, May 10, the Society held its 72nd meeting at the Benson Hotel in Portland. President Bibler presided and there were in attendance 20 members and one guest.

Dr. Firth's display of coins for "National Coin Week" seems to have been the outstanding one in Portland. In fact, it was still on view at the time of this meeting. The foregoing is unusual in that only a display of far more than usual interest is allowed to remain in the bank's window for more than a few days at most. This included some of the rare Chinese items from the Doctor's collection, as well as early American Coins and present day issues in very fine to proof condition.

Geo. Pipes gave us some interesting information about Canadian coinage. From his talk we would gather that there was but little money in circulation in Canada before 1859. When a French Province, during the reign of Louis the 14th, French money circulated, but after the French and Indian War this stopped and was replaced in part by English coins, which in turn were augmented by tokens and U. S. money a little later. Each province had more or less to settle the money situation for itself, and we find that Newfoundland continued to issue money of its own until a few years ago. One Canadian token of particular interest to us in this vicinity is the one struck in 1820 for the Northwest Trading Co.

President Bibler brought out the point that coinage in Canada actually began in 1858. It seems that England refused to strike coins for the colonies, so it was up to each to meet the situation as best they could. Many of the merchants' tokens which were circulated in Canada were struck in the U. S. One of the rarities in tokens was that of the Bank of Montreal with a side view. Mr. Bibler also stated that the only 2.00 gold piece ever issued is that of Newfoundland; also that encased postage stamps were used in Canada. Other interesting points revealed in our round table discussion were that an eagle appears on some Canadian coins and that it is not original with the U. S.; also that the design of the Oregon Beaver Gold coins is the same as that of the rare Northwest Token.

A number of interesting items were displayed at this meeting. Geo. McLarty's collection of Canadian Coins and Tokens was outstanding. Mrs. Nelson brought a collection of Canadian coins, including those of current issue from 1 cent to $1.00. Geo. Pipes displayed a silver medal portraying the Duke of Quinalt and wife when Gov.-General of Canada, also a military medal awarded to Canadian soldiers who participated in the Fenian Raid of 1866. Henry Perry had his usual display of interesting coins plus a very fine tray of Foreign silver in dollar size. Mr. Bibler showed Canadian Fractional currency in crisp condition; Hugh Davenport, Jap occupational bills for use in Australia, and Stan Seabolt U. S. proof sets.

As a special treat Leonard Trythall displayed 3 Pioneer Gold coins, namely, Moffat & Co. $5.00 gold dated 1849, the Mormon $5.00 gold piece of 1850, and the one of 1860 with the beehive on the reverse. The condition of all the foregoing is close to uncirculated.

—John R. Slusher, Secretary.

PACIFIC COAST NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—228th meeting, held at the Hotel Whitcomb on April 28th, with 20 members and seven guests present. Mr. Ralph A. Mitchell presided as President Morris was reported ill.

The program of the evening consisted of talks by Messrs. Redfield and Fogler on the coinage of the British Empire and their possessions. Numerous displays were arranged by different members. It was decided that the program for the May meeting consist of talks on coins of countries beginning with "G" and "H," and on "The Quarter Dollar Issues of the United States." Mr. Cutler gave a fine talk on the U. S. Trade dollar, and outlined in detail the different exchanges in the Far East and the problems arising in Congress in regards to the issue.

The Secretary reported that 412 lbs. of copper and bronze coins were turned over to the Government, the result of the late scrap metal drive.

—Edward Fogler, Secretary.

PHILADELPHIA COIN CLUB—The 95th meeting of the Club was held in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel on Thursday evening, May 13, with President Havens presiding. There were thirty-seven members and guests present.

Mr. Reed, the Curator, announced that the next exhibit of coins by the Club will be the twenty-eight varieties of the "widow's mite" by Mr. Webb. These coins are now on public display at 37 S. 18th St.

Mr. Reed also commented on Judge Gashall's fine display last month of his eleven varieties of the 1793 cent, and mentioned that great interest was shown in this exhibition.

The exhibits for the evening were as follows:

Mr. Hooper: Some eighty varieties of the half cent, including some rarities.

Mr. Farley: Ancient Chinese coins, and The British Museum's Catalogue of Chinese Coins.

Mr. Sipe: Six "widow's mites."

Mr. Hooper won the vote of the evening for the most outstanding exhibit.

Mr. Webb read an inspiring and informative paper on the history of the "widow's mite" and explained in detail the obverses and reverses of his twenty-eight varieties.

The highlight of the auction which ended our meeting was the sale of a number of choice varieties of the 1794 cent belonging to Mr. Wismer.

RACINE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY

The sixty-second meeting of the society was held Friday, May 14, at the Y. M. C. A. Vice-president Arthur E. Jones presided. Seventeen members were present.

The final report of the Banquet committee was presented and a rising vote of thanks was extended by the membership to those who were responsible for making the affair a success.

A bound set of the 1942 NUMISMATIST was turned over to Librarian Rev. A. G. Weller.

Louis Wilczynski gave an interesting story about the Polish commemorative gold coins—10 zloty and 20 zloty proof—of Boleslaw Chrobry, 1925. Mr. Wilczynski exhibited his set of these coins and explained that the reign of Boleslaw Chrobry about 1025 was a very peaceful period in Polish history. The coins were acquired by a traveler from the mint in Warsaw in exchange for U. S. gold. The distribution of this issue was greatly restricted and only two or three sets are known in America. It is believed that the larger portion of the issue was carried off at the time of the German invasion by Polish patriots and later melted.

R. S. Yeoman talked briefly about Bechtler private gold issues.

J. V. Mc Dermott displayed a 1901-S quarter, uncirculated.

—R. S. Yeoman, Secretary.

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—The 81st meeting of our Club held at the Y. M. C. A. on April 29th with four members and nine visitors present. Unusually fine displays were exhibited, highlighted by a specimen of the excessively rare 1851 Schultz and Co., $5 Gold. This coin is owned by Mr. Joe La More, and he related that he reluctantly gave $5.00 for it to a boyhood friend who had found it, neither party realizing that it had any higher value—believe it or not.

The feature event of the evening was the presentation by Pres. Worth of tokens of appreciation to Mr. Fouts and Mr. Saeman, retiring President and Secretary, respectively. Mr. Fouts was the organizer of the Club nine years ago, and President during all that time. Mr. Saeman has been Secretary the past six years, and the inspirational leadership and unbounded enthusiasm in things numismatic by both these gentlemen has kept the Club together through many lean years.

Time was taken out for an auction of nine lots. The auctions have proven so popular, that the Club voted to make this feature a regular part of our meetings.

Other displays: A type set of coins, containing many varieties, and a complete set of cents, 1793 to date, mostly in exceptionally fine condition. This display was sent to the Secretary by Mr. J. V. McDermott of So. Milwaukee, Wisc., for which a vote of thanks and appreciation was extended.

Type sets: Mr. Saeman, Mr. Worth, Mr. Glickert and Mr. Wagner.

Mr. LaMore: Coronation medal of King Edward VIII, St. Gaudens Unc. $20 gold and other gold coins.

Next meeting will feature Jackson cents and Civil War Tokens.

—Henry H. Zeckser, Secretary.

WASHINGTON (D. C.) NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—The Society held its monthly meeting at the Women's City Club, 736 Jackson Place, N. W., on Monday evening, May 3. Thirteen members were present.

President C. Shirley Leachman reported that he had written to the secretaries of a number of coin clubs throughout the country for information as to whether or not coin collections are taxed in their localities.

Two members reported exhibits during National Coin Week. Mr. Harry R. Deitrick exhibited a complete set of presidential medals and a type collection of U. S. silver dollars at 1707 N. Capitol Street, in Washington, and President Leachman had an exhibit of coins of the United Nations at the Silhouette Shoppe in Alexandria, Va.

President Leachman said three members attended a meeting of the Washington Collectors' Club on April 13: Mr. Deitrick, Capt. Joseph Moss, and himself. Mr. Leachman presented an exhibit of U. S. notes from his collection and Mr. Deitrick showed a type collection of U. S. silver dollars.

The entire program of the May meeting was devoted to exhibits by members. Mr. Edward L. Weikert presented an interesting collection of notes, including sheets of 12 notes each of $1 and $2 denomination; a sheet of 4 notes, consisting of three $10 notes and one $20 note printed together; a $50 gold certificate from the Col. Green collection; and a complete set of Federal Reserve Bank notes, $1 denomination.

Mr. Conger showed eight $1 star notes in consecutive numbers. Mr. Harry Rothwell presented four Mexican revolutionary coins and one note. Mr. W. E. Atwood a number of beautifully mounted U. S. gold coins and ancient coins. Mr. Deitrick had an expertly mounted set of U. S. small cents. Mr. Leachman offered a display of Canadian nickels and English rulers. Mr. Adam Permoda showed two interesting Roman coins which, he said, were struck during Nero's reign at a time when the government was experimenting with various substitutes for scarce metals, just as our own government has done recently. Mr. Frederic E. Hodge exhibited a copy of the recently published monograph: Numismatic Notes and Monographs, No. 99, of A. N. S.: "Sycee Silver," by Col. Phares O. Sigler, a member of the Washington Numismatic Society.

—N. Key Hart, Secretary.

A Complete Set of 33 Different PRESIDENTIAL COINS

At the 1938 A. N. A. CONVENTION we received congratulations from dealers and collectors from coast to coast on producing the finest and most moderately-priced complete set of Presidential Medals to appear on the American market to date. These fine sets were struck for us exclusively from the finest dies that were obtainable and no expense was spared in producing these sets. Being first displayed at the 1938 A. N. A. Convention, they were met with instant success. We were amazed at the extreme interest shown, and we wish to express our thanks for the volume of orders received.

We have found from past experience that there was a strong interest in such sets of medals if moderately priced. We have had these struck at a tremendous expense and know that our predicted volume of sales was not over-estimated. Just how many times have you paid from 25c. to 50c. for just one similar medal? Having this in mind, we have kept the selling price down just as low as possible. Only $2.50 per set of thirty-three (33) coins in aluminum proofs (which amounts to less than 8c. per coin!), or $3.00 per set of uncirculated goldine coins.

These are the first moderately-priced complete sets of Presidential Medals to appear on the market. The coins and holder were designed by us and are unobtainable elsewhere! The aluminum coins are struck in Proofs and if handled carefully will never tarnish or discolor. The goldine coins are lacquered to assure a permanent brilliant finish.

You will find that the die-cut holder has a space for the next Presidential coin. You may write us when our next President is elected and we will be able to supply you with the next coin in this set. By placing the next Presidential coin in this holder you will make your set current for possibly ten years!

These sets are interesting, educational and are reasonably priced. Order one or more sets today, while they are available, for Gifts, Prizes, etc.

Sent Postpaid and Insured! Satisfaction Guaranteed

A Rare Piece in Fractional Currency

Number 56 in the Standard Catalog, bust of Spinner and autograph signatures of Allison and New, is considered an outstanding rarity. We are told by good authority that of these, there are only 12 in existence. The 1943 paper money supplement, prices same at $600.00. We offer this in perfect crisp condition for only $525.

An Unusually Choice Collection of Pattern Cents

We offer a group of 18 all different United States Pattern Cents. It took the former owner about six years to accumulate all these different varieties. All are in brilliant perfect proof condition, and each mounted on an individual card with full descriptions listing the rarity number, and quantity of each piece struck. Several of the cents have less than 100 pieces struck. Of some, only 25 to 50 is the total strike, and of two items, the report lists only 6 to 8 pieces in existence.

To the collector who desires a representative showing of these very interesting coins, here is your opportunity. The price for all, is only $300.

U. S. 1858 Proof Set ----- $160

This set consists of 3c silver, half dime, dime, quarter, half, and silver dollar. Each piece is in perfect brilliant proof. (Note, the mint records list the silver dollar as only 80 pieces being struck).

1½ X 1½

For every practical purpose. I have adopted this size envelope to house all my coins, except Dollar Size.

To conveniently carry coins, as well as hide them safely at home, I had a box made to hold these envelopes.

Believing that others are using this size or may like to use it, I had a limited surplus of these boxes made, which cannot be replaced for the duration.

THE STARS AND STRIPES OVER NEW YORK, 1783

By SUSAN HARVEY DOUGLAS, Caldwell, New Jersey

(A paper read before the New Jersey Numismatic Society, May 13, 1943)

The dramatic event which placed a final exclamation point at the end of the last chapter of our Revolutionary War is graphically told on two modest little medals in my cabinet and, as is so often the case, they bear conflicting testimony to the details of what actually took place. It is this conflict of evidence, so common in the field of American medals, that adds to their interest and doubles the fun I get out of collecting and studying these sign posts along the road down which has developed the American Way.

The day was November 25th, 1783. The two long years since the great victory at Yorktown had been consumed with, first, the year-long negotiations abroad resulting in the Paris Peace Treaty of January 20, 1783, and then the exasperatingly long drawn out arrangements with the British garrison for the final evacuation of New York City. All this was now in the past and the great day had arrived. A great procession was formed with General George Washington and many of his officers at its head to lead the way to the Battery and Fort George, there to take formal possession, and to raise the Stars and Stripes for the first time from the flagstaff of the fort that had been British for 119 years.

The procession reaches its goal, and then unfolds our drama. For there still flew the British Emblem, and in the words of a correspondent to the Pennsylvania Packet, Dec. 2, 1783, the British had "cut away the halyards from the flag staff in the fort and had likewise greased the post." To add insult to injury, the departing Britishers in their small boats waited within hailing distance on their way to their ships to see the celebrants' discomfiture, and to yell ribald jeers across the waters of the harbor. But all was not lost. In the words of an eye-witness, printed in the Connecticut Advertiser, June 30, 1831: "I was on Fort George, and within 2 feet of the flag staff. The halyards were unreeved, the cleats knocked off, the flag staff was slushed, and a sailor boy (not a man) tried three times, and got up about 3 feet when he slipped down. Some persons ran to Mr. Goelet's, iron monger, in Hanover Square (now Pearle St.) and got a hand saw, hatchet, hammer, gimblets and nails; one sawed lengths across the board, one split cleats, and some bored, until they had plenty of them.

JOHN VAN ARSDALE

"The sailor boy tied the halyards around his waist, filled his outside sailor jacket pockets full of cleats, and then began to nail them on from the ground on the right and left of the flagstaff."

The sailor boy's grandson, Mr. James Riker, continues the story as follows: "By this means he got up a short distance, with a line to which our flag was attached; but just then a ladder being brought to his assistance, he mounted still higher, then completed the ascent, tore down the British standard, and rove the new halyards by which the Star Spangled Banner was quickly run up by Lt. Anthony Glean. On descending, Van Arsdale was warmly greeted by the over-joyed spectators, for the service he had rendered. Hats were passed around and a considerable sum was collected," including a generous contribution from General Washington. That evening "an exhibition of fireworks, rockets, blaze of bonfires at every corner made a fitting sequel to the events of the day."

Both of my medals were struck at the time of the centennial celebration in 1883, and were holed for suspension to be worn as badges at that time. The first shows a sailor boy with a hammer drawn back in the act of nailing Old Glory to the staff peak, while the British flag flutters to the ground to the right, and shows the departing British fleet filing out of the bay. It bears the legend "DAVID Van Arsdale Unfurling The American Flag At The Battery." The other shows the sailor boy at the staff peak, waving his cap, with the Stars and Stripes waving to the right and the British flag fluttering down at the left. Below, a crowd of arm-raised cheerers crowd the ramparts of the fort, and in the background the British fleet departs in single file. This bears the legend "John Van Arsdale Removed The British Flag And Nailed The Emblem Of Freedom In Its Place."

DAVID VAN ARSDALE

This intriguing conflict of names is quite credibly and definitely settled in a booklet, "Evacuation Day 1783" published in 1883 by James Riker, New York, from which I have condensed the following picture of his grandfather, the original "Sailor Boy," John Jacob Van Arsdale. Our hero was born to John and Deborah Van Arsdale in Cornwall, Orange County, New York, January 5th, 1756. Following the pattern of his sea going ancestry, he had early taken to the sea, but had enlisted and risen to the rank of Sergeant in the American forces in the war. A bridegroom of but a month, he fell afoul the British in the spring of 1783 and was incarcerated by them in the old Sugar House, Liberty Street, New York, until released just a few days before the evacuation in a final exchange of prisoners. His thinness and prison pallor quite possibly conveyed an impression of youth, and explains the eyewitness description of this 27 year old young man as a "sailor boy." Mr. Riker says that it further served to enlist the sympathy of the spectators of his deed and no doubt swelled the collections in the passed "hats."

The "David" Van Arsdale of my first medal must surely be the Hon. David Van Arsdale, son of our hero and uncle of Mr. James Riker. Aged 81 years, this David was scheduled to play a prominent part in the Centennial celebration of 1883, but his unfortunate death occurred a few days before the anniversary day. Thus, it seems to me, we can account for our not too careful die-sinkers' confusion. Both medalists fell into the same error with regard to the American Flag being "nailed" in place, which is controverted both by the eye-witness letter dated Nov. 26th, 1783, and by the recollections of John Van Arsdale contained in his grandson's pamphlet. Our second artist takes some liberties with the laws of nature in displaying Old Glory streaming in the breeze to the right at the same time the British flag flutters off to the left.

An article in The New York Times, 1934, laments the passing of the annual evacuation day observances saying: "Up to 20 years ago, 1914, the lineal descendants of John Jacob Van Arsdale kept the traditional observance alive. Then it died, no one quite knows why, so dead in fact that recently when the Park Superintendent and the staff at Battery Park were hauling the flag from the staff that marks the site of old Fort George, one could not help noting that it was not even the American Flag, but the City flag. The Stars and Stripes flew at the top of a newer pole to the East."

Having relived those stirring moments of 160 years ago, we can agree with the Times reporter that it is a pity to see their remembrance grow dim, and we can suggest to him as a remedy the advancement of the science of numismatics, and particularly that of its most vital branch, medals of American history.

AN UNKNOWN COIN OF JULIUS CONSTANTIUS?

By HANS HOLZER, Elmhurst, N. Y.

Julius Constantius, brother of the Great Constantine and uncle of the latter's son Constantius II, had no official title as a ruler, but he was a member of his famous brother's Council and as such took part in the Government. Besides, as a member of the Imperial family he held the honorific title of Nobilissimus Caesar, comparable to a princely title of modern times. No coins with this man's portrait or name are generally known to exist.

The Trau collection (Vienna, 1933) gives a bronze follis as belonging to Julius Constantius but the piece shows a rather young bust and in addition is of a much earlier reduction than would have been the case if it really were Julius. As it is, the coin in the Trau Collection should be considered a Constantius II, struck some time between 323 and (about) 333 A. D.

I have in my possession a small follis of the latest reduction-type, undoubtedly struck between 333 and 337, probably after 335 A. D. The coin reads FL IVL CONSTANTIVS NOB C and shows a clear portrait of a man in his sixties or seventies. The bust is laureate, cuirassed and probably also wearing a paludamentum, although the edge is not quite as sharp as the center of the piece. The features are strikingly Roman—eagle-shaped nose, strong chin, high cheek-bones and large eyes; it strongly resembles a portrait of the first Constantius, Chlorus, the father of both Constantine and his brother Julius.

The reverse type is the customary Gloria Exercitus type with two legionairs facing each other and a signum in between them. The mint mark, unfortunately, is not clear, but may have been Siscia in Pannonia.

I think this may be a coin of Julius Constantius rather than Constantius II for the following reasons:

ELECTION MEDALS OF THE CAMPAIGN OF 1844

By DOYLE DeWITT, Bloomfield, Connecticut

MEDALS AND TOKENS OF JAMES K. POLK

No. 1. Obverse: Busts vis-a-vis of Polk and Dallas, each enclosed by oval of 26 stars, surmounted by rays and flying eagle with olive branch in beak; below, POLK DALLAS; 1844 in oval; inscription THE PEOPLES CANDIDATES.

(Satterlee 109). White Metal. 45 mm.

Note A—In contrast to the Whig tokens, the name and bust of Dallas, the vice-presidential candidate is prominently displayed, intentionally no doubt, in view of Polk's obscurity and the recent death of President Harrison and consequent ascendancy of Tyler to the presidency.

Note B—There are twenty-six stars in each oval enclosing the busts—one for each of the twenty-six states in the Union in 1844.

Note C—The eagle, emblematic of America, bears the olive branch of Peace.

Note D—THE PEOPLES CANDIDATES is one of many similar political catch-phrases and has no special significance here. Candidati, men in white of Roman antiquity, were seekers of office who wore flowing white robes. White, as the symbol of fidelity and humility, and the loose robes so they might show the people their scars.

Note E—The device on the reverse, embodying a spinning wheel, sheep, agricultural implements, tobacco cask and ship—emblems and implements of domestic American industry, is one of many of its type, familiar to the student of the political tokens of this period. It was employed to symbolize the tariff issue. So far as I know, it was the only campaign token of Polk bearing such a device, but what an important event it represents! The tariff law of 1842 was very popular with the manufacturing interests of the North and particularly in Pennsylvania. Polk, with a reputation as a "Free Trader" was anxious to counteract this sentiment which would favor Clay very greatly. About three weeks after his nomination, he wrote a letter to a citizen of Pennsylvania named Kane, in which he seemed to favor a protective tariff. Upon publication of the letter the Democrats promptly adopted the slogan, "Polk, Dallas, and the Tariff of 1842." Paradoxically, Clay was cried down as the enemy of "Protection." Thus one of Clay's biographers was to write, "Mr. Polk was quoted as the foremost free-trade philosopher in one place (the South), while in another (Pennsylvania), he was depicted on banners and in woodcuts, surrounded by emblems of domestic industry, and extending a most paternal protection to American products and manufacturers. * * * By such acts of chicanery were the people swindled out of their votes!" (Life of Henry Clay by Epes Sargent, p. 251.) Thus, Clay lost the vital State of Pennsylvania to Polk, and may we not properly speculate that this token received wide circulation in Pennsylvania?

Note F—SUCCESS WILL CROWN OUR EFFORTS—I can find no specific significance in this inscription.

Note A—Both busts are unusually large and comparatively well executed. Here again the bust and name of the vice presidential candidate were displayed in the same prominence as the presidential candidate.

No. 3. Obverse: Inscription, PRESS ONWARD. ENLARGE THE BOUNDARIES OF FREEDOM. YOUNG HICKORY.; draped bust of Polk to left with R. LOVETT (engraver) below.

Note A—PRESS ONWARD. ENLARGE THE BOUNDARIES OF FREEDOM—refers to the Texas and Oregon question. Resolution 12 of the Democratic platform, adopted at the National Convention, provided that "the reoccupation of Oregon and the reannexation of Texas at the greatest practicable period, are great American measures, which this convention recommends to the cordial support of the democracy of the Union." During the campaign, George Bancroft, Democratic candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, in advocating the acquisition of Texas and Oregon, coined the expression "extending the area of freedom." One of the true intellectuals of the Democratic party in this period, he was defeated in the election for governor, but was later to be appointed Secretary of the Navy in Polk's cabinet and still later was to become an eminent American historian.

Note B—YOUNG HICKORY—was a popular campaign appellation for Polk. The Democrats had been hard put for a leader upon whom they could bestow this legacy with decorum. They had tried it on Van Buren but it was too incongruous to stick. But, the proximity of Polk's birthplace to that of "Old Hickory" and his personal friendship with "The General" earned it for him and assured him of the support of "Jackson men." The official campaign newspaper was called "The Young Hickory Banner."

Note C—EQUAL PROTECTION TO ALL CLASSES—is predicated upon Resolution 4 of the Democratic platform which declared in part "that every citizen has a right to demand and insist upon * * * complete and ample protection of persons and property."

No. 4. Obverse: Inscription, JAS. K. POLK G. M. DALLAS; accollated busts to left with SMITH (engraver) below.

Reverse: Inscription around, THE FIRM AND FEARLESS ADVOCATES OF DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES, enclosing inscription JAS. K. POLK./BORN NOV. 20, 1795./MEM'R LEGISLA'E 1823/ENT'D CONGRESS 1825/ELECT'D SPEAKER 1835/GOVERNOR OF TENNE. 1838/—/GEO. M. DALLAS./BORN JULY 10TH 1792/U. S. SENATOR 1831/MINISTER TO/RUSSIA, 1837.

(Satterlee 114). White Metal. 35 mm.

Note A—THE FIRM AND FEARLESS ADVOCATES OF DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES—Since the origin of our political parties, the nominees for president and vice president have been almost uniformly presented to the public as the foremost advocates of the principles or platform adopted by the party. The Democratic platform of 1844, cited "that the liberal principles embodied by Jefferson in the Declaration of Independence * * * have ever been cardinal principles in the democratic faith."

Note B—The delineation of the public career of a candidate upon medals struck in his cause was a somewhat common practice of the time.

Note C—JAS. K. POLK. BORN NOV. 2D, 1795—On this date Polk was born in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina.

MEM'R LEGISILA'E 1823—He was elected to the Legislature of Tennessee in 1825, after an extensive speaking campaign which earned him the title of the "Napoleon of the Stump."

ENT'D CONGRESS 1825—In August 1825 he was elected to Congress from the Duck River district where he resided. He was reelected at every succeeding election until 1839.

ELECT'D SPEAKER 1835—His vigorous support of Jackson's measures in Congress resulted in his being elected Speaker of the House in 1835. He held that post until 1839.

GOVERNOR OF TENNE. 1838—He was nominated as the Democratic candidate for Governor of Tennessee in 1838. He resigned from Congress in 1839 and was elected Governor in the ensuing campaign. In 1841, he was defeated for reelection as Governor and again in 1843.

Note D—GEORGE M. DALLAS. BORN JULY 10TH 1792—On this date Dallas was born in Philadelphia.

U. S. SENATOR 1831—For his active part in Jackson's presidential campaigns of 1824 and 1828, he was appointed U. S. Attorney for Philadelphia, from which position he was appointed a United States Senator in 1831. He declined reelection in 1833.

MINISTER TO RUSSIA, 1837—President Van Buren appointed him Minister to Russia in 1837, from which post he was recalled in 1839, at his own request, whereupon he resumed his occupation as a Philadelphia lawyer.

No. 5. Obverse: Inscription, JAMES K. POLK; head to right.

(Satterlee 115). White Metal. 27 mm.

Note A—POLK, DALLAS, TEXAS—was a popular and effective slogan as evidenced by the following anecdote related by one of Polk's biographers. After election, when Polk was proceeding to Washington by steamboat on the Ohio River, a working man grasped his hand and said, "I am a strong Democrat, and did all I could for you. I am the father of twenty-six children, who were all for Polk, Dallas and Texas." (Lives of the Presidents, by John S. C. Abbott, p. 292.)

Note B—The lone star on the Liberty pole symbolizes Polk's advocacy of the annexation of Texas.

SHELL TOKENS OF JAMES K. POLK

No. 6. Obverse: Inscription, JAMES K. POLK FRIEND OF EQUAL RIGHTS, enclosing bust to left with small initial T (engraver) on coat.

Reverse: Inscription, YOUNG HICKORY DALLAS & VICTORY, enclosing bust of Dallas to left with small initial T (engraver) on coat.

(The obverse and reverse shells are joined by a flat frame with relief decorations on obverse and reverse.)

(Satterlee 116). Gilt Brass Shell. 25 mm.

Note A—Brass shells are not known before 1844. Impressions were made upon very thin sheets of metal or shells. The sheets were joined to form the obverse and reverse of a medal which was usually ringed at the top so that it could be worn. The center was hollow and thus a "shell" was formed. Similarly, one sheet or shell was joined with a shanked back to make the popular gilt brass button.

Note B—FRIEND OF EQUAL RIGHTS—The 4th plank in the Democratic platform read "every citizen and every section of the country has a right to demand and insist upon an equality of rights and privileges."

Note C—YOUNG HICKORY—refers not to Dallas, but to Polk. See Note 3-B.

No. 7. Obverse: Inscription, JAMES K. POLK, nine stars, enclosing head to right; raised ornamental floral border.

Reverse: Inscription, JAMES K POLK GEORGE M DALLAS; center, a star inscribed with initial T, in circle, wreath and beaded circle.

(Satterlee 117). Gilt Brass Shell. 25 mm.

Note A—This head of Polk is so similar to the head of Henry Clay on a shell used in the 1844 campaign (No. 60) that it seems probable the engraver simply copied one from the other.

Note B—The lone star with the initial T again symbolizes the Texas question.

No. 8. Obverse: Inscription, JAMES K. POLK, draped bust to right; raised ornamental floral border.

Reverse: J. K. POLK/&G. M. DALLAS/; above, a large star inscribed with raised initial T; all enclosed in scallop border; inscriptions and decorations incuse.

(Satterlee 118). Gilt Brass Shell. 25 mm.

Note A—Star inscribed T. See Note 7-B.

THE 1944 STANDARD CATALOGUE OF UNITED STATES COINS

It appears the principal feature in the new catalogue will be the arrangement of all U. S. coins chronologically instead of the mint classification formerly employed. Collectors have requested this change for some time and their wishes have now been granted, although it must have necessitated tearing the catalogue completely apart to assemble in the new form.

Price changes in every series will show the great increase in interest; some of them are rather startling but the editor assures us they reflect the present day demand. The Pattern section has been augmented by the silver dollars described in detail and portrayed on six splendid new plates.

The Philippine coinage has been specialized and valued in complete detail. These coins are now said to be in great demand. A very interesting section on Hawaiian coinage has also been added.

Probably the most desirable addition to the catalogue will be the "General Information," given as an addenda and covering all branches of U. S. coins.

Announcement has been made that in spite of the increased cost of production the price will remain the same, although the publishers have apparently felt it necessary to omit the Hard Times and Merchants Tokens.

DENARII OF THE TWELVE CAESARS OF ROME

By RICHARD T. HOOBER, Philadelphia

(This paper was presented by the author at a meeting of the Philadelphia Coin Club in January, 1941, and he used lantern slides to supplement his discussion of the subject. The illustrations in the text were made from denarii in Mr. Hooper's collection.—Ed.)

The denarius of Rome was first coined about the year 268 B. C., and from then until 330 A. D. was the standard silver coin of the Roman people. Although the earlier coins were not comparable to the Greek standard of art, they were of good silver content, and it was not until the time of the Empire that they were depreciated. In spite of these changes it lasted as a monetary unit nearly 500 years. The high excellence of Greek coins may be due in part to the fact that Greece had a difficult struggle for existence with powerful competitors on almost equal terms, while Rome was all-powerful, had no equals, and its coins were the emissaries of a politically predominant state.

Under the Republic, the right of minting ordinary currency was vested in the people, namely, the Consuls, and it remained for Caesar to inaugurate a fundamental change in 49 B. C., when he eliminated the constitutional restriction of the right of military coinage, which was held in abeyance so long as the magistrate, who collected taxes, sold booty, etc., remained within the walls of the city. When on a campaign, Caesar, like all generals, was his own master, and the people of Rome could not be called together to register their own decrees. He needed money to pay his soldiers, and so took recourse in his "Imperium," defying all precedents by striking a military coinage within the walls of Rome, and this act was the foundation upon which the whole coinage of the Empire rested. When the Imperial system was completely organized by Augustus, only a very subordinate function was assigned to the Senatorial mint, which formerly had been supreme. This reorganization saw the establishment of 18 mints throughout the Empire. He also continued the innovation made by Julius, of depicting his own portrait on his coins, although this practice was common in Greece 150 years before, during the reign of Flaminus, who crushed Philip of Macedon.

This denarius of Julius Caesar has on the obverse his laureated head, a crescent, and CAESAR. IMP. The crescent is symbolic of his instituting the Julian calendar, by adopting the solar over lunar method of computing time, and so necessitated the addition of 67 days the first year to correct past errors. The abbreviation IMP. following the name was merely a military title, and only under the Empire when the people became used to sovereignty do we find Imperator used before the name. His portrait on the coins was a sign to the world of his de facto rule of the Romans, which is further indicated by the civil war that followed close upon his assassination. He was also the first ruler whose head was laureated, with the excuse it was to cover his baldness. But both practices later became general. Use of heraldic devices on the reverse became obsolete, and under the Empire the use of deities and personifications grew: Courage, Justice, sketches of buildings, and notable names.

AUGUSTUS—27 B. C.—14 A. D.

In the center of this reverse is a figure of Venus the Victorious, holding an image of Victory in her right hand, and around it, L. AEMILIUS BUCA, who was chief moneyer, or head of the mint; but all mention of such office died with Julius. Prior to 36 B. C., the moneyer used a cap, spear, or prow to symbolize his office. Later he added his initials, then his name.

This silver coin of Caius Octavius Caepius Augustus shows the laureated head of Augustus and inscription CAESAR AUGUSTO, the latter mostly missing. There were over 250 types of denarii issued under Augustus, which may be accounted for in part by the fact that he is reputed to have been a collector himself. The word CAESAR was given him by his foster-father, Julius, in honor of his services to Rome. Augustus reduced the weight of the monetary unit to  $\frac{1}{2}$  oz. or less, and becoming of uncertain value, it was superseded by the sestertius, or "first bronze." The wreath shown is symbolic of honors received from the Senate in commemoration of his victories. When he was created Emperor in 29 B. C., coinage became Imperial, at which time he added the titles TRIBUNE and P. M.

The temple on the reverse is probably that of Mars, and the legionary eagle is perched on a shaft in the chariot. The chariot and columns were symbols of triumph. The letters S. P. Q. R. stand for Senatus Populusque Romanus and mean "the Senate and the Roman people." By his bringing to an end the Sicilian wars, all arches, statues, and triumphal cars were by universal and enthusiastic consent dedicated to him by Senate and people. Therefore this reverse may by symbol be indicative of that special victory.

TIBERIUS—14-37

CALIGULA—37-41

We here show the laureated head of Tiberius, and around it the inscription TI. CAESAR. DIVI. AUG. F. AUGUSTUS; on the reverse a seated figure of Livia, mother of Tiberius, holding a staff, and the title MAXIM. PONTIF. Tiberius abstained from using the title Imperator as a prenomen, using merely TI. CAESAR, but allowed himself to be called Imperator in a military sense. When he returned victorious to Rome he was adopted by Augustus and took the name of Tiberius Caesar, and was one of the cruelest rulers. Most of the great families of his Rome were ruined by his high taxes, and he spent the last years of his life on Capri in sordid vice, finally being slain by order of Caligula. DIVI. AUG. was in honor of the deified Augustus, a practice quite common among succeeding Emperors. After his accession, Tiberius assumed the MAXIM PONTIF title. The figure of Livia symbolizes his high regard for his mother, although she was one of the worst and cruelest of women, and from her he probably acquired much of his terroristic behavior.

This is a rare denarius of Caius Caligula and shows his unlaureated head, and around it the inscription C. CAESAR. AUG. GERM. P. M. T. R. POT. On the reverse the unlaureated head of Claudius, and GERMANICUS. CAES. P. C. CAES. AUG. GERM. The name Caligula means puttee or leggings, and this was his much-hated nickname, always preferring Caius. Coins of Caligula do not bear the surname of Imperator, but it is found on colonial coins of his reign. His profile is particularly malignant; he was ever at great pains to cherish this horrid index of his cruel disposition. He assumed the title of Augustus, and Germanicus was a family name. The TR. POT. stands for Tribunitia Potestas, a power granted each year on the same day. As there is no numeral following it, it signifies the first year of his power, which was 38 A. D. Later renewals were followed by numerals II, III, etc., thus affording chronologists an index to actual dates of many coins. The TR. POT. was the foundation, inviolability, and sign of power which the Emperors never forgot to mention. The P. C. CAES. AUG. GERM. stands for the name Pater Caii Caesaris Germanicus, who was the father of Caligula.

On this denarius of Claudius is shown his laureated head and the inscription CAESAR. AUG. P. M. TR. POT. XI. IMP. P. P. COS(V?): on the reverse a figure of Peace in the form of a winged Victory walking, and lifting the border of her robe to her face and holding in her hand a caduceus. Before her feet is a serpent, and the inscription AUGUSTAE. Claudius was a timid man as was shown by his hiding in the palace when Caligula was killed, but the soldiers forced him to become Emperor. He was a kindly man, and during his reign made many concessions to Herod and rulers of the East.

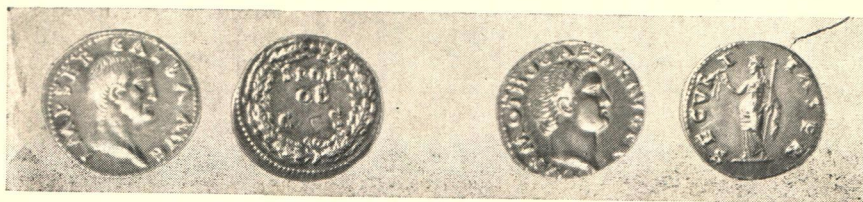

P. M. was conferred upon him, as was the title IMP. XI after TR. P. shows that this coin was minted during the year 51 A. D. The P. P. is for Pater Patriae, Father of the Country, while COS. V. shows it to have been struck during his fifth Consulship. The Goddess of Peace on the reverse is to express the manifold virtues of the Emperor and the public happiness enjoyed under his government. He had conducted numerous victorious campaigns, had spent large sums on the docks at Ostia and on other improvements.

This coin of Nero shows his laureated head and the inscription IMP. NERO. CAESAR. AUG. P. P.; on the reverse the figure of Salus holding a patera and wearing the stola. In the exergue, SALUS. Nero ascended the throne at the age of 17 in 54 A. D. A good denarius of Nero is hard to find as most of them were struck off center and were more oval than round, and often cracked. This last might be due to the fact that he devalued the currency, and the alloy when heated and struck was less malleable. There are not many varieties under Nero, and the lettering is not at all unusual; he merely states his titles on the obverse, being less cryptic than most of the other Emperors.

However, the reverse does need some explanation. The figure of Salus seated signifies the Roman goddess of Health, the same as Hygeia, worshipped by the Greeks. She is usually holding the patera, seated on an ornamental throne. Her figure on coins indicates that the Emperor was suffering from some disease, on which account sacred rites had been performed. This figure is common on the coins of Nero, who made frequent vows for his health. He instituted "certamina" which, after the Greek fashion, consisted of music, gymnastics and equestrianism, to which he gave the appellation Neronia. The motive for this was declared to be "the safety and prolongation of his own reign," and he in this contest bore off first prize for harp-playing, as all other competitors were adjudged as being unworthy of it. The festival was repeated every five years. Tacitus states that for his escape from a plot against his life in the year of Rome 818, he erected a temple to Salus. But so little did he care for the health of others that he made this conspiracy against his life a pretext for sacrificing hundreds to his revenge. He finally stabbed himself to death, probably the loneliest man in the Empire, after living a vicious life.

We have here a very excellent denarius of Galba, bearing his unlaureated head and the inscription IMP. SER. GALBA. AUG.; on the reverse a wreath within which are S. P. Q. R., OB. C. S. Galba was seldom shown on his coins wearing a wreath. OB. C. S. stands for Ob Cives Servatos; thus a translation of these letters is "The Senate and the Roman people thank their Emperor for preserving the citizens." These letters are also found on some coins of Augustus and Caligula. The encircling oak wreath was a symbol of the favors granted to Galba by the Senate, as he was a favorite of the Senators, but this type was struck only for some of the Emperors. Each Emperor celebrated his accession by such choice of types as seemed to answer his immediate needs. The most distinctive title, "Augustus," was regularly assumed by each.

Next comes an excellent denarius bearing the unlaureated head of Otho, and IMP. M. OTHO. CAESAR. AUG. P. M.; on the reverse a standing figure of Security dressed in matron's habit, holding in her left hand a staff, and in her right a wreath; the inscription, SECURITAS. P. R. Otho conspired against Nero and against Galba, who was slain, and Otho was proclaimed Emperor. Vitellius was at the same time proclaimed Emperor in Gaul, and proceeded to march on Rome. Otho led his troops out to meet him in battle, and in the beginning won some skirmishes, but when a major engagement took place at Caneto, and Otho's troops were defeated, he chose to kill himself, having reigned but three months and seven days, at the age of 37 years. No Roman bronze was struck during his reign, only gold and silver. This was because the Senate felt angered when the army made him Emperor, and they refused to exercise their right of striking bronze coinage in his honor. Security was represented in many poses of ease and comfort, sometimes seated, and also standing, leaning against a pillar. SECURITAS. P. R. means the security of the Roman people.

This denarius shows the unlaureated head of Vitellius, and the inscription A. VITELLIUS. GERMAN. IMP. TR. P.; on the reverse, the figure of Concordia, seated, holding a patera, and CONCORDIA P. R. Vitellius spent his youth on Capri with Tiberius; he was also the favorite of Caligula and Nero. His habits and gluttony were so disgraceful that Vespasian, who was in command of the war against the Jews, was persuaded to return and was declared Emperor. After a reign of eight months, Vitellius was captured by his successor's men and killed.

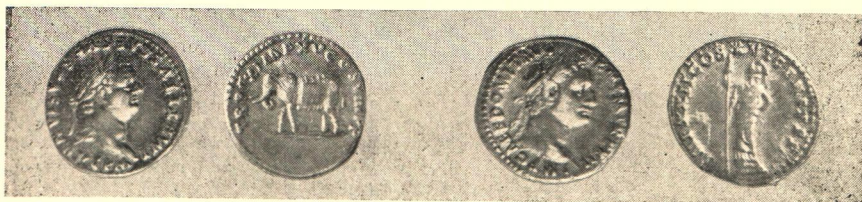

He accepted the cognomen of Germanicus upon his accession, deferred assuming the title of Augustus, and refused forever that of Caesar. P. R. stands for Populi Romani, the people of Rome. Concordia was the object of religious faith and worship, because through her authority and influence "small things were rendered great." A magnificent temple was erected to her in Rome, which after being consumed by fire, was rebuilt by the Senate and the people. The feast of this diety was celebrated on the 16th of January, and she was often worshipped under the figure of a stork or dove. However, her usual representation was that of a woman.

On the obverse of this denarius is the laureated head of Vaspasian, and around it, CAESAR. VESPASIANUS. AUG. On the reverse is a seated figure of the goddess Annona, with the inscription ANNONA. AUG. Vespasian was of low extraction, but rose rapidly to prominence. In 71 A. D., he returned to Rome from the siege of Jerusalem to become Emperor, leaving in charge his son, Titus. When Titus, too, returned from this great victory, the two celebrated their triumph together in the festivals. He was 20 times Imperator, nine times Consul, and received the Tribunitia Potestas 10 times. He died in 79 A. D. at the age of 69 years.

There has been some controversy concerning this coin, especially about the reverse; it is described in Mediobarbus and was given as struck under Vespasian, but judging from the lack of any mention by Eckhels, Mionnet, and Aker, Annona does not appear on any of the three metals minted under Vespasian. However, this Emperor had good cause to honor the goddess, were it only in grateful reference to the prompt and liberal supply of corn, which by his provident care was sent in ships to the port of Rome during a period of great scarcity. Annona was worshipped as a goddess who prospered the year's increase, and Nero was the first to picture this deity on any coin, but prior to that time she had been symbolized on money by six ears of corn tied together.

DOMITIAN-81-96

Here is an excellent denarius showing the unlaureated head of Titus, with IMP. TITUS. CAES. VESPASIAN. AUG. P. M. On the reverse is the figure of an elephant, and around it, TR. P. XI. MP. XV. COS. VIII. P. P. After his father, Vespasian, returned to Rome, Titus carried on the war against the Jews, continuing the siege of the old city of Jerusalem, and it was finally taken by assault on September 8th, 70 A. D. The city was then destroyed, after having flourished for 2100 years, and its defense cost the lives of more than 1,200,000 Jews. For this achievement the soldiers proclaimed him Emperor, and in 80 A. D. he received the title Augustus, and then we find that IMP., which was invariably added last on previous coins of Titus, now is placed first. In 81 A. D. he was given the title of T. IMP. CAES. Later the same year, on the 13th of September, he was poisoned by his wicked brother Domitian. The TR. P. XI indicates this coin was minted during the final year of his life. The elephant on the reverse was often used as a symbol of triumph by the Emperors, also a symbol of the procession of the Circus. It appears on many coins of all types throughout the history of the Empire. The elephants were occasionally hitched to the cars of the Emperors, but probably due to their cumbersome appearance, horses became the rule. This particular symbol of victory is probably reminiscent of the victory over the Jews. The elephant, in addition to being known as "the triumphal beast," was also a symbol of Africa, and, too, of eternity.

This final denarius shows the laureated head of Domitian, with IMP.CAES.DOMIT.AUG.GERM.P.M.TR.P.XII. On the reverse is a standing figure of Victory, holding a spear; the inscription is IMP.XXII. COS.XVI.CENS.P.P.P. Domitian engaged in many secret and open plots against his brother, and when Titus was finally slain, was declared Emperor in 81 A. D. In 83 A. D. Agricola, that brave and able commander, finally ascertained for the first time in history that Britain was entirely surrounded by water. The title of Germanicus appeared for the first time on Domitian's coins in 84 A. D., and he reigned for 15 years and six days, finally being slain at the instigation of his wife, at the age of 45 years. Immediately after his death, the Senate ordered all busts, statues, etc., destroyed and all titles and honors erased. TR.P.XII dates the coin as being minted during the year 94 A. D. But the odd part of this coin is the CENS. P.P.P. (Censor Perpetuus Pater Patriae), as Domitian was the first Emperor on whose coins the perpetual assumption of the Censorial power is recorded. He took this authority in 87 A. D. The figure of Victory on the reverse is self-explanatory.

In conclusion I might point out that the moneys of the Roman Empire have left their impress upon the modern world, long after the actual use of them has been forgotten, when we realize that the three denominations of English currency at the present time, the £, s, and d (pounds, shillings, and pence), have their origin in the libra, solidus, and denarius. And so, for the collector of ancient moneys, the denarius has gone hand in hand with history, adding specific data to otherwise vague conjectures, and remaining through the ages graphic evidence of the greatness achieved by Rome, followed by decadence and complete oblivion.

MORE ABOUT THE GEORGE WASHINGTON HALF DISME

To the Editor:

Being a frequent visitor to "Leary's" myself I immediately recognized the notes on the "Half Disme" as discovered by Edward B. Haden and printed in the May issue of THE NUMISMATIST. Dated April 9, 1844, these notes are signed in faded, hardly legible brown ink, J—Mc—; someone obviously trying to identify the author has written in pencil "I. McAllister." But after a little study of the other notes in the front of the book, [I find] the original author was Jonas R. McClintock. According to the "History of the U. S. Mint" by Evans, he was an officer and refiner in the Mint during the middle of the last century, and a good friend of Adam Eckfeldt, the Chief Coiner, and who as a boy in 1792 helped forge the dies for the "Half Disme."

I hope this will answer Mr. Haden's query as to the author of the only accurate unofficial statement of the Mint on those mysterious half dismes of General Washington.

THE CHICAGO COIN CLUB

By M. A. POWILLS, Chicago

The author of the following article, written on invitation of the Editor, served as Librarian and Curator, and also as Secretary of the Club some years ago; he is also a member of the American Numismatic Association, the American Numismatic Society, the Brazilian Numismatic Society, and of both the Iowa and the Central States Numismatic Associations.

While this article is intended as a review of the history of the Chicago Coin Club, a preface to the early numismatics of Chicago would also seem proper. However, there is no direct relationship between the early Chicago Numismatic Society and the present Chicago Coin Club. It is an acknowledged fact though that it contributed a seasoned personnel and an enthusiastic nucleus of collectors through whose experience and foresight the foundation was laid for the present organization.

Chicago Numismatic Society

In retrospect we may then properly identify the first association of numismatics with the Chicago Numismatic Society. The Society was organized in 1903 and terminated in 1915. It has left to posterity the following series of medals, which will undoubtedly be of particular interest to the medal collector:

1. Obverse: Chicago Numismatic Society in three lines. Three five pointed stars above and below. Words separated by Maltese cross flanked by two dots on each side. Border of dots. Reverse; Chicago Collectors Club. Words similarly arranged and with decorations similar to obverse. Size 32. Bronze.

2. Reception Token. Obverse: Chicago Numismatic Society, Souvenir—Masonic Temple—Presidential Greetings at Opening Reception—New Rooms—May 3, 1907. Reverse: Rarest U. S. Gold Coins, $10, 1798, $70; $5, 1822, $2,165; $3, 1875, $400; $2½, 1797, $210; $1, 1875, $60; Silver $1, 1804, $2000; 50c, 1796, $225; 25c, 1823, $400; 10c, 1804, $125; 5c, 1802, $290; Copper, 1c, 1793, $235; ½c, 1845, $110. Octagonal Bronze, Size 32½.

These two tokens were struck by William Dunham, at the time President of the Society. The values given to the coins on the reverse of the second token were the prices paid by him for such coins in his collection.

3. Membership Medal of Chicago Numismatic Society. Obverse: Chicago Numismatic Society. Organized MCMIII. Three inner circles, first a line, second, dots, third, cord. In field, representation of reverse type of ancient Athenian tetradrachm, with owl, spray of olive and inscription AΘE. Reverse: To Members Who Honored the Society by Joining its Ranks in 1910. Seventh year. Surrounded by row of stars. The number of stars was equal to the number of members admitted during the year. The dies were cut by J. H. Ripstra, whose name appears below the device on the obverse. This medal was given to each member at the end of the year during which he joined the Society. Bronze. Size 50.

4. Fiftieth Meeting Medal. Obverse: Chicago Numismatic Society, Indian head. Reverse: Commemorating 50th Meeting, 1908. Size 35. Bronze. (It is believed some were struck in silver.)

5. The Nashville Medal. Obverse: representation of U. S. gunboat Nashville. Cord border. Reverse: Arrival of U. S. S. Nashville in Chicago Harbor, June 5, 1909. Fired first shot in Spanish American War. Chicago Numismatic Society. Medallie Series 1909. Rectangular plaque. Size 76x38. The dies for this medal were cut by J. Henri Ripstra, whose name appears on the obverse, below the device. These were struck in bronze and silver.

6. The Aviation Medal. Obverse: Icarus, poised on a rock with his wings of wax outstretched. Below are aeroplanes, dirigible airships and balloons in flight. Reverse: Progress in Aviation. Chicago Numismatic Society, Medallie Series MCMX. Above all, a condor in full flight with outstretched wings. Bronze. Size 50.

The design was chosen by competition among advanced students of the Art Institute. A prize of twenty dollars was offered for the accepted design, five dollars for second choice, and honorable mention to third choice. Later Virgil Brand added ten dollars to the first and second prizes and five dollars to the third prize. The accepted design was made by Carl Schreiber, second Irma Buck, third by Fred M. Torry, and honorable mention to Harry Weinbrenner. The dies were cut by machine by the Whitehead Hoag Co. of Newark, New Jersey. The work on the medal is not as good as on the others issued by the Society.

7. One Hundredth Meeting Medal. Obverse: the field is occupied by the owl, spray of olive, and inscribed AΘE, from the Athenian tetradrachm. Surrounded by the inscription Chicago Numismatic Society. Reverse: One Hundredth Meeting May 3, 1912. Bronze. Size 30½.

These medals were distributed at a dinner at the Palmer House, which preceded the One Hundredth Meeting, which was held in the club rooms in the Masonic Temple.

Branch No. 1, A. N. A., Chicago

Unlike the Chicago Numismatic Society, which enjoyed an existence of twelve years, Branch No. 1 of the American Numismatic Association, in spite of an enthusiastic start, flourished for only a few years.

With the revision of the Constitution of the American Numismatic Association at the Rochester convention in 1912, authorizing local coin club branches, and under the impetus of Theophile E. Leon, Ben Green and Judson Brenner, Branch No. 1 was hastily organized at the convention. The first meeting in Chicago took place on November 12th, 1912, with thirteen members present. Ben Green, the eminent coin dealer, was elected President and Miss Molly Naerup, Secretary. The death of Ben Green occurred in January, 1914, and within a few months thereafter Branch No. 1 ceased to function.

For the next two years collectors had to be satisfied with week-end visits to the coin shops. Finally, in February, 1917, a general meeting with a view to reorganizing Branch No. 1, under the guidance of Theophile

AVIATION MEDAL—C. N. S.—BY SCHREIBER

E. Leon, was called in dealer C. S. Stevens' office, with ten persons present. Leon was elected President and R. E. Davis, Secretary. The dues were fixed at 25 cents a year. In 1918, John Kelly was made President and the following year, C. N. Hinckley, with R. E. Davis retaining the secretaryship. The membership was restricted to A. N. A. members, but with the increasing number of coin collectors, whose primary interest was a local club affiliation, Branch No. 1 finally gave way to the present Club.

The following tokens or membership cards were issued:

1. Branch One, A. N. A. Membership Card, 1913. Obverse: Chicago Branch 1, American Numismatic Association Membership Card. Border of dots. Reverse: Receipt for dues 1913. Issued to Member No. (figures incuse). Border of dots. Rectangular, Size 20x51. Brass.

2. Branch One, A. N. A. Membership Card, 1914. Obverse: Same as above. Border of dots, outside of which is a border of small stars. Reverse: Receipt for dues 1914. Issued to Member No. (figures incuse). Border of arrows. Rectangular, Size 20x51. Brass.

These tokens were given to members of Branch One during 1913 and 1914. They were presented to the Society by Theophile E. Leon in 1913 and by Harry F. Williams in 1914.

Chicago Coin Club

With the adjournment of Branch No. 1 on January 10, 1919, the incumbent officers consisting of C. N. Hinckley, President, Alden Scott Boyer, Vice President, R. E. Davis, Secretary, and three appointed members, M. P. Carey, John Kelly and Theophile E. Leon, reconvened to frame by-laws for the Chicago Coin Club. The first meeting took place on February 14, 1919, at the Sherman Hotel, with fifteen persons present. The aforementioned officers were re-elected. The new By-laws were approved, the dues fixed at $1.00 per year, and those elected to or applying for membership prior to March 5, 1919, were to be thereafter known as Charter Members. At the following meeting membership numbers were drawn by lot, with thirty-three enrolled as Charter Members.

With the growth of the Club those simple By-Laws have undergone extensive revision; yet their basic principles have been the standard by which the Chicago Coin Club may proudly measure its success. They are the foundation on which the democratic spirit can function for the best interests of numismatics: the right of individual expression and a deep rooted respect for the fraternity.

Achievements and Contributions

From the small nucleus of thirteen members the Chicago Coin Club has increased to approximately one hundred and twenty-five. The average monthly attendance is about eighty members and guests. However, its success is not to be judged alone from the large attendance. In keeping with Chicago's spirit of "I Will," it can modestly feel proud of the many honors which have been bestowed upon its members.

Five A. N. A. conventions have been held in Chicago, the first on October 7, 1891, and the latest during "A Century of Progress," in August, 1933. Of these the C. C. C. can claim credit for three. It has likewise given the American Numismatic Association several Presidents, two of whom are native sons, namely, Alden Scott Boyer and J. Henri Ripstra. The no less important office of the A. N. A. General Secretary was held by Harry T. Wilson, who so faithfully served the Association for many years, and M. Vernon Sheldon, who has since taken over.

The contributions to numismatics by the membership as a whole have been extensive, and the following are a typical cross section: Paul Pennington, the Club's present President, whose numerous articles on Roman coinage are too well known to require discussion; Don C. Keefer, the eminent authority on Chinese numismatics; the late R. E. Davis, for his contributions on the numismatics of Illinois; J. Henri Ripstra, designer, die-engraver and medallist; William G. Rayson, whose extensive knowledge of English coins ranks him as an expert; and Ragnar Cedarlund, whose cabinet of Jenny Lind medals and Swedish plate money is acknowledged to be one of the finest private collections in the country.

Publication

A most important link between the membership and the Club is the Chicago Coin Club Bulletin. The first issue appeared in March, 1936, as a quarterly; however, as an economy war measure, the publication was changed to an annual in 1942.

Library

While the library is necessarily limited, it does embrace a useful collection of books which are available to all members as a loan for one month. The Librarian is an appointive office, which William Evans has so successfully filled for several years.

Future

Incorporated in January 1938 under the laws of the State of Illinois as a non-pecuniary profit organization, and with a Life Membership in the A. N. A., generously presented by M. Vernon Sheldon, the Chicago Coin Club, can in the light of its past progress, look forward to a long and useful future. It has the spirit of a great city—synonymous with progress—and the inspiration of R. E. Davis, a genuine numismatist, whose unfailing interest and enthusiasm will be an enduring memory in the minds and hearts of all who knew him.

A CHALLENGE

“And if our lines should form and break
Because of things you failed to make,
The extra tank or ship or plane
For which we waited, all in vain,
And the supplies that never came,
Will you then come and take the blame?
For we, not you, will pay the cost
Of battles you, not we, have lost.”

FROM THE ROYAL CANADIAN MINT

An interesting official report on the operations of the Royal Canadian Mint during 1942 has been received through the courtesy of Mr. H. E. Ewart, Master.

Working from 16 to 24 hours daily, the Mint produced 108,186,000 pieces, with a face value of $5,078,500. In addition to these there were executed for the Government of Newfoundland 2,587,973 with a total value of $64,159.89. No gold was used; the silver coins consisted of 10, 25, and 50-cent pieces; nickel 5-cent pieces were struck to a value of $361,575.50, and the tombac 5-cent piece totaled $169,424.50. The 1-cent bronze issue topped the list numerically with 48,350,000 pieces.

The discontinuance of the nickel 5-cent piece was the result of the necessity of conserving this metal for war purposes, and a new coin, dodecagonal (12-sided) in shape, composed of 88 per cent copper and 12 per cent zinc, was substituted. This alloy of metals is called "tombac," the name deriving from Malay "tombaga," a popular alloy for jewelry in the East Indies. The pure nickel coin it displaced was added to the Canadian currency in 1922 to replace the small silver 5-cent piece; after twenty years of service it gives way to this new alloy for, it is stated, "the duration of the war." May one conclude it is the intention of the Government to resume coinage of pure nickel when conditions permit?

The Mint regards the composition as sound economy, for "the metallic content is such that if and when the need arises for redemption of these coins, when nickel again takes its place in coinage, they can be converted into bronze coin by the addition of tin and copper in their proper proportions."

It is evident the original design was distinctly one of twelve sides and twelve angles, but was modified to the extent of slightly rounding the corners to enable it to be used satisfactorily in the pay telephone and change making mechanisms. It is not stated whether any of the original specimens were released: perhaps President Ferguson can enlighten us on this point.

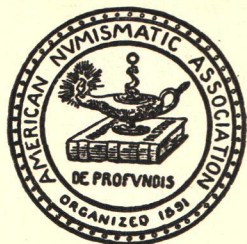

To obtain the attractive gold finish on the tombac coins after the blanks have been annealed and removed from the cold water plunging tank they are treated to a bath of various acids, and after blanching are thoroughly rinsed in cold running water and dried.

Another change in metallic content is found in the one-cent piece: prior to April 1, 1942, the proportion of tin was three per cent; on that date a reduction was made to one-half of one per cent—tin being another metal demanded in war effort. This greatly expanded the usefulness of the amount then on hand, about 4,400 pounds; on the old basis this would have been sufficient alloy for 20,500,000 pieces, but on the revised scale it met the requirements of 120,000,000.

From 1858 to 1907 the coinage of Canada was struck in England. Small amounts were struck for New Brunswick and Nova Scotia in 1861-2 and 4, and for Prince Edward Island in 1871; and for the rest of Canada throughout the period mentioned. The Royal Mint was opened at Ottawa in 1908 and has, of course, issued all Canadian coinage since. No gold coins have been struck since 1927 (with two trifling exceptions), and the only years in which silver dollars were coined were during the period of 1935 to 1939, both inclusive, the smallest output being 90,000 in 1938, and the total for the five years reaching 2,285,852.

AN UNKNOWN COIN OF JULIUS CONSTANTIUS?

1. Constantius II during his Caesarship was a youth and could not possibly have looked the way this coin's portrait indicates.
2. The great resemblance between Chlorus and the portrait on this coin, which is known to have existed between Chlorus and Julius but not between Chlorus and his grandson Constantius.
3. The period of issue, 333-337—assured by the size and weight of the coin—speaks for Julius, because it was during the last years of his brother's life that he took more interest in government affairs.

There are a few points in favor of Constantinus II, among them the fact that no similar piece has been published, to my knowledge at least. Also, the possibility of a concoction of portraits which occasionally happened at that time—although the piece in question shows more originality than a bogus portrait should possess.

The coin was dug up at Karnuntum, ancient capital of Upper Pannonia, in full view of this writer, in 1935. Those interested are cordially invited to voice their views on the subject.

THE DEMOCRACY OF NUMISMATICS

Has the democratic nature of our collecting fraternity ever been seriously considered—and appreciated—by the majority of the members? Do we realize that the American Numismatic Association is a cross-section of our citizenship? Perhaps a cross-section in miniature, comparatively speaking, but nevertheless appropriately so described. An examination of the applications for membership over any considerable period will reveal an enormously wide diversity of occupation, business and professional; and even in our own circle of friends and acquaintances among collectors one discovers not only many occupational varieties, but an equal diversification of personal background, environment, experience, tastes, and individual characteristics.

This is fortunate. The one whose natural inclination is to live pretty much to himself, either through shyness or egotism, is gradually led to realize there are values in others he would never have suspected had they not been drawn together by a common interest. Countless friendships have been formed—and maintained—through the associations made possible by contacts in local, state and national numismatic organizations. These are among the finest rewards that can possibly come from our so-called "hobby," and are likely to persist regardless of possible subsequent loss of interest here and there in active collecting. In our pursuit one collects friends as well as coins, and if friendships are a by-product, so to speak, they are nevertheless a most important one.

The democratic spirit not only fosters friendships, but recognizes the inevitable and wholesome tendency to select different fields of numismatic activity, admitting each is entitled to respect. This in spite of the natural community of interest among those who collect, for instance, Colonial coppers, or ancient Greek or Roman, or English silver, or what not; nevertheless, those who prefer Oriental pieces, or South American gold, or paper money, or medallie art are admittedly on a level of equality with the rest. Not all the fascination in the world's coinage is confined to any one series or any one period of history; and to learn something of another's interests is to deepen one's appreciation of his own.

In the administration of the affairs of our Association and of the various clubs and societies the spirit of democracy is also clearly evident. The membership of the A. N. A. has a voice in the election of its officers and Board members, even though the vast majority cannot be present at the annual conventions. Ample notice is given in advance, the ballots are sent in sealed, and not opened until the hour for election arrives. Information as to nominees is available, and no one need vote with uncertainty. Members who cannot be present to vote in person on various questions may be represented by proxy, and all the rights and privileges secured to them under the Articles and By-laws are rigidly preserved. This is no doubt also true in other organized groups of coin collectors.

And who shall say that the mutual discovery of a common interest in numismatics has no meaning for even two individuals who perhaps until that moment had been strangers? No letters of introduction, no preliminary inquiry as to financial rating, occupation, family status or ancestry enters the picture. "Who's Who" is not consulted as a prerequisite.

Yet this should not be surprising, for since democracy is so clearly evident in the groups we have considered, it ought certainly to influence the attitude of individuals who are either a part of or eligible for such groups. Occasionally there are exceptions; but unimportant.

It seems wholly reasonable to assume that the instinct to collect (coins preferred) is a natural, deep seated tendency in a large section of the human race; that when mutual recognition occurs between two or among many, a bond is established which adds immeasurably to the enjoyment of our pursuit.

Collectors are not naturally numismatic hermits, nor are they especially reticent about their possessions; and the genuine democracy which does exist among them not only emphasizes their community of interest, but encourages persistency in their chosen "hobby," and a desire to develop it intelligently and as broadly as circumstances may justify.

WARTIME CONVENTION TO TAKE FORM OF BUSINESS MEETING

(President Ferguson has submitted the following important statement which should have the thoughtful attention of all members, especially those who ordinarily would attend our conventions when held under normal conditions.—Ed.)

The Executive Committee of our Association have been carefully considering for some months our Convention for the year 1943.

In keeping with the provisions of our Constitution and By-Laws a Convention will be held. Since according to our By-Laws and Constitution, the shortest possible Convention is a three-day session, it has been decided that the opening meeting will be held on Saturday, September 11th. A short meeting will be held on Sunday, the 12th. The final business session or sessions of the Convention will take place on Monday, the 13th.

Holding the Convention in September following Labor Day will find the railroads and hotels in a slightly better condition to take care of our requirements.

It is the intention of the Executive to do nothing to stimulate attendance in keeping with the Government's wishes. Naturally, every member of the Association is eligible to attend and all those attending will be made most welcome.

While definite plans will appear in the August issue, of the NUMISMATIST, present indications are that this year's Convention will be purely a wartime business meeting to transact the necessary business of the Association. There is a possibility that there will be no social events and no exhibits.

The Chicago Coin Club has graciously changed its regular meeting night from the 1st to the 11th of September, in order to be "at home" to the members of the A. N. A. who will be visiting in Chicago on that evening. This will be a great treat in itself.

Hotel LaSalle where the Convention will be held is ideally located and the rates are very reasonable. Single rooms will be $3.30 and double rooms, $4.95. All rooms have both tub and shower. Reservations should be made early.

The Executive Committee regret most sincerely the force of international circumstances which make it appear mandatory to them in justification to the war effort to modify our usual outstanding Convention arrangements for this year to take the form of this wartime business meeting.

Since it is understood that the attendance will be much smaller this year because the Convention will be in the form of a wartime business meeting, it is the intention of the Executive Committee to not consider any major review of the By-Laws and Constitution as was originally intended. Only necessary business will be encouraged and introduced by the Executive.

It is particularly hoped that the Executive Committee and Officers for the current year, and all those nominated for these positions for the coming year, will find it possible to attend.

NEWS AND COMMENTS FROM THE LIBRARY

By TED R. HAMMER, Librarian-Curator

Circulation has held up excellently so far and we would like to see it continue through the summer, for while we are ahead of last year, we are behind the fiscal year of 1940-41. With vacations hampered by lack of travel facilities, may we suggest borrowing books from the A. N. A. library to use at home? Improve your mind, read in comfort, and save money, all at the same time. The perfect vacation, eh?

Several old friends we met at the Waterloo convention of the I. N. A. told us we went to too much trouble in bringing some 35 books up there for exhibit. But we think it was very worthwhile, just as it was at the Cincinnati convention. Main trouble was finding time to stick close enough to the library display to meet everyone. But we got two A. N. A. members there—persons who stopped because they were interested in the books and the library facilities. The new members didn't even know until after paying their 1943 dues that they also receive THE NUMISMATIST.

We have purchased a bound set of Spink's Numismatic Circular at a rare bargain. For collectors wishing information (with illustrations) on foreign coins—and in English—we know of no better sources than the Library, which now has bound volumes of THE NUMISMATIST, Coin Collectors Journal, American Journal of Numismatics, Numismatic Scrapbook, Numismatic Chronicle and Spink's Circular. There are complete indexes for the American Journal and THE NUMISMATIST. Incidentally, we understand there still are copies of the "Fifty Year Index" available at $1 a copy, and we urgently advise its purchase. If you care to look one over before buying, just drop us a card and if you wish, you may keep it as long as two weeks. Frankly (granting we're apt to be prejudiced), we think THE NUMISMATIST contains more information than any other set published.

We sent out one volume of Spink's Circular set the day we received it, on a request for something on the coins of Holland. That's service. We hope to give a more detailed review of the Circular next month.
